The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprang up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Swept into the Stream,

One Thousand Acres of Land, and "Right Smart of Bears."

On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboat stood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North: "When I was twelve years old, I killed my first bear on a new plantation my father was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acres of land went into the Mississippi years ago."

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turbid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to recklessness or ignorance the simplest thing might as well be complex as a proposition in conic sections. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the cities along their shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our ailments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs.

The most effective and inclusive remedy for disease is PARKER'S TONIC. It goes to the sources of pain and weakness. In response to its action, the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart begin their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The tonic is not, however an intoxicant, but cures a desire for strong drink. Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have refused to yield to other agents? Here is your help.

PARKER'S TONIC

Makes fast and firm friends of all who use it. Invigorates the kidneys, liver, bowels and stomach and purifies the blood. Pleases the palate, stirs the circulation and cheers the mind. To women and aged persons it imparts strength and hopefulness. The best known antidote to the liquor habit. 50c and $1 sizes.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUDGET.

A very enjoyable Sunday school entertainment was held in the Christian church, in East Ridgeway, Michigan, on Christmas night. The religious exercises consisted in a voluntary by the choir, reading the account of the Saviour's birth, as recorded in Luke 2:1-20, and prayer by the pastor, singing by the choir and Sunday school. Then followed a responsive service by Superintendent G. L. Oliver and the school, concluding which the pastor announced that a treat of sweet meats, consisting of candies, nuts, &c., would at the proper time be served to the Sunday school and all the visitors present, and the church was well filled with them, notwithstanding but little more than two days' notice thereof had been given. He then stated that these sweet meats would be brought into the audience-room by "Old Santa Claus," who, together with such persons whose names he might designate, would call the name of each member of the S. S., who would please at once respond by coming forward to the rostrum and receive what Santa Claus had to give them. This done, he and his assistants would pass through the audience of visitors and present the sweet meats he had in reserve for them. Furthermore, that the time of his starting, his mishaps on the way, and his arrival, would be announced by telegram. A telegraph office was erected in the entrance of the audience room, with Wm. Nivison and Jas. Haight as operators, and right well did they manipulate their wires, and did make those old scissors of Mrs. Wm. Thackary's most completely imitate the click of the real instrument, which, together with the reading of their several telegrams, brought hearty outbursts of laughter from that large concourse of people, children and all.

I will here give to the readers of the HERALD the first telegram, as read to that almost breathless audience:

NORTH POLE, Dec. 23, 1883.

"Will start for your place to-day. Will get there soon as I can, but can't say just when that will be, as I have very many places to call on the way."

SANTA CLAUS.

When it was announced that Santa Claus had at last arrived, and was in the vestibule awaiting the bidding of the superintendent to enter, all eyes were turned toward the entrance doors of the church, and when one of them opened and the old gentleman entered and slowly walked down the centre aisle, having on that quaint cap, unique coat, constructed out of a large new lap-robe, made of a R. M. goat-skin, that long beard and moustache, his face painted with red crayon and whitened with starch—at least so I guess and loaded down as he was with pails, baskets and paper sacks, containing his presents, and upon the whole, presenting such a grotesque appearance, as to cause that large audience to break out in vociferous applause and laughter, such as I venture to say was never heard in that chapel before.

Mr. Charles Knilfin was the Santa Claus for the occasion, and most completely did he bear his part, and that, too, as I verily believe, to the complete joy of all present, except two or three small children, who were a little frightened at his appearance. Thus passed off one among the most pleasant and interesting Sunday-school entertainments that it has ever been my province to attend, and in so saying, I believe I but speak the mind of all who were there, a single case excepted, who seemed to be gruff and displeased; so much so, that Santa Claus told him, playfully, that he would remember him when he came around next Christmas. VERITAS.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Jack Frost was one of the most noted New Year's arrivals at this place, and the way the mercury settles down, 10 degrees below zero, is sufficient evidence of his location.

The friends of the M. E. church held watch meeting New Year's eve, and continue to hold nightly services, not to watch for the incoming year, however, but for incoming sinners instead.

Our union schools commence the work of another term with as fair prospects of success as can be desired.

Elder W. N. Younglove of Sanford, this state, preached at the M. E. church last Sabbath evening. Mr. Y, is an old Addison boy, and met with a warm reception by his numerous friends here.

Workmen are busy putting in the telegraph instruments at the M. & O. station here. We also learn the passenger house is to be provided with furniture and other necessaries to accommodate the public at once.

At the last regular meeting of Addison division, S. of T., No. 182, the following officers were installed for the ensuing quarter:

W. P.—Fred. A. Smiley.
W. A.—Miss R. V. Kempton.
R. S.—Miss Grace Lombard.
A. R. S.—N. Underwood.
F. S.—Fred. Harpur.
T.—George Iveson.
Chap.—Miss Sadie Iveson.
Con.—W. J. Fry.
A. Con.—Miss Mattie Kline.
O. S.—E. P. Bryant.

The division is receiving additions to its membership roll every week, and indications are every way favorable for the success of the society.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF

Wood and coal in good demand.

Burt Rogers to Miss Dora Vansickles on 2d inst.

The I. O. G. T. did not get a quorum out last Saturday night, too cold.

Miss Jane Brighton is very sick with inflammation on the lungs, but is slowly convalescing.

W. H. Smith is confined to his bed with rheumatism.

We understand the new depot is to be called Onsted in honor of Uncle William, and that a post-office is also secured—J. E. Gibbs, P. M.

Robert Davenport, of Coldwater, was in town last Monday. He is a nephew of John Davenport, well-known by all pioneers.

On Tuesday last, while "Cap." Bloomer and Stephen Sugars, were returning from the latter's place with a load of hay, the team took a notion to run and overturned the load. The binder broke, so as to hit Mr. Sugars in the face and bruise it up considerably. Nothing further was injured or damaged.

Mrs. Frank Ayres is very sick with inflammation on the lungs, though not considered dangerous.

MACON MUSINGS.

Bradley Scudder, our new merchant, is becoming quite popular. His obliging manner and the low prices at which he sells his goods are securing for him a large trade.

Mrs. Thomas Biddle's mother and sisters are visiting her this week.

Beecher Lighthall is again in our midst. He is always welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Betser are sojourning in Ohio.

The "Corners" have always been noted for their quietness. But from the present aspect it would seem as though degeneration had set in, and already become contagious. What is the cause? Does it not lie with two or three gossippers? If these two or three would pray more and practice less hypocrisy, quiet would again reign in our midst.

BRITTON BUZZINGS.

Ben Bellows is in Toledo this week. Ben's health improving.

Miss Dora Willard, of Samaria, has been visiting at John Britton's for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Rauch, of Raisinville, are at Ed's.

R. Covell & Co. closed out their grocery, and Riley has gone up north—preaching.

Exelby Bros. have opened a feed store at R. Covell's old stand.

Bill Prindel tends target nights at the M. & O. and W. St. L. & P. R'y crossing.

Mrs. Harry Rauch has just returned from a visit to her parents, east.

The Post Office has been moved to the store of Britton & Son, and a large number of boxes added, and now presents a very neat appearance.

Ed. Pilbeam lost a number of choice young fruit trees last week by being girdled by pet rabbits. Better go hunting, Ed.

Ed. Rauch who has been suffering for several months from abscess, had an operation performed Tuesday by Drs. Stevenson and Loree, and all hope for his speedy recovery.

Right glad are we to hear "Veritas" shout for the much needed improvements hinted at in our last. We must admit that what this "V" says about the demise of the town, in case they fail to secure a grist mill, school house, &c., is true. Say, Brittonites, hunt up last week's HERALD and read that again. If you can raise two thousand dollars for a depot, raise it, and then build a school house with it. Never give any railroad company two dollars for fifty cents. The railroad companies wont let their interests in Britton suffer, neither will they build you a school building. If they need a union depot here it will be built and if the railroad companies don't need one you certainly don't. A school house, &c., are needed by you. The depot question will take care of itself, but Brittonites must take care of these other improvements. The next two years settles the question and the town out of sight unless you unite and "come up to the rack" and do something to help yourselves. There is no middle ground: whether you sink or swim depends on your own exertions.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

News items scarce this week.

Some of the younger young folks needs must imitate those of larger growth by a sleigh-ride on Wednesday evening of last week. Result: frozen ears, hands or feet, for almost all of the party, but it was a splendid time, so they say.

The M. & O. railroad passenger house will soon be finished. Remarks, anything but complimentary, are freely expressed by the management or any one that would order so fair a structure to be built on quick-sand. It is reported that A. J. Sutton, agent of the Wabash at Holloway, is to be station agent here.

It is a fact beyond a shadow of doubt that a good custom grist-mill will soon be built in Ridgeway, as the contract for the building is let to parties here, and a firm at Richmond, Ind., furnish the machinery. Those that doubt this, will please hold their breath, as it won't take long, only four months.

Evening News: A Medina family row was started because the wife refused to kiss the husband good night. Then the son knocked the father down with a bootjack, the son was fined and the wife gets out a warrant for the old man. "God bless our home" is the motto over the dining-room door.

The big storm last week seriously impeded travel on all the railroads.

Miss Rose Chester.

Mrs. Dunning, of Sunnyside, West Kensington, always considered that she had been particularly fortunate in her lodgers. She had but two, and they had been with her ever since the decease of the lamented Dunning, a clerk in the customs, who, returning home on a certain pay-day in November, with two bottles of wine in his inner coat and one in his lungs, missed his way, and walked into the Thames and was drowned. That gentleman prompted her to retire to the basement, and offer the upper portions of her house, at moderate rent, to gentlemen of quiet habits, seeking a comfortable home in a pleasant suburban neighborhood. One fine early day, after Mrs. Dunning's advertisement had appeared in the Daily Telegraph, Mr. Sam Greeley, a shady-looking clerk in a City house, came down the area steps, and, standing on the garden-door mat, inquired of Mrs. Dunning if the two-pair back was still to let, and if the terms were still what they had been. Being informed that they were, he said he would take the rooms, if Mrs. Dunning would allow him to call in a friend who was interested in the matter. Mrs. Dunning, of course, consented, and Mr. Greeley, with a light, quick step, ran up the area steps, and, closing the iron gate after him, walked briskly up the street. In a few minutes the same light, quick step was heard descending the area steps, and Mr. Wylie, a young man of about twenty-five, with a pleasant face and a slight limp in his right leg, followed Mr. Greeley into the house. The young man limped down the area steps, and followed his friend into the back parlor, where Mrs. Dunning was waiting to show them the rooms. The young man was very quiet, and seemed very much pleased with everything he saw. He was introduced to Mrs. Dunning's lodger, and, after a few minutes' chat, the young man limped up the area steps, and Mr. Greeley followed him, closing the iron gate after him. Mr. Greeley returned to Mrs. Dunning's lodgings that night, and informed her that her new lodger was a young man of good family, who had quarrelled with his friends, and was living by his wits. He was a very quiet young man, and Mr. Greeley was sure she would like him. He was out all day, and would be her lodger by proxy. Mr. Greeley was a very good-hearted fellow, and Mrs. Dunning was sure he was a good friend to his friend. Mr. Greeley was a married man, and had married his wife for love, and was happy; and he was sorry for young men who were not married, and had no homes worth the name to go to

DIPHTHERIA!

THE PROSTRATION which follows Diphtheria, and the persistency with which it clings to the patient, are well known to all who have had any experience with this terrible disease.

The following letter shows how the restoring and invigorating properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla overcome it, and how by vitalizing and enriching the blood it neutralizes and eradicates the poisoned matter from it, bringing to the convalescent the color, life and vigor of robust health.

LOWELL, MASS.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co.: Gentlemen—My little girl had the diphtheria last April. The disease left her very weak, blood poor, with no appetite, and she could not seem to rally from its effects. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA was recommended by a neighbor. After she had been taking it a few days we noticed a change for the better—she began to eat with a relish. It seemed to take out the poison the disease had left in her blood, the change being very noticeable in her face. She took it two months and fully regained her health, much to our delight. We now recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA with a great deal of pleasure. Very truly yours,

J. R. SMITH,
19 Butterfield Street.

"Pinafore" has brought a rich cargo to the composer, Mr. Gilbert. He has built him a house at Kensington which cost $250,000. It is big enough for his sisters and his cousins and his aunts.

Queensland is importing Chinese coolies to work the sugar plantations. A planter recently went to Hong Kong with a commission to engage 1,000 coolies. A capitation tax of fifty dollars has to be paid on their arrival.

The official returns show that the healthiest class of people in Great Britain are the inmates of prisons, where simple diet, regular hours, and exercise are compulsory. But the cases of insanity among the convicts are out of proportion to the number of other ailments. To commit a crime a man must be more or less mad.

Since the opening of his residence, Eaton Hall, the Duke of Westminster has charged all visitors one shilling for the privilege of inspecting it. Last week the Duke sent the whole of the proceeds from 11,200 visitors, amounting to £560, as a donation to the Chester Infirmary.

The Bishop of Monaco harangued his flock the other day upon the doings at Monte Carlo and delivered himself of this pregnant remark: "We live in a pagan locality which it is frightful to contemplate, our pontiffs are croupiers, our gods gold and silver, our vestal virgins the cocottes from all the slums of Europe, our visitors the scrapings of the world's tripots."

One very strange custom prevails among the Coreans. After nine in the evening the women are allowed to go out into the streets, the gates of the city being shut, and if any unfortunate man has been so foolish as to stay out late he has to hurry home with his eyes bent upon the ground, and should he meet any of the fair sex he covers his face with his fan and crosses the street to get out of their way.

The waiters of Rome have been loudly protesting against employment of women in restaurants and beer shops. They have published a protest which is hawked about the street. One evening recently a newsboy entered a cafe in the Plazza Colonna, and, forgetting that it was one of the strongholds of the fair attendants, began crying out "the protest." The outraged waiters rose in anger, and one strong-armed young woman seized the luckless youth by the hair and dragged him along the plazza. Sympathy goes with the women.

The Great Co-Operative Stores of London.

London has a great number of co-operative stores, of all degrees of importance and with all classes of patrons. They are nearly all, I believe, run on a modified co-operative plan. Among them are the two largest and most aristocratic stores of this kind in Great Britain, the Army and Navy Co-operative Society and the Civil-Service Supply Association. Of the former, which is, I suppose, the most extensive co-operative store in the whole world, I will give you a short description.

It occupies an immense four story block of buildings in Victoria Street, in one of the most fashionable quarters of the town, where, in an interminable maze of apartments, are kept almost every article ever offered for sale. There are, however, some things which the store does not keep. But it publishes a list of tradesmen who will furnish them to its patrons at from ten to twenty per cent. discount for cash. So that practically it keeps everything. Its price list which I have before me, is a bulky volume of 1,302 pages, handsomely printed and elegantly illustrated, and they print of this about 50,000 copies twice a year, and a monthly circular giving any changes in price that may have occurred. To attend to their vast trade, they employ 3,500 men and 200 women. From the eleventh annual balance-sheet I gather the following facts with regard to the business of the Association for the year ended January 31, 1883:

The share capital of the Association is $500,000 only, in shares of five dollars each, though its actual invested capital is very much greater, arising from deferred interest payments and the invested deposits of a savings bank, which is one of its features, and in which it pays four per cent. interest to depositors. Its receipts during the year were $10,772,108, and its net profits $202,606, or sixty-one per cent. of its share capital. We are not, therefore, surprised to hear that the market value of its five-dollar shares is $27.50. With that prudence for which great corporations are famous, a modest dividend of five per cent. only is declared, and the rest of the surplus is devoted to watering the stock, under the name "deferred bonus" There have been four such waterings of fifty per cent. each, so that the stock has been virtually trebled. The number of shareholders is 15,035, and the number of shares held by any one person is limited to 500. Only officers of the army and navy are eligible to become shareholders, but persons introduced by them and approved of by the Board of Directors may become "subscribers"—that is, be allowed to purchase goods. Of these there are no less than 26,859—not quite twice the number of shareholders. They have no share in the profits, and pay $1.25 the first year and sixty-two cents a year thereafter for the privilege of trading.

It should be mentioned that the Association has lately extended its enterprise to manufacturing for itself many of the articles which it sells. Last year it made the following articles to the value of $743,870: Guns, traps, portmanteaus, tin goods of all kinds, fancy woollen goods, printed goods, stamped goods, shirts, perfumery, and watches. It is managed by very wide-awake business men, and is constantly extending the sphere of its usefulness. Its success is almost phenomenal, yet its officers declare that it is simply the legitimate result of a large business done without credit.—Cor. N. Y. Post.

Chinese Science.

From ancient times the Chinese have taken note of natural phenomena. Their record of solar eclipses is perhaps the most ancient and accurate in the world. They have more or less elaborate works on astronomy, mathematics, botany, zoology, mineralogy, physiology and many other sciences. Yet there is scarcely any true science in them. Classification, even in regard to plants and animals, there is none. Mineralogy is mainly a description of curious stones. Nor is there any progress, for the more ancient works are generally the best, and as a consequence the Chinese to-day are as their fathers were thousands of years ago. The superstitions respecting natural phenomena, which are as living active truths to-day for all classes in China, remind us rather of man in his state of barbarism than of the ancient culture and civilization of the Middle Kingdom. The sun and the moon are to the Chinese as they were to primitive man, living things, gods to be worshiped. The stars in their courses powerfully influence, if they do not absolutely determine, all events in the world. In the stars they read as in a book the destiny of men and the fate of empires. Their combinations make lucky and unlucky days, and we shall do well to note carefully these signs and silent warnings. Comets are the precursors of famine, pestilence and war, prognostications of the wreck of empires and the fall of Kings. Eclipses are the periodic efforts of the dragon fiend to destroy the lights of heaven and every notice of an approaching eclipse sent by the Imperial astronomer to the Provinces is accompanied by a Government order to employ the usual methods of gong-beating and so forth in order to rescue the threatened luminary. Again, thunder is the roar of the anger of heaven, and to be smitten by a thunderbolt is to be marked as a thing accursed. Wind is born in the heart of great mountains, whence it issues at the command of the "wind god." Most districts have their wind mountains. That at Lung-Shan in the northern Province of Chihli is the most remarkable. It has a cave at each of its four sides. The Spring wind issues from the cave on the eastern side, the Summer wind from the southern, and so for the others. Wind eddies or whirlwinds are raised by the hedgehog in his rapid passage from one place to another, the dust serving to screen him from the vulgar gaze. Rain is produced by the dragon god, who carries up vast quantities of water from the lakes and rivers in his capacious jaws, and pours it down in showers over the earth. Every mountain has its spirit or genius, every valley its nymph, every spring its naiad. Hence mountains and rivers, old trees and curious rocks, become objects of worship.—Nature.

A King as a Brute.

I have heard Mr. Leitch relate many curious incidents which fell under his notice when at Rome at this time. Of the following I have his own account in writing:

"Among my pupils was Lady Ogle, wife of Admiral Sir Charles Ogle. She was a Roman Catholic, and frequently, when I was giving a lesson, she would be visited by ladies of her acquaintance, including many of the Italian nobility. On one of these occasions the servant announced 'la Principessa Colonna.' She sat down opposite where I was painting, and she and Lady Ogle had a good deal of conversation. Although I knew Italian I paid little attention to what they were saying till the Princess, getting excited, used the words 'infame' and 'bestia,' and I observed Lady Ogle look surprised and ask her friend to tell her all about it. 'I was present,' said the Princess, 'and saw it all,' and then she proceeded to relate the following, which I translate as nearly as I can in her own words:

"'You must know that when the King (Ferdinand II., "Bomba") married the Sardinian Princess at Turin, he stayed for a day or two in Rome on his return to Naples, and his Holiness (Gregory XVI.) was graciously pleased to pay his Majesty a visit of congratulation. On the occasion a very select party was got together at the Neapolitan Ambassador's, consisting of cardinals, monsignori, and some of the old noble families. The Pope was very gracious to the new Queen. He had heard of her musical accomplishments, and especially of her great interest in church music, and as she said she was devoted to Marcello, his Holiness asked if she would have the kindness (gentilezza) to sing his favorite, No. 28 of the Psalms. The Queen replied that to do so would be a great honor. In the meantime the King, her husband, was sitting by, sulky, silent and gloomy, with his elbow resting on the piano. The Queen turned to him and said playfully that he must turn the leaves for her. For answer His Majesty of the Two Sicilies rose and kicked the stool from below the Queen, who fell heavily on the marble floor. I need not tell you, dear Lady Ogle, of the scene which followed. The King immodately left without speaking. The poor Queen was carried to a bed-room, and I took my departure, when two great doctors, who had been hastily sent for, arrived. I heard that the Pope was terribly shocked.'"—Good Words.

A woman who had an interview with Patti claims to have turned the conversation from the singer's delight at being back in America, and even from her recollections of her castle in Wales, to the feminine topic of millinery. "Positively, the loveliest bonnet I saw in Paris," she said, "was a myrtle green velvet, trimmed with delicate red and green plumage. Wings of little birds were placed erect all over the crown, making it look just ready to fly right off one's head. And, oh, yes, the brim was finished off with what I believe they call a bouillonne of velvet. Loops of ribbon were interspersed with the wings, and a cockade was on one side. It was too sweet for anything. Who wore it? Why, I bought it, of course."—N. Y. News.

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprang up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff, instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name, or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Swept Into the Stream.

One Thousand Acres of Land and "Right Smart of Bears."

On the dark alleg Mississippi stands at stood an aged Southern planter, outlying by a sweep of his arm the waters that was passing over, in said to a passenger from the North: "When I was twelve year old, I killed my first bear on a new plantation yon. Other was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acres of land went into the Mississippi years ago."

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, rapid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests, the most precious of which is health. That zone, although the disease is simple, but to recklessness of ignorance the simplest thing might as well be complex as a proposition in Euclid. Such diseases. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the cities along their shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our ailments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs.

The most effective and inclusive remedy for disease is PARKER'S TONIC. It goes to the sources of pain and weakness. In response to its action, the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart begin their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The tonic is not, however, an intoxicant, but cures a desire for strong drink. Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have refused to yield to other agencies? Here is your help.

PARKER'S TONIC

Makes fast and firm friends of all who use it. Invigorates the kidneys, liver, bowels and stomach and purifies the blood. Pleases the palate, stirs the circulation and cheers the mind. To women and aged persons it imparts strength and hopefulness. The best known antidote to the liquor habit. 50c and $1 sizes.

SNOWED UNDER.

Two Passenger Trains on the M. & O. Road in a Snow Bank All Night.

The M. & O. road has had its first experience in fighting snow drifts. It was duly initiated into the mysteries of this business during the storm of last week. John Cupples left Monroe on the eastern bound passenger train Wednesday, and came through on that same train, which arrived at Tecumseh about ten o'clock Friday night. From him we learn the particulars. The train encountered several heavy drifts between Monteith and Marshall, and did not reach the latter place until Thursday, late in the day. It then started east again and a few miles from Marshall ran into a big snow drift and stopped. In the meantime, the western bound train, which left Toledo Thursday morning, reached the same snow drift and halted. Neither train could get out, and there they remained all night. Friday morning the passengers on board went to a neighboring farm-house and got their breakfast. A gang of shovelers was brought in from Marshall, who shoveled out one train, and the other one then pushed through the drift. Both trains then went back to Marshall for a supply of wood and water, and the eastern train then took a new start, and came through without any further serious stop, although some heavy drifts were found at several places. As soon as the weather becomes milder, another passenger train will be put on the road.

The proceedings of the annual meeting of the Presbyterian society of this village reach us too late for convenient publication in the present number of our paper. It was an occasion of unusual interest, especially by the recognition of the extended and very acceptable services of Judge LeBarron as clerk of the society, whose resignation was received, and also resolutions of appreciation and obligations to Mr. John S. Strong for his long services as chorister of the church. The full proceedings will appear in our next number.

Dr. Catlin went to Adrian one day last week to collect his dues for the job of attending the township poor. After getting his money, he stepped into Reed's drug store to make a purchase. Upon arriving home he had occasion to look into his pocket-book and found himself minus a ten dollar gold piece. He telephoned over to Reed, who struck up a search and soon found the missing eagle snugly hid under the counter scales. Was this a fair judgment upon the doctor for his violation of the national code?

Instead of holding prayer meetings each evening in the lecture room, preaching services are held in the audience room. Rev. L. Kirtley, of Jackson, the preacher. The attendance is large and the meetings are becoming more interested for their deep religious power. Kirtley will remain over Sunday, when C. E. Conley supplying his place at Jackson. All are welcome.

OUR FESTIVE OLD BACHELORS.

What They Think of Leap Year Prospects and Matrimonial Matters in General.

A reporter of the HERALD started out last week to interview the old bachelors in and around Tecumseh, and ascertain their views in regard to leap year and the matrimonial prospects. He found some good natured and talkative, others cross and crusty, but taking them all in all, we believe they will compare favorably with the old bachelors of any other town. Listen to what they say.

William Totten.—They can't catch me. I have enough to live on and enjoy life. I have no corsets to buy for the woman or soothing syrup for the baby. I am perfectly satisfied as I am.

Dr. B. F. Snyder.—If you'll promise to keep mum I'll tell you my views.—The fact is I am open to conviction. Filling will be done this year for old maids at half rates and warranted to stay.

S. C. Stacy.—Don't bother me. I am giving my whole attention now to the study of the first edition. When that subject is mastered, I shall be ready for anything that turns up.

William DeMott.—Well, I have a ten thousand dollar policy on my life in the old Northwestern, and a five thousand dollar endowment that will fall in next summer. Let 'em come on.

O. P. Bills.—I can give you my views, sir, in a nut shell. I wouldn't object to a matrimonial investment if it was properly secured with good collaterals, but I've got beyond the time of life when a man feeds away any time or money in courting.

John Smith.—Hush. Keep shady. I've got a bite already.

Isaac Wolcott.—They can't scare me. I can put up a new house from cellar to garret in sixty days and that's as soon as a modern young lady can get her wedding gear ready. Don't I look serene?

Irve S. Osborne.—Jerusalem. Has leap year come again. How I was pestered during last leap year. And it doesn't seem more than three months since the close of 1880. I shall petition the next legislature to revise the almanac and fix leap year once in eight years.

Joe Sage.—I have been running the best dancing parties in the county of Lenawee for the past two years, preparatory to 1884. I am small but spunky, diminutive but determined. Let 'em propel.

Hank Marsh.—I've tacked brick for Comfort for the past forty years, and expect to stay with him forty years more. No petticoat in mine, if you please.

Newberry Satterthwaite.—Young man, you do me honor. I have always considered myself proof against female charms; and yet, if a pretty blonde, with ruby lips, and deep blue eyes, and rosy cheeks, clad in pink satin, with a red rose in her hair, should formally propose, heaven only knows what I should do.

Thos. Aichen.—How ye comin' on? Bad luck till the woman what tries to pop on me. Shtop a bit. If she is a pretty creature and owns a big flock of poultry, I'm afraid I'd be too much of a gintleman to say no.

Edward Bardwell.—I've been selling tally and chewing gum for the past five years, and have had more chances than you can shake a stick at; but I must ease 'em along through leap year. If I should pick out one and marry her I should lose the custom of more'n a hundred.

Ab. Usborne.—If a girl tackles me, I shall take to the woods.

Theodore Crane.—Well, really, you embarrass me. I hardly know what to say. Stair rails and fancy mantels are my forte, but I know nothing about the cradle business. I take life philosophically, however, and shall meet my fate calmly, whatever it may be.

E. H. Barrows.—I never struck a town with more pretty girls than Tecumseh, and I shall take the types here for a few months longer. The girls all know where my car is located. Old maids' pictures will be touched up with red checks by a new patent process.

Peter S. McKinney.—In my experience I have found it extremely difficult to win the affections of a lady who has an income of ten thousand a year. But if such a woman should wish to avail herself of the privileges of leap year in my presence, I can predict the result. "If the court knows herself, and she thinks she does," I should plead guilty and swear out an attachment on the spot.

Jay Santus.—I am bullet proof at present, sir. Honor and business before pleasure, you know. I have to walk to Adrian once a week and to Tecumseh the same to keep alive my township clerk contest. After next April fool day I may be open to a bid.

LAND OF SUNSHINE.

SORRENTO, FLA., Dec. 31, 1883.

DEAR HERALD:

A Happy New Year to all.

It does not seem like winter. I have been setting out cabbage plants and planting water melon seeds to-day. When I look around and see the roses and other flowers in full bloom, and "listen to the mocking bird," I cannot make myself believe that the thermometer was 13° below zero at Boston one week ago to day, as I was told by a gentleman just from there. We are now in our own house, that is Bert and myself, living by ourselves. Fortunate for us that we learned to cook, for we are now living on $4 per week instead of paying $8 to $10 for our board. We have the ground all ready for our orange trees, and when we are blessed with rain again we will set the trees. We have had no rain here since Oct. 28, excepting one shower that indicated in my rain gauge one twentieth of an inch rain fall, which was a little more than a heavy dew, such as we have nearly every night, which helps vegetation along all right. Now as I write seated comfortably by our own fire place, minus fire, with both doors open.—thermometer at 70°. I am without a coat, for I would be too warm with one on. I pity poor, dear shivering ones at home, and only wish that all old come to Florida to spend the winter. I am daily looking for some of my Tecumseh friends here, and hope they will come, for we are beginning to look upon them as old settlers. We have a good frame house, with five rooms, and can accommodate a few more. We have plenty that is wood to cook with, so we can "get." Potatoes are worth $2.50, eggs 40, groceries about the same as at the North, but meat is plentiful and cheap. Oranges 25c. per dozen or $1.50 per hundred. We can have game by getting it such as venison, duck, squirrel, quail and fish. Wild bear come up to our place from their retreat which is a thick place of wood and cane, one mile from us. On Saturday before Christmas we went out and got some birds. So you see we had a baked duck for our dinner. Fla. is a fine and we will count with you on a bag a few, and in March we will treat you to new orleans and point us and give you a ride through the pine woods all over the country. There is one vast park, with lakes and the most beautiful lake of clear, fresh, wholesome water. Ever running and never stagnant even after a protracted dry spell as we are now having. The fever on the lake is not the most pleasant, and now my place rest at night, get on this hotel, as we are so lonely but we have large sea we are seldom troubled with them. As for snakes, I have seen two in three and they were harmless. A few small scorpions now and then, but their sting is as a bee no more, but I never could get used to a bee sting without its attracting my attention.

This country is a prosperous one. Land is cheap now, but will soon advance. Every day brings new comers in here, and one by one lots are being taken. 160 acres, 3 miles from town, sold the other day for $40 per acre; five and ten acre lots, within a mile of the post office, are selling for $25 per acre, which is a bargain for any one. It is the best of orange land, is located as pleasantly and is as healthy a location as can be found in Florida. It costs but little to clear the land, and when you have it set out to orange trees you will in time have a grove worth $800 per acre, and within seven or eight years at most. The orange crop is very good this season, some groves paying as high as $800 per acre for the fruit, $200 clear of all expenses. Then, why not have an orange grove? Every man in Lenawee county can have one. He can secure the land, five acres is all he wants. There are good and responsible men here that will engage to clear the land, set out the trees and take care of the grove until it comes into bearing, at less than half of what the grove will be worth when it comes into bearing. Then, after that a wealthy income for a period of 40 years. This is what actual experience has shown in Florida. One tree 40 years old yielded this year $5 worth of oranges, at 5 cents each. Now if you have 50 such trees to the acre what an income you would have. This is no imaginary picture for a proof is at hand. Write or come and see. I will be glad to answer all questions or letters of inquiry from any of my friends in Lenawee county.

Bert is well and happy now having received his lot of choice chickens from H. T. Dunn, of Tecumseh. He will have company when I leave for home in the spring. As for climate, this is far ahead of California. The thermometer ranged from 50° to 70° at noon during the past two weeks, 40° to 60° in the morning. The coldest this month 30° on the 19th inst.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

Another happy anniversary! This time it is the "silver wedding," and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Ide are the happy subjects. Really it does inspire us with hope in these days of divorce, to find some pulling together in life's voyage for 25, 40, and even 50 years. Mr. and Mrs. Ide are to be congratulated on their good fortune. They have not only completed 25 years of happy married life, but they have friends whose love can be subjected to a temperature 15 degrees below zero, and yet flourish, like a "green bay tree." Their anniversary fell on last Friday evening, Jan. 4. Those who were out on that evening realized that old winter has not relaxed his grip, however lately he may have been in picking his appearances. But in spite of the cold, a goodly company gathered at the residence of the happy couple, bringing many shining tokens of love and good will with them. Once there they forgot the cold in the glow of happy faces, warm hearts, and a large hot stove. A bountiful collation [illegible] social enjoyment. Several who had expected to be present from Dundee could not come on account of irregularity in trains, caused by the storm. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wilkinson sent as their representative a beautiful silver spoon holder, which was received the next day. OBITUARY.

CONKLING.—At Tecumseh, Mich., on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 9th, 1883, Mr. Samuel G. Conkling, aged 87.

Fifty-one years ago, in the prime of his early manhood, Mr. Conkling [illegible] from Orange county, N. Y., to Michigan. He came with his family and settled in the Raisin Valley, which he owned and improved. He was a man of brave and [illegible] character, of great integrity, a Christian gentleman. He and his honorable wife met and surmounted the hardships incident to the pioneer life with courage and with [illegible]. A family of eight children were born to them, six of whom survive to testify to the [illegible] with which they performed the duties of life. Two of the sons, Hudson and Henry, are still well known and respected residents of this place. The latter has been for many years a member of the church in Tecumseh, Mich., and was made an elder, an office which he discharged with faithfulness and acceptance as long as his strength permitted, and which he held by the expressed wish of the church until his death. For 15 years previous to his death Mr. Conkling lived in town, the last seven with his son Henry. Longer lived one of less energy and will power would have yielded to advancing infirmities and remained at home. His form was a familiar one on our streets, and he was seen walking or driving and manifesting the activity of a much younger man. All have lost in him an upright, useful, respected fellow citizen. The Presbyterian church has lost a valued member. The children who survive him have lost a father who has left them the precious legacy of a good name, and whose memory they tenderly cherish. W. H. B.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Modern Science and Skepticism

What has Skepticism done for the world?

Nothing but to suggest doubts. It has even suggested that the Liquors cannot be cured, skepticism is as bad as Rheumatism.

What has Science done for the world?

A good many things. For instance, it has shown that Rheumatism can be cured.

It has shown that Nervous Weakness can be got rid of. Modern Science has proved that Rheumatism is a blood disease, and has produced a preparation for the remedy which before everything cures it.

It has proved that although the old doctors failed to cure even Noah's gout, Asia's nervous headache, Africa's dyspepsia, Europe's rheumatism, and Adam's catarrh, these can be driven from the system.

It has proved that Chronic Diseases, Lingering Diseases, Diseases that do not show any dangerous symptoms, but which undermine the constitution, and which, if not cured, will sap the life blood, can be overcome in a little while by the use of Athlophoros!

Don't be skeptical. If you have any doubts as to what Athlophoros will do, write to some of those who have used it. For instance, Rev. S. R. Uselessness of Men on the Verge of Matrimony.

"When a young man gets the craze on," an ancient spinster said recently, "he is good for nothing except his girl. His mind runs on his charmer, his friends are bored to death with the narration of her perfections; the postman of her district swears mentally as he leaves her two or three letters a day; married relatives are annoyed with his frequent questioning in regard to the cost of housekeeping. In fact, when a youth has a craze on, as I say, he is good for nothing. If you want him to take you anywhere he has a rendezvous engagement. We all know that it is same appointment, but he maintains an air of mysterious superiority comical in the extreme. If he quarrels with his girl he comes home in the blues, and the next morning appears at the breakfast table surly and cross, looking seemingly on all womankind as mortal enemies. They are no good when in that condition; and the sooner they get married the better. Why girls marry, though, I can't see. I wouldn't tag myself on to the best man in the world really now. I wouldn't, for I think they are horrid mean anyhow. They are perfect fools—the more flighty a girl is the quicker they are caught, and if there are two or three after the same [illegible] thing on, bother out. I wouldn't have any of them looking to me for care and comfort," she said, as she edged her chair closer to the reporter to impress the fact on him.

"Come, aunty," said Gus, a member of the family, "you know that when you were young you had more beaux coming to the house in one evening than any of the girls of the present day have in a week." The old lady laughed merrily as she gazed fondly at her nephew. "Perhaps I was foolish when I was young, but if the Morning Mirror representative wants a good account of an intense courtship and marriage, I leave him to you. Tell him the truth, Gus," the old lady said, as she left the room with a merry twinkle in her eyes.

"Well, I declare," said the victim, "I suppose I am in for it. When I commenced courting I was as crazy as the rest of them. I visited my girl nightly, and wrote her at least once a day. It is true, I often did come home in the blues, for all women have the habit of teasing and tormenting a man, and the more devoted he is the more they tease him. However, it is pleasure for them, and I suppose they enjoy putting their beaux on the rack, as they seem to like to feel the power they have over them. Courtships, however, I think are pretty much all the same the world over, but I tell you as the wedding day approaches the young man gets nervous. He has all the arrangements to make with the minister. His tailor occupies a great deal of attention, for the wedding suit, you know, must be faultless. A single wrinkle will raise a bubbub, and even if the suit is made to perfection it hardly satisfies the expectant groom. It generally takes the united persuasive powers of the groom's friends, the tailor and his assistants to prove to the young man that the suit is becoming and without a flaw.

"At last the day arrives. The ceremony is probably set down for four or five o'clock. In order to get ready in time, the expectant groom arises at five in the morning. Ten to one on dressing he finds that he has sent all his new things to his future bride's house to be packed in the trunk for the wedding trip. He is naturally angry, and, desiring to wear entirely new clothing, awakes one of his sympathizing relatives and sends him out for an outfit. When it comes it may be too large and it may be too small. It has to answer, however. Dressed, the young man hastens to a florist's and sends his future wife and the best lady flowers enough to decorate a parlor almost. Then he goes to hunt up his best friend to make sure that he won't fail him. He is astonished to see his friend so cool about it, and thinks his friendship not sincere. Finally the hour comes and the young couple are united. A reception is tendered them and then they depart for their train, followed by an avalanche of dilapidated shoes and expressions of good will. If the young man is wise he has arranged his wedding trip in advance and has secured his railroad tickets. Here is where I could give some good advice to your interested inquirers. Many people start out and go to Niagara or Saratoga, and in one week spend a sum of money sufficient to last them for a month's trip. How to do the thing and have a first-class time is what the uninitiated want to find out. I could tell of a reasonable trip for seven weeks and it did not cost me over $600. I could have easily saved $300 of that and had a good time, but I invested in various Canadian goods, and by the way this is a great foolishness. Don't do it."—N. Y. Morning Journal.

Railroad Time.

He stood at the ticket window, slowly unrolling an old-fashioned leather wallet, while a dozen impatient men stood behind him, driven to madness by the shouting of the gateman calling their trains. After he got about a yard and a half of wallet unrolled he suddenly stopped and said to the ticket agent:

"Is that clock right?"

"No, sir," promptly replied the agent.

"'Tain't?" shouted the startled passenger, stooping down and making a sudden clutch at a lean and hungry carpet-bag. "'Tain't right? Well, what in the name o' common sense do ye have it stuck up there for, then?"

"To fool people," calmly replied the agent, "that's what we're here for, to fool people and misdirect them."

"Well, by gol," said the passenger, hurriedly rolling up his wallet, "then I've missed my train. I'll report you [illegible] and it does him good to see a man prance around and hear him jaw when he buys a ticket and then finds his train has been gone two hours. It saves him the expense of going to the circus."

"Which way is the clock wrong," the passenger asked in despairing accents, "fast or slow?"

"Don't know," replied the agent. "That's part of the fun, not to let any one in the building know anything about the right time. All that I know is that its about ninety minutes wrong, one way or the other."

With a hollow groan the passenger dropped his carpet bag and wallet and made a rush for the door, upsetting every man who got in his way. In about two minutes he came back, crestfallen and meek, and took his place at the end of the line. When once more he walked up to the window, he said, as he named his station and bought his ticket like a sane man:

"What made you talk to me like a liar?"

"What made you ask questions like a fool?" answered the ticket man, and they glared at each other for a second, and then the passenger went his way, a madder, but probably not a wiser, man. For although the time-pieces at a railway station are always as nearly accurate as code and electricity can make them, and all the trains come and go by them, yet there are thousands of men and women in this land of free schools, who, whenever they travel, never fail to ask the ticket-seller, station-master, usher and gateman, one after another if "that clock is right?"—Buffalo Express.

An Auctioneer's Miss.

Soon after an auction store on Monroe avenue had opened for business the other morning an old farmer and his wife dropped in and began inspecting goods. The auctioneer thereupon mounted his box and began:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I desire to call your attention to this sample pair of suspenders. Who starts them at fifteen cents?"

"Did you hear him call me a lady," whispered the woman to her old man.

"And he called me a gentleman," replied the husband, as he grinned his delight.

"Who says fifteen cents to start 'em going? Who says? Who says? You can't buy 'em anywhere else in the world for half a dollar! Don't wan't 'em, eh? Very well; here's a hat which was never made for less than seventy cents. Who starts it at a quarter—a quarter a quarter? Ladies and gentlemen, who bids?"

"Called me a lady again!" cackled the woman, as she nudged her husband.

"Yes, but he bore on pretty heavy when he said gentlemen," replied the man.

"I guess he knows a lady when he sees her!" she tartly remarked.

"Perhaps he does, and perhaps it's all soft-soap. Don't be stuck up."

"Or, perhaps you want a watch," continued the auctioneer. "Let me show you a reliable time-keeper which cost $8 by the dozen. Who starts it at $4? Ladies and gentlemen, let me hear a bid!"

"That's three times he has called me a lady," grinned the woman. "I've allus told yer I was just as much a lady as if I lived in the city."

"He's soft-soaping."

"I don't believe it."

"Of course he is. Have you got silks and jewelry and white hands and a gay bonnet? You ain't no lady, and you orter know it!"

"Then you ain't no gentleman!"

"Yes, I am! He bore on when he said it. He said ladies just because that begins the sentence."

"So you don't want a watch?" queried the man on the box. "All right—all right. What you don't want don't buy. Here's a bankrupt stock of table linen, and over there is a box of cowhide boots at your own price. Will the lady step this way while the man examines the boots?"

"There, there," gasped the woman, he means me, and he called me a lady!"

"Yes, and bust his pictur', he called me a man!" growled the husband. "Susan, come along!"

"Where to?"

"Out of this!"

"Oh, no!"

"You jog! If you don't come along you'll foot it home! When an auctioneer begins to soft-soap a gentleman's old woman and insult the gentleman himself it's time to go, towels or no towels!"

"My dear friends—ladies and gentlemen—" called the auctioneer, but he was too late. The man marched out, head erect, and shoulders up, and the wife followed with her finger in her mouth and a coy, pleased look on her face.—Detroit Free Press.

A Comedy of Errors.

In a homeward bound Bay View car the other evening sat four passengers contiguous to each other—two middle-aged ladies, a gentleman of about the same stage of life, and a young girl. They were evidently all strangers. Now, it happened as a curious coincidence that the three first mentioned passengers were the possessors of a bundle each, in size and appearance almost exactly alike; and, somehow or other, these packages had all got together. One of the ladies alighted, forgetting in her haste her parcel, but was soon reminded of the fact by the accommodating young lady, who handed a parcel to her, with which she hurried off, thankfully. When the car had traversed a couple of blocks the other lady made the horrifying discovery that her bundle was the one which the first had taken. The car was stopped in short order, and, with a withering look at her young fellow-passenger, she seized what she supposed was the first lady's parcel and started in pursuit of the town. The car rattled on another block, when the gentleman, who had been smiling sweetly to himself at the incident just transpired, suddenly dropped his smile, for he had discovered that his bundle had been appropriated by the second lady. There was no other passenger the less on that car than another addition to the mixed up collection of people and bundles; but neither car or its passengers did not stop to inquire particulars, the sequel to this incident is not known.—Boston Traveller.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left me before I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,
Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

A man with a stitch in his side can only feel so-so.

Don't Spill the Milk.

"There is no use crying over spilled milk," says the old saw. If you are not only bald, but have no life in the roots of your hair, there is no use crying over that either. Take both time and yourself by the forelock while there is a forelock left. Apply Parker's Hair Balsam to your hair before matters get worse. It will arrest the falling off of your hair and restore the original color, gloss and softness. It is a perfect dressing withal, clean, richly perfumed, cools and heals the scalp.

Humor in the Stomach,

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhoea and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statements of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

The timely possession of a couple of bottles of Athlophoros enabled Rev. J. E. Sentman, St. Paris, Champaign Co., Ohio, to do quite a work as Good Samaritan in his neighborhood. He writes respecting it: "Athlophorus has proved highly satisfactory to me. One lady who was confined to her bed with rheumatism was relieved in twenty-four hours after beginning to take it, and has not had a return of the disease. Numerous inquiries have been made of me for the remedy."

AM I A SCOT, OR AM I NOT?

If I should bring a wagon over
From Scotland to Columbia's shore,
And by successive wear and tear
The wagon soon should need repair:
Thus, when the tires are worn through,
Columbia's iron doth renew;
Likewise the felloes, hubs and spokes
Should be replaced by Western oaks;
In course of time down goes the bed,
But here's one that it is its great;
So bit by bit, in seven years,
All things are changed in bed and gears,
And still it seems as strange it ought
To be the one from Scotland brought;
But when I think the matter o'er,
It never was a foreign shore,
And all that came across the sea
Is only its identity.

I came, a Scotchman, and understand,
It's choice, to live in this free land,
Wherein I've dwell, from day to day,
Till sixteen years have passed away.
Physiology be true,
My body has been changed, too;
And though at first it did seem strange,
Yet Science doth confirm the change;
And since I have the truth been taught,
I wonder if I'm now a Scot,
Since all that came across the sea
Is only my identity.

—William Taylor, in Scientific American.

A SOCIETY OF YOUNG THIEVES.

A curious discovery of a secret society was made in this city last week. It was composed of clerks in retail grocery stores, who were pledged to steal from their employers one hundred and twenty-five dollars apiece each month. The sum was paid over to the treasurer of the society, and divided among the members according to certain rules. Sometimes an amount equal to two thousand five hundred dollars was given to any one who was going into business for himself. This society has been in existance less than a year, and after leading to the failure of one or two firms, suspicion was excited which led to discovery. The confession of some of these rascals may be followed by the conviction of all of them. This is their ruin in all probability. They have made shipwreck of character before they are twenty-one years of age.

There are conditions of life in which children grow up to be thieves. Such are their surroundings scarcely anything else can be expected. But when boys have attained to such an age as to become clerks in stores, and have had education and training to justify a tradesman in intrusting them with goods and money in a store, it seems at first view incredible that an organized fraternity could exist among them for the express purpose of robbing their employers. And what a degree of depravity it discloses: far more base than the burglar or highway robber. This stealing involves a meanness and ingratitude which are not among the peculiar sins of one who breaks into a rich man's house or knocks him down in the street. To betray a trust, to steal from one's parent or employer, taking advantage of confidence reposed, is a crime of such baseness as to incur contempt as well as indignation. It is smiting the hand that feeds; a serpent stinging the bosom that warms it into life.

I am told, and recent revelations justify the statement, that every department of business and trade, especially of public business where money is handled, is more or less filled with agents who in one way or another manage to get more than their wages. In other words, many of them are thieves. It is very hard to prove it on any one in particular. The ingenuity of lawyers and detectives is taxed to the utmost to find out who has been stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars from the city during a long series of years. It is going on at this moment in all human probability. A society of young thieves, perhaps of old thieves, may be in existence, perhaps has existed many years, in which the members play into one another's hands, cover up tracks, and render detection almost impossible. There must be some secret affinity between rogues which helps them to know each other at first sight, so that they can trust one another with the fearful secret of their guilt. There is little honor among thieves—they know this very well, and hence must be careful how they put themselves into the power of one who may betray them at the first moment of danger, or on the first awakening of conscience. So they are hedged about with difficulties and beset with foes within and without.

The usual excuse made for the members of this society of young thieves is that their wages are so low that they are tempted to steal. This, of course, is no justification of their crime. But it is worthy of the careful attention of employers. To oppress a laborer is as great a sin as to steal, and it may be that employers who give "starvation" wages are responsible in part for the sins of those who are driven by stress of circumstances to help themselves to money which is not theirs. Yet it is not probable that one in ten thousand of the host of thieves, peculators in stores and offices, steals to get bread. They steal that they may consume it on their lusts. The young man who earns only enough to get food and raiment may, by strict attention to business, making himself indispensable to his employer, secure before long an increase of pay. But if he spends a few cents a day for some useless indulgence, if he treats himself and a friend to entertainments in the evening, if he joins with others in frolics which cost only a little money at a time, he very readily consumes a large part of his scant income increases his longing for more, weakens his moral principle, parleys with temptation, and joins a society of young thieves, or becomes a thief on his own hook. The way to ruin is very smooth and down-hill always. It is full of travelers. Apt to stop while going down-hill is hard.

Is there no balm in Gilead? No remedy for this state of things? Well, I would say, in the first place, there always was a similar state of things, not so bad perhaps as just now. But pickings and stealings always were the prey of those who are intrusted with other people's goods. In many a store a clerk learns to steal by seeing that his employer cheats his customer. If the boy clerk is taught to adulterate the goods, to mix poor flour with good, it is not strange that he learns to cheat and steal for himself. It was an old maxim of a pious tradesman, which has been often repeated. The grocer calls to his clerk: "Have you sanded the sugar?" "Yes." "Have you watered the rum?" "Yes." "Well, then, come into prayers." This is designed to insinuate that the grocer is a great hypocrite. And there are thousands on thousands of honest tradesmen whose shops and stores are schools of the virtues, where young men are taught by a goodly example that to be just, upright and true in trade is lovely in the sight of God, and yields the fruit of righteousness in the life. And we know that the tricks of the trade are also such in many and many a shop or store that the clerk is a pupil in a school of vice, trained to cheat and lie, and of course learns to steal. I would like to know how many of the employers of these dishonest clerks are themselves honest? In which of the stores is no advantage taken of the ignorance of a customer? Which one sells only at a fair profit? never deceives in regard to the name or quality of the tea or coffee sold? Now the sin of the employer is no excuse for the sin of the clerk, but the sin of the one prepares for the sin of the other. The teacher was first in transgression: the latter readily followed the bad example.

Let the young man also learn this lesson: it was put in writing several thousands of years ago, and has been proved to be true in millions of instances since: it is written in the proverbs of the wisest of men, in these words: "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished." And it often happens that the joining hand in hand, forming a society, hastens the discovery and punishment. Bad people are not to be trusted. Conspirators are often traitors. And no evil secret is safe. Even murder cries out of the ground. There is no place on or under the earth where you can hide a sin and be sure of its staying hid. It is known to two persons the moment it is done. Darkness and light are both alike to Him whose all-seeing eye is on you. And that mysterious inmate of your bosom, called conscience, sits there to accuse and condemn. God is working all the while to bring you to repentance, and Conscience commands you to confess and restore. Thus the two fearful witnesses of your sin are against you, and will infallibly bring you to punishment. In vain you run away. You carry your judge and executioner with you; and as you run I hear you cry: "Which way I fly is hell; myself am hell."

"Run, speak to that young man," is an ancient direction. I am trying to obey it. Would to God that young men everywhere would hear and heed.

—"Irenæus," in N. Y. Observer.

Quickness and Talent.

Quickness is frequently confounded with talent. Lord Eldon is said to have remarked, when blamed for "the law's delays," that slow justice was preferable to swift injustice; but to many persons few grievances are more intolerable than delay. The slow but accurate thinker will rarely attain the same popular reputation for ability that attaches to the swift though often mistaken reasoner.

Yet even great minds are rarely at the same time hasty and accurate. Napoleon was gifted with extraordinary quickness of perception, and owed most of his early successes to the swift and unexpected tactics with which he broke through the old extraordinary methods of conducting campaigns. Quick himself, he detested slowness in others, and was impatient if any one he questioned hesitated a moment in reply. Cuvier complained that he lost the Emperor's favor because he would not give a sudden categorical answer to an important question of finance. On one occasion, riding through Fontainebleau, the Emperor suddenly turned to the forest-master and demanded how many acres of wood the park contained. The forest-master, an honest man, waited a moment to consider; at which a subordinate, who knew the Emperor's peculiarity, promptly named some imaginary number, so delighting Napoleon that he bestowed the head rangership on this swiftly-replying person. The result did not justify the Emperor's penetration, for the quick-witted man proved so extremely dishonest that after a short time he was dismissed, and the slower thinker reinstated.

Hasty-judging people of lesser rank frequently make equally unfortunate mistakes. Readers of Bret Harte's poems will remember the ridiculous incident of the old man who calls at a farm-house during the American war, and remarks: "I was with Grant"—and how the farmer, who had a son in the Northern army, received him with questions, admiration, offers of hospitality, cutting short all his attempts at finishing the sentence, until at last

"Said the aged man,
'I should have remarked before,
I was with Grant—in Illinois—
Three years before the war.'"

It is scarcely just when the farmer dismissed the old man with anger as an imposter, when his own overhaste was the cause of the mistake.—London Globe.

Eating Lemons.

A good deal has been said through the papers about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice is how to use them so that they will do the most good, as follows: Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know that it is more than doubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of the bilious system without blue pills or quinine is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as appetite craves, in as much ice water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning, on rising, at least a half hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation after awhile. But, properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medical work without harm, and, when the stomach is clear of food, has abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly, says a medical authority.—Exchange.

Sufferers from nervousness, early decay, etc., if you value life, avoid advertising doctors and medicines that act on kidneys and liver. Be not deceived by the many bogus certificates of cures from paid or imaginary persons. If a weakness of the sexual system is the cause of your distress, Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla will strengthen the parts affected stop the drain, quiet the nerves, produce dreamless slumber and allow you to regain perfect health. It has cured thousands, and will cure you, for, by purifying the blood and strengthening every weak portion of the body, it removes every symptom of distress.

Hellebore sprinkled on the floor at night destroyes cockroaches: they eat it and are poisoned.

Intelligent people have quit taking bitters and mineral poisons, have quit doctoring kidneys and liver, nerves and brain, have quit using alcoholic poisons and narcotic drugs, have quit poisoning their system with quack nostrums, and keep themselves and families in perfect health by occasionally using the only perfect blood purifier and true strengthener of weak portions of the body, known far and wide as Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Any druggist will get it for you.

Yankee Doodle was played in Beecher's church on Thanksgiving day.

The Indians, knowing the value of Wild Cherry bark as a cure for coughs and colds, used to prepare it in their rude way, and in winter kept it constantly on hand. The careful and secret method of preparing Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry makes it superior to all other preparations. It is very pleasant to take.

It is feared John G. Saxe will not live through the winter.

HOME.—In calling attention to an article advertised in our columns, we are pleased to notice an excellent sign in regard to it, viz.: that the testimonials relating to Hood's Sarsaparilla are from New England people, and many are from Lowell, the home of this medicine. We are assured that the sale of this article in Lowell, where it is best known, is wholly unprecedented in the annals of proprietary medicines. We leave it with you to decide as to the probable merits of an article with such a solid foundation.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stops the nauseous discharges of scrofulous Catarrh, and cures the complaint.

Good fires should be kept up during house-cleaning time, even though the doors and windows be kept open.

Liver, Kidney and Bright's Disease.

A medicine that destroys the germ or cause of Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and has power to root them out of the system, is above all price. Such a medicine is Hop Bitters, and positive proof of this can be found by one trial, or by asking your neighbors, who have been cured by it.

King Kalakana has sent to New Haven for a gold watch.

How often we hear middle-aged people say regarding that reliable old cough remedy, N. H. Downs' Elixir: "Why, my mother gave it to me when I was a child, and I use it in my family; it always cures." Who can name another medicine with such a record as this. Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters are another good medicine; and Arnica and Oil Liniment is just what it is recommended to be.

Worn, Weary, and Wretched.

"As weak as a cat" is an expression frequently used by debilitated sufferers who are trying to tell how forlorn they feel. It is an incorrect expression, for a cat is one of the most agile and vigorous animals in existence. It would be more correct to say, "as weak as a limp old rag," for that gives the idea of utter inability to hold one's self up. The weary person who feels thus is generally worn, worried, woeful, and wretched.

Sometimes it is a case of overwork, and sometimes of imperfect nourishment. The blood in the system of a person who is "as weak as a rag" is in a wretchedly thin condition. It needs iron, to impart richness, redness, and strength. This is to be had by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, the only safe and proper preparation of iron in connection with gentle and powerful tonics. The physician and the druggist can tell the worn and weary how valuable a remedy BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been found in actual every-day use.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation."

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for gumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption,
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he died was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand.
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BROOKLYN BALANCE.

Saturday was shadow day here, and a general forgetfulness of business prevailed in honor of Mrs. A. P. Cook. The funeral service was read by Rev. H. Hughes, assisted by Rev. Frisbie, of Detroit. The church was decorated with evergreen and flowers. Altar, chancel and family pew were draped with black, the first over a ground work of white and gold, as was also the organ. A pillow and cross of calla lillies and immortelles were sent from New York by Mrs. Knox, and cross, crown and other floral tributes by Detroit friends. All were beautiful and appropriate emblems, and none more so than a sheaf of ripe'ned wheat, from the center of which pushed up a cluster of buds of pink and white immortelles.

The village had but few inmates outside the church, and many came from distant places. Mr. Bertram and daughter Jennie came from Jackson to assist the choir. The task assigned was difficult. Both girls had grown up under the almost daily supervision of Mrs. Cook, and something ailed both tenor and bass. There came near being more tears than music. While all arrangements were befitting, the social position of the family, grief was not smothered in grandeur, for the lady was the best loved, the most trusted and revered friend of the church, and of the hapless and destitute waifs that intersperse every community, as well as a leader of refined society. Her sympathy and benevolence extended to all, without regard to why they were in trouble. Giving was but a preface to her charity. Her interest in the work never flagged, and having helped the weak to stand devised a way and learned them the lesson of self help. Such a life was necessarily a busy one. Unwavering devotion to church and moral improvement of neglected children. Methodical perseverence and executive ability required a large field for labor, that widened daily, yet was surrounded by her own personal influence. It is usually supposed that one who devotes much time to such work sacrifices home on the altar of enthusiasm, but home and family were first in her heart and all the rest occupied the place usually tenanted by self. By her request no sermon was preached; but what eulogy is required for one who was a stranger to envy, the first to be glad at another's success; who demonstrated in her own quiet way that life is what we make it, and worth living—We can remember such only with affection, and regret she was not with us when called beyond golden bars.

ADDISON ATOMS

The return of warmer weather is a truly welcome change.

The ice harvest is at hand and claims the attention of our people generally.

Advices from St. Louis, Gratiot county, report the average weather during the month as being warmer than the thermometer indicated in Lenawee, and that in sections where there was little more timber than here. Will some conundrum cracker tell the reason?

Messrs. James Morley and Charles Gunn have purchased several acres of timber to be used at their brick and tile yards to be located and operated by them in the spring. The enterprise will supply a need long felt by the people of this vicinity.

Rumor says that work will commence on the proposed extension side track leading from the M. & O. depot to the Addison mills as soon as the weather will permit.

Numerous reports have been extant for some months relative to the proposed Grand Trunk railroad extension from Jackson to different points in Ohio via. of Hudson and this place. They received little atten ion here until last week when the Jackson and Hudson papers announced that a company had been formed and would enter at once upon the preliminary work of securing local aid and otherwise pushing the enterprise. The road, if constructed, will, like all others, bring its share of advantages and disadvantages, the discussion of which seems to claim considerable attention here.

MACON MUSINGS.

Ed. Osgood has just returned from an extended visit in New York state.

A few of the young people made him a pleasant visit Tuesday evening.

Our townsman, Thomas Marshall, goes to Adrian next week to convict the guilty and acquit the innocent.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Coller returned last week from their sojourn in Ingham and other counties.

Macon is to have a band. The boys who belong to this embryo organization are fine fellows, all of them, full of energy and determination, and success must and will reward their efforts. The people of Macon appreciate their undertaking and will do all in their power to aid the boys.

Equilibrium has been restored, and a calm rests over our hamlet. One peculiarity, however, is noticable—Many of the Maconites seem to have adopted for their watchword, "To-morrow I go to town, sir." It's meaning is apparent. Grace will now reign.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

The quarterly meeting at the M. E. church last Sabbath was well attended.

There is to be a concert at the church Friday evening. Admission, 10c. All for the benefit of M. E. society.

The sick are all reported on the gain.

Some Napoleon people were trying to make arrangements for a show here in the near future, but we did not learn whether they were successful or not.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

W. N. Brown, teacher in school district No. 4, has dropped the "birch" to accept station agency on the M. & O. road at Hanover. The people at Hanover are to be congratulated as Mr. Brown will undoubtedly meet their expectations.

Floyd Florence met with a serious accident lately, nearly severing his foot with an axe while chopping.

George C. Arner, in the U. S. Survey Service, stationed on the Mississippi river, is home on a vacation. He reports a good time, plenty of work, but poor feed.

Dame Rumor says orange blossoms soon will spread fragrance here. A true leap year affair. For the high contracting parties a pleasant journey through life, one that will be far removed from reverses and unhappiness is the sincere wish of SCRIBE.

A CORRECTION.

We desire to correct a statement made last week by the author of the Macon Musings. Our prayer circle includes no "two or three gossipers," to whom he alludes. As church members and intelligent christian men and women, we feel we have not only been unjustly represented, but that our belief has been ridiculed. We regret that there is this whirlwind of disturbance in our usually quiet and friendly community, but is there not a good cause for it originating? When a person allows his ungovernable temper to so completely master him that he forgets his social standing as a gentleman, we think it proper time some one informs him of his danger, if one of no more importance than a "gossiper." H.

A recent Washington dispatch gives some interesting information in regard to Col. W. C. Fitzsimmons.

"United States Circuit Judge Wallace heard argument to-day on a motion for a perpetual injunction in the suit of W. C. Fitzsimmons, of Tecumseh, Mich., against Gen. Guillermo Nanne and the Central American Pacific railroad company, to restrain the company from issuing or delivering certificates of its capital stock, or anything in lieu thereof, to the extent of $150,000 in shares of said capital stock, or from making any transfers or certificates heretofore issued to a like amount. Plaintiff was employed as an expert engineer to survey a route for a railroad in Central America, and was to receive a commission in stocks if he completed the necessary survey and made arrangements to raise funds to carry on the work. Fitzsimmons seeks to recover compensation due him for services. The judge vacated the order of in rem against Nanne, and postponed further hearing on the injunction.

The Amusement Mirror of Jackson has the following complimentary notice of the Tecumseh base ball club:

"The Tecumseh base ball club was organized in June, 1883, with a membership of 27. The following officers were elected: S. W. Bordine president, A. M. Stevens, secretary, E. N. Satterthwaite, treasurer, J. L. Anderson, manager. The players and positions were as follows: A. Hendrich, catcher, Wm. Tray, pitcher, J. J. Freeman, 1 b., Floyd Bostwick, 2 b., Fred Coiles, 3 b., V. S. Chapman, s. s., J. S. Anderson, l. f., Geo. Bostwick, c. f., Ed. McKinney, r. f., and change pitchers. The club played 11 games, winning 8. The season closed in September and was a very successful one in every respect. A new grand stand was erected and various improvements made. The association has a nice balance in the treasury, and will commence next season with bright prospects."

The New York World says: "The popular notion that fortune distributes her favors with a reckless hand is illustrated by a circumstance that, while Alfred Tennyson has been raised to a baronetcy, Mrs. Julia A. Moore, the sweet singer of Michigan, is running a small water power grist mill at Montgomery Siding."

There will be business of importance, aside from the election of officers. A full report of last year's business will be made; also the special committee appointed to procure a fair ground, will make its report at that time. No person who has the welfare of this society at heart should fail to be present.

Adrian, Mich., Jan. 15, 1884.

The February number of Demorest's Monthly is both instructive and entertaining. The serial by Mrs. Champney is continued, and shorter stories are contributed by Eleanor Kirk, Hope Ledyard, Carlotta Perry, and Miss E. B. Cheesborough. Among the readable articles are "The Yellowstone National Park," "The French Shakespeare," and "The Mediæval Mystery of the Passion Play." Jenny June contributes "Life in New York," and the various departments are well filled. "The Pompeiian Maiden," a fine steel engraving, forms the frontispiece, and there are other admirable illustrations.

We Met at Toulon.

THE ROMANCE OF A VOYAGE.

It was at Toulon railway station. Why I was there, or where I was going, I don't exactly remember, so much having happened since, and I, at the time, having no reason to go to one place more than to another.

The express train from Paris had just come in.

She was standing a little aside, just out of the crowd and bustle, looking on, scanning every face as it passed and repassed, mine among others, and as I fancied, with more interest than others. Her face was very pale, and her eyes were anxious, but she looked calm and self-possessed.

By-and-by I saw her speak to an elderly woman who stood near. She received, I fancied, a hurried, unwelcome answer, for I saw a flush rise in her face as she turned away.

By this time the platform was almost clear. Such passengers as were going on had departed to refresh themselves, others had gone to their rest. [illegible] The railway offices began to present their solitary [illegible]

WE DO NOT CLAIM

that Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's Sarsaparilla undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,
MRS. S. S. MOODY

A Leading London Physician establishes an Office in New York for the Cure of EPILEPTIC FITS. From Am. Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Ab. Meserole (late of London), who makes a specialty of Epilepsy, has without doubt treated and cured more cases than any other living physician. His success has simply been astonishing; we have heard of cases of over 20 years' standing successfully cured by him. He has published a work on this disease, which he sends with a large bottle of his wonderful cure free to any sufferer who may send their express and P. O. Address. We advise any one wishing a cure to address

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Church communicants in this country, the New York Independent reports, after careful inquiry, number 17,067,806, of whom 6,832,954 are Catholics.

—Just because the widow's mite was so highly praised there are lots of people who pride themselves with never putting more than a penny into the contribution-box.—Chicago Tribune.

—A Manchester boy has played truant uninterruptedly from October, 1882, until the present time. His parents thought he was attending school and his teacher believed him to be at work.—Boston Post.

—The suit brought by Rev. Edward Jones against the Rev. Miss Anna Oliver in Brooklyn for $800, he says the church now claiming that it was a loan, while she insists that it was a gift, has been decided in her favor.—Brooklyn (N. Y.) Eagle.

—On account of the fact that many of the Jews do not understand the Hebrew language and therefore do not take interest in the services in that language, a Rochester (N. Y.) synagogue has decided to adopt the English translation of the ritual.—Rochester Express.

—A recent return of the Financial Board of Cambridge University puts the incomes of colleges at $1,156,000. Trinity has the largest, over $231,000; Magdalen the smallest, $23,500. The colleges contribute $26,000 to the common university fund—two and a quarter per cent., about.

—At Bacup, in England, recently, a girl aged seven died from inflammation of the brain, brought on by overwork at school. The medical officer in reporting the case strongly condemned the practice of making young children do home lessons at night. He said it worried them and made them restless in their sleep.—Chicago Herald.

—The Superintendent of the Akron (O.) schools, says: "Education is a difficult and delicate art; it requires an intimate acquaintance with the nature of the human mind, and the best way of operating upon it; it requires a knowledge of how minds are influenced by moral motives, as well as how both moral and intellectual operations are acted upon by outside influences."

—It is reported that in the town of Noyon, where John Calvin, the great Geneva reformer, was born, the very name of Protestantism has been almost forgotten, and that the name of Calvin was unknown. M. Cadot, the Baptist pastor of Channy, has succeeded in opening a small room for the preaching of the Gospel in that place. M. Cadot says he found a hearty welcome, and that his meetings were attended by some of the leading families. The result of his visit will be the founding of a new church.

—At a recent meeting of the Science Association of John Hopkins University Prof. Sylvester bade farewell to the association, saying that he should leave for Europe before its next meeting. He hoped that steps would be taken to make the valuable and interesting meetings of the association accessible to the general public, and to print reports of them in some scientific journal. He thought it desirable also that verbal and impromptu reports be more often made, in addition to the papers read, and "the well-known American bashfulness" thus overcome.

A lady was reproaching Mr. William Warren at a recent reception for going into society so little. "You ought to let us lionize you a little," she said. "I never heard of but one man," replied the veteran actor, "who was not spoiled by being lionized." "And who was he?" "Daniel."—Chicago Tribune.

A social calamity: Mr. Jones—"You seem to be in great distress, my friend." Tramp—"I am sir, in distress in great distress. I have just been married, and I am on my wedding tour, but from lack of funds I have been compelled to leave my wife behind." A spirit of chivalry prompted a donation, of course.—N. Y. Wag.

A country clergyman who recently preached in an Austin church is an admirer of the writings of Charles Dickens, and quotes from his novels almost as often as he does from the Bible. He surprised his congregation by winding up a rousing peroration with: "It is thus you see, my brethren, as the Scriptures say, 'Barkis is willing' that the flesh is weak."—Texas Siftings.

A precocious Child, while engaged at his thanksgiving Repast, remarked to his Indulgent Mother that he believed he was not as Thankful as he Ought to be. A Natural Kindler.

The Hydrocotlee gummifolia grows in the Falkland Islands as well as in Tierra del Fuego, and is known as the "gum plant," because of a viscous substance it exudes in large quantities; this sap is called "balsam," and is used by the natives of the countries where it is found as a poultice for wounds. But its most important property, in their eyes, is the ease with which it can be set on fire, even when green and growing—a matter of no slight consequence in regions where rain falls five days out of every six. In the Falkland Islands, where there are no trees, the natives often roast their beef over a fire of bones—the very bones of the animal from which, but the moment before, the meat itself was stripped—and they use the gum-plant to kindle this fire.—Captain Mayne Reid, in St. Nicholas.

—Miss Sabra Phillips, of Norwood, R. I., is a hundred years old. The Providence Journal says: "She lives alone, does all her own housework, saws wood for her own fire, and brings it on her back from the woods. She is a constant reader of the Bible and religious books, reads without glasses, and is ready at any time to preach a sermon upon any passage of Scripture, which she often does to those gathered around her. She is the last of her generation."

—Herr Krupp, the great German gun-maker, whose works are said to have turned out 20,000 cannon, is described as a tall and rather stern-looking man, with sloping shoulders, a long neck and full white beard. He is delicate, nervous and intellectual, and looks like a clergyman. His only son and heir, Fritz Krupp, who will succeed to an estate valued at $40,000,000, is an inventor of considerable ability, and is thoroughly familiar with his father's business.

—Mr. E. T. Jaffray, the richest of New York's importing merchants, is nearly sixty-seven years of age, and employs about three hundred clerks and above sixty commercial travelers. He attends Dr. Hall's church, and may be seen there during services holding his grand-children and surrounded by them. His summer place at Tarrytown he leaves daily in his steam yacht, on which he takes breakfast, and then goes to the wheel and steers the craft himself. No one can be ill if the blood is pure. Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla root have long been recognized by physicians as blood purifiers. Don't be humbugged by the advertisements of the many quack bitters, but occasionally use Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and you will live to a good old age free from all distress of mind and body. Many of our best citizens who long suffered from bad blood indicated by weak kidneys, indigestion, sores, aches, etc., owe their recovery to the use of this remedy.

Vick's Floral Guide.—Here it is again, brighter and better than ever; the cover alone, with its delicate tinted Background and its dish of gracefully arranged flowers, would entitle it to a permanent place in every home. The book contains three beautiful colored plates, is full of illustrations, printed on the best of paper, and is filled with just such information as is required by the gardener, the farmer, those growing plants, and every one needing seeds or plants. The price, only ten cents, can be deducted from the first order sent for goods. All parties any way interested in this subject should send at once to James Vick, Rochester, N. Y., for the Floral Guide.

Many who long suffered from indescribable feelings of distress, lame back, aching joints, sores, swellings, weakness of the urinary and digestive organs, unnatural feelings of weariness, headache, nervousness, despondency, sleeplessness, disturbing dreams, partial insanity, etc., after doctoring liver, kidneys, nerves and brain, with the various quack nostrums of the day, and being nearly frightened to death by their alarming advertisements, quietly began using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and were agreeably surprised to quickly find themselves restored to perfect health. No other remedy equals it.

How often we hear middle-aged people say regarding that reliable old cough remedy, N. H. Downs' Elixir: "Why, my mother gave it to me when I was a child, and I use it in my family; it always cures." The Bad and Worthless are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprang up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started upstream put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Swept into the Stream,

One Thousand Acres of Land, and "Right Smart of Beare."

On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboat stood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North: "When I was twelve years old, I killed my first bear on a new plantation my father was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bear there, too. But that one thousand acres of land went into the Mississippi years ago."

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turbid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace to us, as a people. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to reckonings or ignorance the simplest thing might as well be complex as a proposition in Conic Sections. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the surrounding shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our ailments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs.

The most effective and conclusive remedy for disease is PARKER'S TONIC. It goes to the sources of pain and weakness. In response to its action, the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart begin their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The tonic is not, however, an intoxicant, but cures a desire for strong drink. Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have refused to yield to other agents? Here is your help.

PARKER'S TONIC

Makes fast and firm friends of all who use it. Invigorates the kidneys, liver, bowels and stomach and purifies the blood. Pleases the palate, stirs the circulation and cures the ailing. To women and aged persons it imparts strength and hopefulness. The best known antidote for the liquor habit. 50c. and $1 sizes.

The Union Party of Michigan means business. The new movement cannot be stopped [illegible] the politicians [illegible] to think for the [illegible] on point [illegible] and to put their preach[illegible] into practice at the [illegible]

The Chicago News has the [illegible] of Wolverine politics.

Michigan is still greatly excited over the rumor that the tariff on salt is to be removed. It appears that salt is a drug in the Michigan market. It is so pestiferously cheap that people use it in their tea and coffee instead of sugar, and the public taste has become so perverted in this particular that in many localities codfish balls are palmed upon the unwary traveler for genuine old fashioned doughnuts.

THE UNION PARTY OF MICHIGAN.

The temperance men of the state met at Jackson on the 9th inst., and formally inaugurated the new political movement by the adoption of a platform and choosing the necessary committees. The attendance was about two hundred, and it was an enthusiastic gathering.

The first resolution was [illegible] the name of the party to "The Prohibition Party of Michigan." It was further resolved [illegible]

Michigan's Hardwood Resources.

Hon. Henry N. Walker, of Detroit, [illegible] Commissioner for Michigan [illegible] a circular supplement [illegible] "Michigan and its Resources," which will be sent to [illegible] manufacturers of hardwood goods. The circular says:

"It is well known that Michigan stands first among the states in the [illegible] of pine timber, its great wealth of hardwoods has [illegible] comparatively unappreciated. In the northern peninsula, in the lower peninsula, and in all the counties of the upper peninsula, are [illegible] large tracts of pine, tamarack, cedar, black birch, sugar maple, much of it of the finest grade, and [illegible] varieties. [illegible] which [illegible] have been [illegible] for years, [illegible] furniture, carriages, [illegible] In the lower peninsula are [illegible] oak, cherry, black walnut, black birch, which is [illegible] in both peninsulas [illegible] into general use, leading to a great extent the place of black walnut and cherry. It is admirably adapted for house finish, [illegible] purposes, and is well suited to the manufacture of [illegible] and other furniture. It is found have met with much favor in Michigan and Indiana. Michigan's great facilities for cheap water transportation have been supplemented by the extension of established railroads and the building of many new ones. To-day this state offers exceptional advantages to all industries in which wood is largely used, and its location, between the thickly populated east and growing west, [illegible] it for a manufacturing center. Michigan manufactures more charcoal pig iron than any other state. Hundreds of thousands of feet of choice hardwoods are annually consumed in the manufacture of charcoal. Saw mills, handle, last, and shoe peg factories, and other wood-working establishments can be located near the charcoal kilns to the great advantage of both industries."

Most as good and reliable barometer by which an approaching snow storm may be foretold as any, is the snow bird. When you notice these little birds begin to gather into flocks and fly around promiscuously and ravenously searching for food, depend upon it, a snow storm is near at hand and the more numerous the birds appear the more severe the storm will prove.

A NARROW ESCAPE

About ten o'clock last Saturday afternoon a fire broke out in Keil's jewelry and book store which threatened to develop into a disastrous conflagration. The flames originated in the cellar, which was stored full of paper and stationery stock, and filled the store above with a dense volume of smoke in less than a minute. The firemen responded promptly and the cellar was soon flooded with water and the flames extinguished. The goods stored in the cellar will probably be a total loss, and the stock up stairs was considerably damaged by smoke. Mr. Keil estimates his total damage in the neighborhood of six thousand dollars, which is fully covered by insurance. There was considerable consternation in the hotel for a few minutes until it was understood that the fire was under control. Fortunately the fire walls between the corner store and adjoining ones kept the fire out of the hotel. Or rather the fire walls and the steamer. Without the latter the entire Lilley House block would have been in ruins in three hours' time. The steamer paid for itself four times over in about fifteen minutes last Saturday forenoon. A reasonable expenditure for fire protection is always economy in the long run.

Adrian Record: The Boy's Weekly claims that Adrian has 25 lawyers, and adds that all of them "are strict church members except 25." It is evident that the smart lads who print the Boys' Weekly are going to be journalists. Already they have begun to stretch the truth.

Blissfield Advance: A married woman in Ogden is a terrible scold, but has a horror of rats. Her husband has dead rodents hidden a in convenient receptacle, and when she commences to upraid him produces a big fellow, which frightens her so that she can't speak a word.

J. N. Hathaway, of Addison, was in town yesterday and paid his respects at the HERALD office. Addison men are frequently seen in Tecumseh since the opening of the M. & O.

An old maids' conclave took place in Adrian recently, fifteen matronly sort of ladies who had never known the felicities of wedded life getting together to laugh or mourn. A number of old bachelors were invited to the party, which seemed to give the occasion an air of business—not known whether it will ever result in any heirs-apparent.

Mrs. Calhoun, who reads at the Opera House on the 21st inst., is a very charming lady socially as well as on the platform. Those who recommend her to us here say that she will make friends wherever she goes, and we trust our citizens will appreciate the opportunity of hearing her, and give her a cordial welcome to Tecumseh.

The second time schedule of the M. & O. road has been adopted going into effect last Sunday, January 13th. Another train was put on the road at that time. The time trains pass our station now is as follows. Passenger—West at 11:39 A. M.; East at 1:23 P. M. These trains pass each other at Addison. Freight West at 8:56 A. M.; East at 4:38 P. M.

The Blissfield Advance has this item:

A new postoffice has been established at Dutton, two and one-half miles north of Rome Center, and four miles south of Tecumseh.

The boy who wrote this should post up on local geography. The fact is a new postoffice, called Sutton, has been established four miles south of Tecumseh on the Jackson Branch.

One of Kelly's Corners' wealthy farmers, who does a private banking, is said to have taken alarm at the fact that crime is stalking through the land, and has turned his house into an arsenal, as in every room he has guns, rifles, and revolvers hanging up loaded and ready for instant use. We warn characters of the Jesse James stride to steer clear of his locality.

Vernor's almanac for 1884 is out.—Opposite the first five days in January, ending with the memorable Saturday is the following legend, which may be of interest: "New Year's mild; no snow; dust or mud in many sections. Waters quite open. Generally open weather in U. S. Local rains or snow and sleet flurries. A great contrast to 1883 January." Weather prophets have seldom made breaks as bad as this for a starter.

The meetings at the Baptist church continue with growing interest. Congregations are large and professed conversions are reported every evening. Evangelist Hatch will remain another week. His singing is marvelous and is accompanied with wonderful power. Rev. L. Kirtley was called away to attend a funeral in Jackson yesterday, but will occupy the pulpit as usual, the rest of the week.

The telegraph line on the M. & O. is now completed from Toledo through to Allegan, and at least half of the depots are furnished and occupied.—The stations at Tecumseh, Addison, Homer, Hanover, Jerome, Battle Creek, Monteith, and perhaps some others are in complete shape and officered ready for business. The passenger train which was put on last Monday is well patronized, and freight already begins to move.

TWO SIGNIFICANT LETTERS.

We gladly rearrange our forms this afternoon to make room for the following letters, which will explain themselves. The business men in Tecumseh can heartily join with Messrs. Lilley and Bills in their commendation of the firemen.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Jan. 14, 1884.

S. W. Bordine, Chief Tecumseh Fire Department:

Dear Sir,—Please accept the enclosed as a slight testimonial of our appreciation of the services of the department in arresting the fire in our block on the 12th inst. If any have suffered in health from exposure, please use it for medical advice, to replace damaged clothing, or such other object as the department shall deem best. Again thanking you, we remain, very truly, yours,
LUCIUS LILLEY,
OSCAR P. BILLS.

The enclosure in this letter was $50 in gold.

To Lucius Lilley and Oscar P. Bills:

Gentlemen,—In behalf of the Tecumseh fire department, allow me to extend our hearty thanks for your appreciation of our efforts in subduing the fire in your block on Saturday last; also, what is more grateful to us, your kind solicitation for health or damage, if any was sustained. Such tokens of regard can but stimulate the department to a higher state of efficiency in the future and help them to overcome those defects, of which none are more conscious than the department itself.

Yours, respectfully,
S. W. BORDINE,
Chief Tecumseh Fire Department.

The Clinton News gives the following account of Dr. E. F. Tuttle's funeral:

"The funeral of Dr. E. F. Tuttle took place this afternoon at St. John's church. During its continuance all places of business in town were closed out of respect to the memory. The church was crowded with relatives and friends, and the services were impressive. The doctor's pew was draped in mourning, as well as the altar, the chancel rail and the pulpit. The floral tributes were costly and beautiful. Rev. St. John conducted the solemn service for the dead, and preached a beautiful discourse. The doctor's Sunday school class of young men attended in a body and acted as escort. Rev. W. P. Wastell, an old friend of the doctor, occupied a seat within the chancel and read one of the hymns. This was in accordance with an understanding between Dr. Tuttle and Mr. Wastell, that if the former died first, the latter should thus read a hymn at his funeral. The floral offerings consisted of a harp from the ladies society of St. John's church, also a sickle—a pillow with the words, "Our Teacher," from the doctor's Sunday school class, and a cross from Mr. and Mrs. George Kies and Mr. and Mrs. Will Kies."

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the society of the First Presbyterian church of Tecumseh was held on the afternoon of Jan. 8th, in the audience-room of the church, at which there was quite a large attendance.

The meeting was organized by election of Hon. A. D. Hall as chairman, and A. W. Mills, Esq., as clerk of the meeting.

The reports of the trustees and treasurer of the church were read and approved, showing that an earnest interest had been taken by the society in providing for late improvements upon the church building and all the material interests of the church and society.

At this meeting there was accepted the resignation of Judge S. C. LeBaron of the office of clerk, which he had held continuously for fully fifty years. In the discharge of the duties of that office many can testify of the arduous duties in the long years ago laid upon him when all the financial needs of the church and support of pastor depended, not only upon subscription lists, but the equally difficult task of collecting the subscriptions given. A great change and improved method was reached with the system of pew rentals.

In accepting his resignation the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved,—That we give testimony of the faithful long service of Judge S. C. LeBaron as clerk of this society from its organization, now nearly, if not quite, a period of half a century, and we tender him our sincere thanks for his prompt and impartial discharge of official duty. We take pleasure, also, in the contemplation of such gratuitous services, so materially contributing in the long years past to the financial prosperity and success of the organization; and finally, in response to his resignation of office, which we have this day received, we send him in his present retirement, bound by the infirmities of disease and declining years, greetings of our ardent christian sympathy, and commend him to the grace and mercy of Our Heavenly Father, preparatory for him and us, for the remaining trials that await us.

Resolved,—That the above resolution be spread upon the records of this society, and a copy be delivered to Judge LeBaron.

Mr. A. W. Mills was elected trustee of the society in the place of E. B. Wood, whose term of office now expired, and who declined a new election which was tendered him.

Mr. P. S. McKinnon was re-elected treasurer.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted as the expression of the sentiments cherished for Mr. John S. Strong, so long the chorister of this church, than whom none of all the men who in one way and another have promoted so long the interests of this society, by personal service and liberal financial aid:

At this annual meeting of the society of the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh, Michigan, held January 7th, 1884, it was

Resolved, That we take this occasion to bear testimony of our sincere appreciation of the labors of our brother, Mr. John S. Strong, now more than thirty years past the chorister of this church, particularly commending his success and the happy selection of musical talent he has brought to his aid, of whom some, we are reminded, have gone to join the choir above.

We also congratulate him upon the acceptable and excellent character of the music he has given us the privilege to listen to, not forgetting the great anxiety, taxation of time and strength, as well as liberal contributions for its success, it has occasioned him in the devotion of his gifts to the Master's service. Nor would we fail most cheerfully to recognize the very important auxiliary in our church choir to the maintenance of public worship, ascribing thanksgiving to God for the "songs of the sanctuary."

After this the usual renting of pews was attended to.

The Macon correspondent of the Clinton News says: In passing to Tecumseh we notice that Rufus Hall is cutting down his old orchard and using it for firewood. It is said to be the oldest one on the road from Tecumseh to Ann Arbor, and the most productive of any in this section.

Adrian Times: Something over forty years ago a piece of land in Rollin township was conveyed to a board of trustees consisting of ten men, for a burying ground. Five of them are still living, and as they are quite aged, it was thought best to get their interest in the township board of health. Supervisor Raymond reports that he called upon each of them and took their acknowledgment, and each one was able to sign his name in a very legible hand. Their united ages are 394 years, and respective ages, 60, 80, 83, 73 and 80.

The Adrian Times of Friday contains the notice of the death of Mrs. Harriet N. Hampton. The deceased at one time lived in Tecumseh, and had many old friends among the older residents.

A telegram was received on Wednesday by Mr. Philo T. Mills, of this city, conveying the sad intelligence of the death of his sister, Mrs. Harriet N. Hampton, of Toledo. Mrs. Hampton, with her daughters, Mrs. J. P. Brown and Mrs. H. C. Hohn, and their families from Toledo, passed New Year's day with Mr. and Mrs. Mills and other friends, at the residence of Mrs. D. A. Dodge, of this city—a merry company. Mrs. Hampton returned to Toledo Thursday afternoon in her usual health. On Sunday following she was stricken with paralysis, and became unconscious until Wednesday, when she passed away. A large number of family friends went to Toledo this morning to attend her funeral, which occurred this afternoon, at the residence of Hon. T. P. Brown. Mrs. Hampton was the daughter of Major John Mills, one of the pioneers of Frankfort. She was for many years a resident of Frankfort, and also of Tecumseh, the wife of Isaac H. Hampton, who died some few years since. Her many friends in these towns will be pained to hear that she has passed away, and will recall her many excellencies.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

The Circuit Court for this county convened on the morning of the 15th. The business of the November term was first called, and continued only for a extension of time in one or two cases in which to settle bills of exceptions. Meanwhile an unusually large batch of prisoners had been brought from the county and roared in a row in front of the wall. They were guarded by officers, and were in charge of Sheriff Bidwell and his deputies. As soon as the January term was opened the work of arraigning the prisoners was commenced.

The first case on the calendar was that of James Marsape, the Russian burglar. He had already pleaded not guilty, and his case was reported ready for trial.

Chas. King, the Morenci young man, who is charged with resisting an officer, was not ready to plead.

Almon Bailey, the Palmyra boy who stole John Gregory's horse and buggy, on the 7th of last December, pleaded guilty.

Silas Spellar, who is a vicious looking chap of perhaps 20 years of age, it will be remembered stole a horse and buggy from a son of J. H. Green, of Raisin, on the evening of the 13th of November last, and who was promptly overhauled and captured by Mr. Green and son. He pleaded guilty.

Adelbert Livermore, who was accused of having stolen a horse from a Woodstock man on the 29th of last October, pleaded not guilty, and asked that counsel be assigned him.

Geo. W. Reese, a stalwart young fellow, with bright blue eyes and the blondest of hair and moustache, stood up in a suit of blue, and answered to a charge of robbing Adelbert Purcell, in this city, last June. He said he "guessed he might as well plead guilty, although he didn't take the money from Purcell."

Thomas McCue and Patrick Melan, stepped up and plead not guilty to a charge of having robbed Richard Hamilton of some few dollars in money, a watch and a jug of whisky.

In the case against John Page, for attempted larceny from the person, the prosecutor was not yet ready to file an information.

James Sherman was accused of stealing from Alf. Miller's house at Blissfield, in the day time, on the 24th of December. He pleaded guilty.

Bendager Seaman appeared in a well fitting suit of "nigger head" clothes, and with a head covered with bushy curls, and said he was not guilty of stealing from Chas. Aldrich.

John C. Anderson was arraigned on a charge of forging a couple of notes on Mark Rorick, the notes being dated Nov. 13, 1883. He pleaded not guilty and would employ counsel.

Barney Lauritzen and Timothy Curtin, the two fellows who next stepped up to the bar, were accused of forging receipts for the bills of Mrs. West's boarding house in Tecumseh. Lauritzen was a youth of tall stature and milk white eyes and hair. He pleaded guilty, and at once seemed to feel better. Curtin was older and smaller, and he stepped out with a game eye, a checked cotton shirt and stolid indifference, and said he was not guilty. He was also impecunious, and could not even recollect how old he was.

No information was filed in the case against James Kegan for forgery, although the prosecutor said the case would be reached this term.

The prosecuting attorney mentioned the case of Leo Weil, the boy who was arrested for stealing a ring, which was afterward found in the house from which he was supposed to have stolen it, and said he would bring the case in for the attention of the court.

Judge Howell then stated that the civil cases, which were to be tried by jury, would not come on before a week from next Tuesday; the calling of the calendar would be deferred until next Tuesday; the first week of court would be devoted to criminal cases.

MRS. CALHOUN'S RECITALS.

It may be interesting to the public to know that Mrs. Margaret Custer Calhoun, who is engaged to give one of her delightful recitals at the opera house, Monday, Jan. 21st, is a sister of the late General Custer, and that she lost a husband, three brothers and a nephew in the same battle in which the brave general perished. She was, at that time, at Fort Lincoln with the general's wife, but after the terrible strife was over she buried her own and dressed and prepared to bury the remains of her husband, brothers and nephew, who never rose from the stack they had defended. Since her husband's death Mrs. Calhoun has been her brother's housekeeper, traveling and attending several lectures of good authority have heard her read, and have given her enthusiastic encouragement. From a number of press notices we select these:

"At the Church of Our Father, last evening, Mrs. Calhoun gave an excellently chosen program of dramatic readings. She has a fine stage presence, and graceful action. Her voice is pleasing, of sufficient power, and under admirable control. Best of all, the lady shows an almost entire absence of mannerisms, so common, and perhaps detrimental, to the success of the average elocutionist."—Detroit Free Press.

"Mrs. Calhoun's reading was a rare treat. Everyone is enthusiastic in her praise. The selections were all given in a very sweet and beautiful manner."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

"Mrs. Calhoun's recitations called forth the enthusiastic applause of the audience. Her manner was easy and graceful, she showed great facility of expression, and gave the fullest interpretation to the sentiments of her selections."—Saginaw Morning Herald.

The Blissfield Advance says: "The big engine suit, we understand, is ended in the supreme court in a few days. The docket number of the case is 141, and it is expected it will be reached early in the term. We believe the only question involved is the validity of Mr. Rich's appointment, and his actions under the law. The constitutionality of the law is in no way assailed."

Lifted Up

A happy surprise it was to Mr. A. R. Norton, of Bristol, Conn., when Athlophoros put him on his feet, and set him cheerfully about his business. Let him tell his own story:

"About three weeks ago I was taken with a severe attack of the back. For nine days I was unable to stir in bed without help, and when I did attempt to do so I fainted from pain. I was attended by two physicians, who treated me for rheumatism, but their medicine failed. I was advised to try Athlophoros, and before I had taken half a bottle I could turn in bed without fainting. In two days I was able to get about, and in a few days more, to resume my business. In my case, at my age, Athlophoros did what two physicians and much medicine failed to do, namely, cure me."

A poor man in Nashua, Iowa, Kansas, lost a valuable horse. Being out of work, and on account of his poverty, unable to obtain a secret, he was informed terribly from kidney disease. He gratefully writes:

"I took one dose Tuesday afternoon, and on Wednesday, after but seven doses, I had not a sharp or severe pain left. Then I replaced the dose on the shelf, and took the remainder of the bottle. I was able to be steady at work all Saturday, when I took a severe cold and was unable to use my left hand. I purchased another bottle and by bed time I felt well. The medicine is all you claim for it."

Investigate ATHLOPHOROS fully, if you please. Find all the fault you choose with it, and yet the fact remains, that it is doing what no other medicine can approach. [illegible]

If you cannot get Athlophoros of your druggist, we will send it express, free of charge, on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he cannot do so, do not be persuaded to take anything else, but order at once, inclosing the money, as directed to us.

Neither Pig Nor Puppy.

A dear friend of mine, who is a never-failing fund of anecdotes, was telling the other day how the expression "neither pig nor puppy" originated. During the Know-Nothing campaign in Virginia, James Lyons met Henry A. Wise, his kinsman, on the stump. Mr. Lyons accused his antagonist of having [illegible] from one party to another with [illegible] facility. Wise, in turn, [illegible] kind and said little on his own behalf except that he could be relied on to do anything for his friends. Lyons, [illegible] the Administration, [illegible] political favors. Wise replied that he had [illegible] Lyons, and [illegible] the Secretary of the Interior, [illegible] Lyons's father-in-law, [illegible] Wise, in time, [illegible] Lyons, [illegible] Wise, [illegible] Lyons's father happened to hear of this and, in a generous moment, ordered a negro to catch one of his finest pigs and carry it to his friend. The boy [illegible] was ordered and forthwith proceeded on his journey. Half way there was a public house and Sambo stopped to get a drink of whisky. The bag containing the pig was put behind [illegible] Warmed by the liquor, the negro told the whole story of his mission. Some wild fellows heard it and determined to have a little fun. They removed the pig from the bag and introduced a puppy in its place.

The negro soon delivered his load, received his money, and finally appeared with his burden before the delighted farmer, who was, of course, a Whig. He told the story to raise the wind and to blow off the pressure. To [illegible] Lyons and regale the party, he added, with [illegible] the negro was [illegible] to run the puppy and go home to his master. [illegible] Reaching the farm on his return trip, the young [illegible] had previously treated him [illegible] to drink, and with some of [illegible] around the puppy and relieved [illegible] of a good quarter.

[illegible] again took up his bag and [illegible] in a state of mental perplexity. Confronted [illegible] he told how he had stated [illegible] that had turned to a puppy and could not account for it [illegible] of a diabolical intervention. The farmer saw clearly that there was no puppy about his place, and emphatically ordered the poor negro to untie the bag and let the dashed thing go. Unwinding the bag, out bounded the pig, with a grunt of delight at deliverance. The farmer turned out at the negro for his [illegible] propensities and threatened him with condign chastisement. The astonished darkey flung up his hands in desperate protestation, while ejaculating, "Lordy Lord massa, when I first opened that was a pig, and I turned to a puppy, and when I started again it was a puppy and turned to a pig! The dained thing can turn to a pig or puppy whenever it chooses."

Mr. Wise had no occasion to make an application to his opponent. The crowd took it unanimously and bore the speaker off on their shoulders in triumph.—Richmond (Va.) Chronicle.

How the Scheme for the Bartholdi Statue Originated.

It is not generally known how the scheme for a colossal statue of Liberty originated. It was about a fortnight ago when M. Bartholdi came to this country for the first time, bringing letters with him from Edouard Laboulaye and other great friends of union between France and America. One of the persons to whom M. Bartholdi went on his arrival in New York was Mrs. Booth, who, known as a translator of books by Laboulaye, as one of the first historians [illegible] and as the editor of Hearth and Home. M. Bartholdi presented to Mrs. Booth his colossal statue, which [illegible] permanence was a mark of [illegible] friendship with the United States. He said, moreover, that, as in [illegible] the idea for the statue had [illegible] Bedloe's Island, which seemed to him the right place for such a statue. Mr. Bartholdi's scheme was [illegible] to state lodge of honor [illegible] was [illegible] Mr. Bartholdi returned to his [illegible] certain debate [illegible] Mr. Bartholdi and [illegible] as a sculptor [illegible] He had done some [illegible] and he was regarded as an [illegible] Lafayette, of New [illegible] Lafayette came the war with [illegible] M. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Well that Sunday school concert advertised to be held in the Christian church in East Ridgeway on last Thursday night, came off at the time announced, and now since it is among the things that have passed I feel it to be meet to say a few things concerning it, partly from hear say and partly from observation, and by the way offer a few friendly criticisms, which I trust will be received by those for whom they are intended, as being offered by a sincere friend and well wisher, who has only the good of those for whom he offers them at heart.

I am told that the actors only had two evenings practice, and to those but few were present. The last evening's practice, as I am informed, was the night previous to the concert, and so few were present and so poorly did they perform that the leading spirits present felt, as I am told, that the concert would be a grand failure.—To the pastor had been committed the arranging of the program, at least so I am informed, and which I noticed by its reading was, with the exception of the instrumental duets in keeping with the advertised entertainment, which was a 'Sunday School Concert.' I will here say that such duets should not, in my judgement, be admitted in a Sunday School concert, and I wonder that that pastor made them a part of that program. While speaking of these duets and to show their incongruity in a Sunday School concert indulge me in saying that upon the pronouncing of the benediction by the pastor a couple of young ladies sat down to the organ and began the playing of some quick-step march, whereupon a lot of boys who were standing on the pulpit platform and in the aisle in front of it commenced to shuffle their feet in a dance. Such things are most certainly out of place in the house of God, and should be no part of a Sunday School concert. I trust, therefore, that the good people of that church and the officers of the Sunday School connected with the church, will in getting up Sunday School entertainments in the future, rule out all such music notwithstanding it may have been put upon the program by your pastor.

All who performed on the instrument that night, and all who sang in the choir, and those who sang on the platform, rendered exceedingly good music. The Sunday school songs made choice of and sang upon that occasion were certainly most choice. I never listened to a better selection and to those that were better adapted to the pieces that were spoken. I will say in conclusion that I never listened to a better and more appropriate selection of declamations, recitations, dialogues, &c., than were those recited that night. Then that last song which was the closing song of the evening. Well, I can only say its music and its words have been ringing in my ears ever since. It was most superbly grand, plaintive and seemn, and was listened to by that large congregation of people with seemingly almost breathless silence. I trust that the Sunday School of that church will, in the near future, furnish the public with another such rich feast, but put your tickets on sale at the sums of 10 and 15 cents at least. I am told that the receipts of that Thursday evening were $18.90.

EAST RIDGEWAY ECHOES.

The Church of Christ in East Ridgeway is at this time holding serial meetings, which if the weather, roads and health of the neighborhood will admit, is expected to continue for two or more weeks as the interest may demand. All persons who can conveniently do so are respectively solicited to be in attendance with us in these means of grace. Rev. P. McCullough, of Oxford, Michigan, is assisting the pastor in conducting them. E. E. R.

We wish to express in the columns of your paper our most heartfelt thanks to the 37 members of the Church of Christ and members of the congregation in East Ridgeway who so completely surprised the pastor of said church and his family on New Years' night, in taking possession of the parsonage in so unceremonious a way as they did, and then from well filled baskets, that they brought with them, prepared a very palatable repast, and of which all present partook to their satisfaction. Supper concluded the company spent about three hours in a most pleasant and enjoyable and with all profitable visit together in the parsonage parlor. Then came another surprise. Dr. Nelson, of Ridgeway, who had been chosen spokesman or presentor for the occasion, came out of the parlor bed chamber shoving a very nice invalid rocking chair in front of him, with a fine fur cap on it, both of which the party had clandestinely conveyed into said bed chamber, and in a brief and most appropriate address presented them to the pastor, as a token of their appreciation of his services in the pastorship of the church and congregation of which they were members.—To the doctor's address the pastor responded in some brief remarks in expressing thanks for their munificence. We wish in this connection to express our thanks to the members of the church and congregation, mostly ladies, who on the 4th Sunday in December presented to Mrs. Rapp, at the conclusion of the Sunday school, through the hand of Supt. G. L. Oliver, 32 silver quarters. Will say in conclusion that the donations last year given to the pastor and his family from the above named church and congregation amounted to $120. For these benefactions of last year and the ones of the present year thus far the donors will please accept our heartfelt and grateful thanks.

Dr. Richardson and wife of Dundee, were the guests of Mr and Mrs. Jourdan, over Sunday.

Milan Sage has been quite sick for a few days. We are happy to report him convalescent.

Wednesday evening, Jan. 16, there was a donation at the residence of Isaiah Hendershot for the benefit of Rev. Mr. Kerridge, pastor of the M. E. church. As is always the case whenever an entertainment is held at Mr. Hendershot's, a large number were present. To say that a happy time was enjoyed would be only a fair conception. All contributed liberally so that the handsome sum of eighty dollars was realized by Mr. Kerridge. Everything seemed to be indicative of Mr. Kerridge's popularity.

We wish to make "A correction." The author of "A Correction" is laboring under a misapprehension. In the first place we said nothing concerning a "prayer circle." In the second place, the two or three to whom we referred are not christians altho' "intelligent." The saying is, "If the coat fits, put it on."

Macon Center society miss the genial face of Dr. H. D. Baker, who graduated in the medical department of the University of Michigan in the class of '83, with credit to himself and flattering compliments from the medical faculty for proficiency and ability. Dr. Baker is a young man of marked ability, and we believe he will prove himself an honor to the profession. We can cheerfully recommend him, socially and professionally, to the people of Fort Scott, Kansas, whither he goes with the sincere wishes of his numerous friends here for future success.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

George D. Arner takes the place of W. W. Brown, as teacher in school dist. No. 4.

"Free Trade" formed the day in the debate at the last meeting of the Ridgeway literary society. The society design giving a public entertainment soon, at which an admission fee will be charged, for the purpose of raising funds to pay current expenses. A very worthy cause, and deserving of a liberal share of public patronage.

The ladies' social will be held at the residence of Mrs. W. R. Wilson, on Friday eve., Jan. 25th. A special invitation is extended to all.

A new variety of oats, selling at ten dollars a bushel is the latest luxury our farmers are asked to indulge in. Some parties seeing visions of a rapid road to wealth, have purchased from ten to twenty bushels, as their hoarded wealth would allow. May they never ask to see the "fool-killer."

Some young ladies doubting a statement made in the HERALD, made a call to find out if a certain party was really and truly bullet proof. Of the result of the investigation, ye reporter does not know, for 'tis said "mysteries are some things and past finding out." Hence "so mote it be."

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Frank Price has finished up his first job of painting on a cutter. Those doubting his ability should notice the work.

The War Concert at the church last Friday eve., was well attended, and the treasurer of the M. E. society has lots of loose dimes to jingle.

The married people of Brooklyn gave a dance at the Springville hotel on Friday evening last. Twenty couple from that place and about ten couple from this vicinity participated.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases. Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which weakened the metal and leave it the pliability of gold rather than the elasticity of silver. Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily appreciated, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it. The superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, like one of Boss' gold, plated only in the center where it is used, and it will not chip, while a case of some weight of any other make will crack enough to crack the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and back.

Send five cents stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, for handsome illustrated Pamphlet showing how Boss Gold and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.
MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.
Gentlemen:—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued exceptional health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become also strengthened by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a debt you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours.
SARAH C. WHITTIER.

Burns' Blue-Eyed Lassie.

The title to a tract of about six hundred acres of land lying at the head of Cayuga Lake between the shore and the village of Ithaca is in law in that village. The heirships are exceedingly complicated, the original titles running back into the last century. The lineal contestants are two families named Renwick and Moody, the former being in possession. The Renwick heirs now living consist of children and grandchildren of Major Robert Renwick, deceased, who was the last surviving son of William and Jane Renwick, his wife. But the last named was, before her marriage with William Renwick, Miss Jane Jeffrey, of Lochmaben in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and was "The Blue-eyed Lassie" of Robert Burns' song.

Writing in 1858 to a sister-in-law in Canandaigua, N. Y., Mrs. Renwick, who retained till she died at the age of seventy-seven, remarkable cheerfulness of countenance and brightness of "een sae blue," recalls lovingly her recollections of the poet. "Poor, poor Burns," she writes to Mrs. Jeffrey, "how often have I seen him in a cold winter's night when he had been riding for hours over the moors and mosses after smugglers, (what a task for such a spirit!) open our little parlor door and stalk in with his great lion-skin coat and fur cap covered with snow, and his fine Newfoundland dog, Thurlow, at his side, looking glum and sour as if at war with the world. With kindness he was welcomed by our parents while my sister and self seated him in mother's easy chair, brought warm slippers and prepared for him a warm, comfortable cup of tea. Then seating ourselves on our low creepies at his feet we would watch his countenance brighten up into almost more than mortal beauty and intelligence, and listen to his inspired words, every one of which was absolute poetry." Mrs. Renwick had in her possession a volume, on a fly leaf of which Burns himself wrote a song celebrating in words and lines Jeanie Jeffrey's charms, the chorus of which is:

"She's aye sae blithe and gay,
She's aye sae blithe and cheery,
She's aye sae bonnie, blithe and gay,
O gin I were her deary."

But Burns was not Jeanie's deary. She married, as before stated, William Renwick, and the last of their seven children, Major Robert Renwick, was some years ago a well-known figure on the streets of Ithaca. He lived a secluded life near the lake, and his sole occupation for years was daily to drive a steady-going roan horse before a rickety but safe old wagon up to the village and back. He liked his glass, and was when in town a regular customer of a particular saloon. Often he would stay so late at night and meet so many friends at the saloon, his patient old horse meantime with head down dreaming at the hitching post, that it would be necessary for some one to accompany him back to his home, although the horse would go true if let alone by the street boys.—*N. A Universal Language.

When the electric telegraph was first proposed to the Government it was rejected for the "exhaustive" reason that it would not be wanted in time of peace, while the semaphore did all that was required in time of war. Since then, however, the electric telegraph has itself been found insufficient. In time of war the electric telegraph is supplemented by fire-signals, lamp-signals, and by a very elaborate system of flag-signaling; and the want seems to be felt, since expression has been given to it in many quarters, of an international or interlinguistic code of signs for foreigners unable to communicate with one another by word of mouth. In an interesting contribution to the National Review on the wild tribes of the Sierras, Miss Gordon Cummings tells us—first that every tribe has a language of its own, known only to its members; and next, that "the curse of Babel would weigh heavily on the great Indian nation were it not for a silent language of signs which is used by all alike. It is frequently used even in family parties, or while on the march, or on hunting expeditions, or at other times when silence is deemed desirable." It is quite as clear as the methods of communication used in deaf and dumb asylums, and more "rapid, as certain signs are used to express whole phrases and symbolical ideas." White men who have become intimate with the Indians say that if a stranger could steal unawares near an Indian camp he "might well marvel at the occasional bursts of laughter while not a voice was to be heard; yet every individual gathered round the camp-fire is all the while drinking in some very interesting story related by one of their number in the sign language." Now this is just the sort of sign-language that is wanted for universal use.—St. James' Gazette.

A Senile Wake at Los Angeles.

In 1838 there was a memorable funeral of a woman over a hundred years old. Fourteen old women watched with her body, which lay stretched on the floor, in the ancient fashion, with only a stone beneath the head. The youngest of these watchers was eighty-five. One of them, Tomasa Camera by name, was herself over a hundred years old. Tomasa was infirm of foot, so they propped her with pillows in a little cart, and drew her to the house that she might not miss of the occasion. All night long the fourteen squatted or sat on rawhides spread on the floor, and sang, and prayed, and smoked as the wake as was ever seen. They smoked cigarettes, which they rolled on the spot, out of corn-husks slit fine for the purpose, there being at that day in Los Angeles no paper fit for cigarettes.

Outside this body-guard of aged women knelt a circle of friends and relatives, also chanting, praying and smoking. In this outer circle any one might come and go at pleasure; but into the inner ring of the watching none must come, and none must go out of it till the night was spent.—Century.

Appearance and Daily Life of the Pope.

One of our correspondents has had a conversation with Rev. Philip Harry, Canon of the Cashel Cathedral. The Canon spoke as follows: "Leo XIII. is now seventy-four years of age. He is tall, thin and bony. His face is of an ivory hue, and his eyes and lips are very expressive and smiling. He looks very firm. Simeon says he resembles Voltaire, but Leo XIII.'s smile is totally different to Voltaire's smile. The Pope wears his age well and walks remarkably straight. He has snow white hair and very finely marked eyebrows. His eyes are wonderfully intelligent-looking, and his voice is extremely harmonious. He speaks several languages as well as any professor of languages. He never says a foolish thing nor does a foolish thing, like poor Pius IX., whose policy was fatal to the Pope's temporal power. He rises very early, and spends the first hours of the day in prayer, and generally in his bed-room. At six o'clock he says mass. At eight o'clock he breaks his fast with a cup of chocolate, reading his correspondence all the time. At nine o'clock he receives Jacobini and the chiefs of religious societies. At noon he receives those Roman patriarchs who have remained true to him and the Freemasons.

"At one o'clock he dines, his dinner rarely costing more than two francs, or half a dollar." "And he keeps so many cooks!" said the correspondent. "He is obliged to keep up appearances," answered the canon. "Once upon a time Popes were great eaters and drinkers, and were given to every kind of extravagance; but Leo XIII. is nothing of all this. After dinner he takes a little walk in the Vatican grounds, or he visits the museums, galleries, etc. Sometimes he is carried in a chair quilted with white satin. He is very fond of the garden, and likes to play the gardener at times. He frequently receives visitors in the garden, and talks of flowers to them to avoid other subjects. The first and second times I saw him he was in the garden. When I went with the pilgrims he was preceded by three noble guards, and at his side was Monsignor Macchi, his secret chamberlain. He wore a wide-brimmed hat and a large red cloak. We were presented to him one by one. He looked at us and scrutinized us well. I saw he recognized me, but he treated me like the others—as if he saw me also for the first time. 'Are you all Irish?' he said. 'I am happy to receive the faithful of that nation.' He then looked again at us as if he would have read into our souls. 'Your Bishop,' he continued, 'brought me offerings from a people pressed with poverty.' Then seeing me still on my knees, he offered me his hand to rise me. 'I had thought,' he continued, 'that the offerings would have decreased but it was not so. We live on charity (and here he smiled sadly) for all we had has been taken from us. Oh! the persecutions!' he cried with a loud voice. 'They purify us even when the leaven is pure and immaculate.' 'I seem to see him now,' said the canon. 'His head looked like a relief in a blue sky. The sun was setting, and he looked up to the sky as if seeking an inspiration there. 'I have heard,' he then said, 'that notwithstanding the general state of anguish in Ireland, the churches are full of people. May the Lord be praised and blessed, and may my prayers bring peace on the people! Lord, hear our prayers and judge us!'

"He then blessed us, and the audience was finished. I have never seen so much power united to so much simplicity. At four o'clock the Pope resumes his official audiences in the Vatican. At seven o'clock only he takes a little rest, but at eight o'clock he returns to work in his private rooms, where he remains until ten o'clock, when he retires for the night.'—Il Capitan Fracassa.

Railroad Etiquette.

Do not rush in and grab the first seat you see. Enter leisurely and gently as you would if the parlor were not on wheels. Bow pleasantly to the porter and give him a quarter.

Be not over particular about seats, as it will indicate that you do not travel often. Say languidly, "Oh, anywhere on the shady side," and hand the porter half a dollar. He will give you a good seat, depend upon it.

If you are so unfortunate as to need the presence of a cuspador do not go hunting around the car for one. That is exceedingly vulgar. Contrive to drop a two-dollar bill into the porter's pocket and the cuspador will be forthcoming.

In all probability the car will be as hot as an equatorial conservatory. It generally is. If you attempt to lift a window the chances are that you will fail, as you are not familiar with the secret spring which holds it. Recline lazily on your chair and watch the porter until you catch his eye, when, with a slight movement of your little finger, you can make your wants known. Enforce the sign with a rapid flight of a five-dollar bill from your pocket to his, and in a few seconds you will be enjoying a delightful breeze free from dust and cinders.

Unless an experienced traveler, the disposition of your extra wraps, baggage, etc., may bother you if you attempt to do it yourself, besides exhibiting your ignorance to a whole car-load. Nod at the porter in a familiar sort of way, slip a dollar into his hand, and in a jiffy he will have everything out of your reach and securely fastened on, in and among all sorts of contrivances which you had not even observed.

Should you become thirsty you can go to the water-cooler and take a little without extra charge.

When nearing your journey's end the porter will kindly remind you of that fact, and stand before you brush in hand. Accompany him to an alcove and add a few bills to his purse, if he can find room for them. The vigor of the brushing you receive will depend entirely on the denomination of the bills.

It is no longer considered necessary to back out of a parlor-car in order not to offend the porter. Hand him your pocket-book and he will immediately take your baggage and precede you to the platform, and most likely will bow politely as the train moves off.—Philadelphia Call.

No one can be ill if the blood is pure. Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla root have long been recognized by physicians as blood purifiers. Don't be humbugged by the advertisements of the many quack bitters, but occasionally use Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and you will live to a good old age free from all distress of mind and body. Many of our best citizens who long suffered from bad blood indicated by weak kidneys, indigestion, sores, aches, etc., owe their recovery to the use of this remedy.

By a new ruling of the post office department, labels, lotteries, photographs, playing cards, visiting cards, address tags, paper sacks, wrapping paper with printed advertisements thereon, bill heads, letter heads, envelopes, and other matter of the same general character, the printing upon which is not designed to instruct, amuse, cultivate the mind or taste or impart general information, are rated as fourth class matter; postage, one cent per ounce.

Many who long suffered from indescribable feelings of distress, lame back, aching joints, sores, swellings, weakness of the urinary and digestive organs, unnatural feelings of weariness, headache, nervousness, despondency, sleeplessness, disturbing dreams, partial insanity, etc., after doctoring liver, kidneys, nerves and brain, with the various quack nostrums of the day, and being nearly frightened to death by their alarming advertisements, quietly began using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and were agreeably surprised to quickly find themselves restored to perfect health. No other remedy equals it.

Don't make the mistake of doctoring liver and kidneys to cure consumption. If you will lay all other remedies aside and put your trust in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, it will surely benefit you. Try it for coughs and colds, and see what an excellent remedy it is.

Is Fun Better than Physic?

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. They would be more healthy, live longer and enjoy life thoroughly if they used Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all blood disorders, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, removes pimples, and is a perfect tonic. Can be taken by the most delicate. Only 50c a bottle, of Baker & Hall.

A little tot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

How often we hear middle-aged people say regarding that reliable old cough remedy, N. H. Downs' Elixir: "Why, my mother gave it to me when I was a child, and I use it in my family; it always cures." Who can name another medicine with such a record as this. Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters are another good medicine; and Arnica and Oil Liniment is just what it is recommended to be.

The life of a true Christian is like a beautiful river; it flows on, in a steady, even course the storms of life may ruffle its surface, but the deep undercurrent moves on undisturbed.

Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Kidney, Liver or Urinary Diseases.

Have no fear of any of these diseases if you use Hop Bitters, as they will prevent and cure the worst cases, even when you have been made worse by some great puffed-up pretended cure.

MEDICAL ADVICE.

Take the open air the more you take the better;
Follow nature's laws to the very letter;
Let the physicians to the bay of Biscay
Let alone the gin, the brandy and the whisky.

Freely exercise, keep your spirits cheerful;
Let no dreams of sickness make you ever fearful.
Eat the simplest food, drink the pure cold water;
Then you will be well, or at least you ought to.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow: you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. A Pretty Story.

"I believe in a providence," said Victor Hugo to a company gathered around him in the Rue de Clichy, "because I am a providence myself." Being asked for an explanation, the poet replied: "We caught a mouse yesterday evening. His death sentence was already pronounced, when my little granddaughter, Jeanne, with eyes glistening with tears, begged for the life of the gray prisoner. Her mother hesitated whether to listen to the dear little advocate or not, and in her doubt said, 'Grandfather shall decide.' So they came to me. For a moment I held the power of life and death over the diminutive creature, and I thought: The heavenly providence may find itself in my situation when the fate of a being of a higher order is to be determined. Naturally I set the mouse free; for when a man undertakes the role of providence on a small scale, he should at least imitate generosity."

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprang up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name, or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Swept into the Stream.

One Thousand Acres of Land, and "Right Smart of Bears."

On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboat stood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North: "When I was twelve years old, I killed my first bear on a new plantation my father was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acres of land went in the Mississippi years ago."

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year in the great, turbid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely to blame or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to recklessness or ignorance the simplest thing might as well be complex as a proposition in conic sections. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the cities along their shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our ailments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs.

The most effective and inclusive remedy for diseases is PARKER'S TONIC. It goes to the root of pain and weakness. It massages the stomach, the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels into their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The tonic is not, however, an intoxicant, but cures a desire for strong drink. Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have defied to cure? Hope is your help.

What Paralysis Is.

So common has become the occurrence of paralysis in recent years that many use the word for a slang expression but for all that, it is probable that a vast majority of the people who think it all of paralysis reckon that it is a disease of itself. That some medical men regard this condition is plain from the fact that deaths are frequently said to have been caused by it. In the greatness of this notion will, however, be plain when the conditions which are due to paralysis are clearly set forth, and this we now propose.

A carpenter, stack smith, or some other mechanic whose business requires him to wield a hammer, hatchet, saw, or anything else that requires a firm grasp, perhaps while at work, the left hand holding the arm, becomes numb and weak, it fails to obey his will, and he is longer able to work. The cause is usually the action upon the arm muscles of a special neurotic poison from outside sources, which means simply that the muscles have caught an infection, and it [illegible]. To these cases the popular name of [illegible] paralysis is given. Again a person, [illegible] constructed person, most likely a woman, meets with a great [illegible] or has an unpaid [illegible] [illegible] Shortly after this [illegible] a peculiar catarrhal condition and they throat are become inflamed. As if this were not variety enough I feel sharp pains in my chest, and a constant tendency to headache.

Why didn't you take the matter in hand and check it right where it was?

Why doesn't everybody do so? Simply because they think it is only some trifling and passing disorder. The symptoms did not come all at once, and I thought it an easy matter to break them. I have found, though, that every physical neglect must be paid for and with large interest. Men cannot draw drafts on their constitution without honoring them sometime. These minor symptoms I have described grew until they were giants of agony. I became more nervous, had a strange fluttering of the heart, an inability to draw a long breath, and the constitutional weakness that was very suggestive of pneumonia. How I recovered I have been so blind as not to understand, and this, my friends, I cannot imagine.

And did you do anything?

Yes, I tried all. In the struggle of life I went to Kansas and Colorado, and while in Denver I was attacked with a mysterious hemorrhage of the urinary organs and lost [illegible] pounds of solid flesh in two weeks. One day after my return I was taken with a terrible chill and soon advanced to a very severe attack of malarial fever. My left lung soon entirely filled with water and its edge and back became [illegible] their age and size. I was obliged to stay straight in bed for several weeks in the midst of the severest agony, with my arms over my head and in constant fear of suffocation.

And did you still make no attempt to cure yourself?

Yes I made frantic efforts. I tried every thing that promised to offer the least prospect of relief. I called a council of doctors and had them make an exhaustive chemical and microscopical examination of my condition. I've of the best physicians of Syracuse and several from another city said I must die.

It seemed as though their assertion was true, for my feet became cold, my mouth parched, my eyes wore a fixed glassy stare, my body was covered with a cold, clammy death sweat, and I read my fate in the anxious expressions of my family and friends.

"But the result?"

"Came at last. My wife, aroused to desperation, began to administer a remedy upon her own responsibility, and while I grew better very slowly, I gained ground surely, until, in brief, I have no trace of the terrible Bright's disease from which I was dying, and am a perfectly well man. This may sound like a romance, but it is true, and my life, health, and what I am, are due to Warner's Safe Cure which I wish was known to and used by the thousands, who, I believe, are suffering this minute as I was originally. Does not such an experience as this justify me in making a public statement?"

"It certainly does. But then Bright's disease is not a common complaint, doctor?"

"Not common! On the contrary, it is one of the most common. The trouble is, few people know they have it. It has so few marked symptoms, until its final stages, that a person may have it for years, each year getting more and more in its power and not suspect it. It is quite natural I should feel enthusiastic over this remedy, while my wife is even more so than I am. She knows of its being used with surprising results by many ladies for their own peculiar ailments, over which it has singular power."

The statement drawn out by the above interview is amply confirmed by very many of our most prominent citizens, among them being Judge Reigel and Col. James S. Goodrich, of the Times, while ton, Dwight H. Bruce and Rev. Prof. W. P. Coddington, D. D., give the remedy their heartiest endorsement. In this age of wonders, surprising things are quite common, but an experience so unusual as that of Dr. Martin's, and occurring here in our night, may well cause comment and teach a lesson. It shows the necessity of guarding the slightest approach of physical disorder, and by the means which has been proven the most reliable and efficient. It shows the depth to which one can sink and yet be rescued, and it proves that few people need suffer if these truths are observed.

Dr. David Ward of Detroit, one of the great [illegible] of Michigan, [illegible] that he is worth $[illegible]. He modestly admits, however, that perhaps he is worth $[illegible].

James Darling and John Hilliard attempted to cross from Cross Village to Beaver Island on the ice. Hilliard died in the attempt and Darling was badly frozen.

Syracuse Journal.

Something of a sensation was caused in this city yesterday by a report that one of our best known citizens was about to publish a startling confession concerning some unusual experiences during his residence in Syracuse. How the rumor originated it is impossible to say, but it proved to be not without foundation. Dr. S. G. Martin, the well known physician and surgeon, consented to the following interview.

"What good can come of your publishing anything so personal to people? Statements of some remarkable cures, of course, [illegible] well enough in all minds some truth connection. I had contemplated making a publication of some remarkable episodes that have occurred in my life but have not supplied it as yet.

"What is the nature of the story I am to tell?

"Why the fact that I am a human being, a sinner and a saint. I have passed through [illegible] the shadow of death, [illegible] and [illegible] of it was several years ago when I began to feel [illegible] weakness after retiring. Occasionally the would be varied by a soreness of the muscles and cramps in my feet and legs. I thought [illegible] would take cold and it was only a cold, and so paid no [illegible] attention to the [illegible] Shortly after this I noticed a peculiar catarrhal condition and my throat was to become inflamed. Prof. E. K. Crocker, the horse educator has been in town for the last week and has handled a number of horses during this time. He has a class of about fifty members, and each man says he is a perfect master of a horse, and would not have missed the school for much more than it cost him. He will remain in Tecumseh only a few days longer, and those persons who have vicious horses to manage, or colts to break should attend to the matter at once. He can be found at Teachout's Hotel for a few days, and will go from there to Adrian. The horsemen of Tecumseh say that Prof. Crocker is a gentleman and a thorough horseman.

C. O. Miller, who is working for B. J. Coller, of Adrian, in the music and sewing machine business, met with quite a serious accident at Britton last Monday. While crossing the M. & O. Railroad one of his sleigh runners caught in the track, when the horses gave a jump, turning the sleigh upside down, throwing him to the ground, striking on his head and shoulders and dragging him several feet. The lines broke and the team got away and ran towards Ridgeway. The sleigh struck the side of the bridge, breaking it to pieces. They were soon stopped however, without any damage to themselves. Mr. Miller sustained a few slight bruises.

Quite a Nice Letter.

Following is an extract from a letter received by the Tecumseh Lumber Co. at a recent date, which tells its own story:

I can truly say I am well pleased with the goods you have furnished me and the treatment received at your hands. I have the name of having one of the nicest and most convenient houses in this region, and inside and out is conceded by all to take the whole bakery for real beauty of design and finish, and of course without nice material it would not be that. Will speak a good word in your favor on any occasion I can.

A minstrel troupe is being organized at Ann Arbor, which together with a colored band from Ypsilanti, will start upon a tour through the state the first of next month. While Ann Arbor is perfectly willing to part with a portion of her colored population, she desires to send her heartfelt sympathy to those of her sister cities who are about to be afflicted.

The attention of our readers is respectfully called to the advertisement in another column of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., the celebrated seedsmen. They do the largest business in their line in the United States; raise the bulk of their seeds on their own farms, by the most approved methods, and have obtained a world-wide reputation for the quality and variety of the seed they put upon the market, and their integrity in filling all orders entrusted to them. Their beautiful Seed Annual for 1884, sent free to all who apply for it, will be found of practical value to all who desire to purchase seeds true to name.

Hudson Gazette: A few evenings ago a Medina farmer, having become warmly attached for the time being to a supposed friend, that stole his loose change and also his brains, started home with a team he mistook for his own. He stopped at a friend's on the way, and the latter showed him his mistake, and, thinking the farmer, in his then hilarious condition, was incompetent to pick out his own team on an empty street, kindly drove back and made the exchange. Hereafter our friend will probably hang a huge placard on his horses, worded somesomething after this style: "John Jenkins, his team."

NOT CONTENT WITH BEING THE BEST.

Whatever may be said in regard to the propensity of the management of great railway lines to provide for the public only what is actually demanded in the way of accommodations and comfort, can in no way apply to the management of the Chicago Rock Island & Pacific Railway, or as it is more familiarly known, "The Great Rock Island Route." This line has for years been recognized as the best and most comfortable route between Chicago and Kansas City and the Southwest, and has been abundantly able on this account to successfully cope with its competitors. But not satisfied with this success and its already elegant equipment, its managers have caused to be turned out of its shops at Chicago, a magnificent line of Dining Cars which go into immediate service on the Kansas City line. These cars contain all the conveniences of well furnished dining rooms, are elegant in design and finish, and models of the advanced railway art of the day. Within them meals are furnished equal to those of any first-class hotel in the land at the low rate of seventy-five cents. Travelers on this line now find on its trains all the comforts and conveniences of first-class hotels. Besides the best of first and second-class coaches there are Parlor Chair Cars which are free to all passengers holding through first-class tickets, Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars and Dining Cars.

This Company's lines—all of which are equally well equipped—extend to Council Bluffs and the West, and Minneapolis and St. Paul and the Northwest; and the deserved praises bestowed upon it by returned travelers who speak from experience, make it noted throughout the land.

We bespeak for the owners and managers of this magnificent Railway ample returns for their generous provisions for the wants of the public, which is as has already been proven by the patronage extended to this line, quick to appreciate and patronize those who prove by their deeds and generous treatment that they are devoted to its comfort and welfare.

OBITUARY.

Mr. David Berger, of Manchester, Mich., passed to his heavenly home from his earthly, Dec. 17, 1883. David Berger was born in Northumberland county, Penn., March 7, 1797. When 17 he moved with his parents to Romulus, Seneca Co., N. Y., was converted when quite young and united with the Lutheran church. Was married Jan. 5th, 1823, to Miss Jenny Fowler, of Seneca, Ontario Co., N. Y. In 1833, he, with his wife joined with the M. E. church at Pulaski, Oswego Co., N. Y., since which time they have found a home among its people at Seneca and Niagara falls, N. Y., in Jersey, then in Clinton, and Manchester, in this state, which last place they came in 1865. Soon after their arrival in this place they opened the doors of their house to the public for divine worship, and continued from that to a goodly number of years, and called down many a blessing upon the members of their household. Among the ministers of his master, who preached the truth under their roof, we mention the names of Isaac Taylor, A. C. Shaw and John Levington. For many years has the name of David Berger been enrolled upon the church record at Manchester, acting as class leader for a number of years. He erected the family altar soon after his marriage, and continued it until disease of the brain asserted unyielding sway over him. Thus during the past year his mind has been densely clouded on every subject save that of prayer, having never before been known to pray with such sublimity and grace, while sweet poetic thought would seem to spring spontaneously to his lips. His funeral solemnities were conducted by the Rev. A. B. Wood, whose beautiful words of praise so justly applied will ever be held in grateful remembrance by the family of the departed, not simply for the elaborate eulogy bestowed, but that their dead was accounted worthy the honor of the words spoken by the blessed Savior, "Behold an Israelite, in whom is no guile." Thus after a half a century of Holy service in one branch of the church of Christ, aged 76 years, 9 months, 10 days, leaving a wife and 6 children to anticipate a future reunion, was his sainted form borne by loving hands to Oak Grove cemetery, the city of the dear departed.

The Emperor Louis Napoleon smoked "of the finest cigars the world can produce." Sir S. Hereford says the Emperor's cigars were made specially for him, in Havana, of the finest tobacco grown in the Golden Belt of North Carolina, the home of the finest leaf grown. Blackwell's Bull Durham, which is made from the same leaf used in the Emperor's cigars, is a smoking tobacco and is unquestionably the best tobacco ever offered.

Blackwell's gifted daughter, Anne, in her Sketch of Alfred Tennyson, in Harper's Monthly, tells of her visit to the great poet, she found him smoking Blackwell's Bull Durham Tobacco, and he said to him by Hon. James Russell Lowell, American Minister to the Court of St. James:

"In these days of adulteration it is a comfort to smokers to be sure that the Bull Durham brand is absolutely pure, and made from the best tobacco the world produces."

Laces.

Conspicuous pointed in front are the designs in which real laces are now fashioned. Some of these are quite small, reaching only to the top of the darts, while a second size extends to the waist line, and others fall below the waist in front, a double vest, which is so much admiring for handsome corsages of velvet, satin, or silk. Point d'Venise, point de rose, point and combinations of these laces are made into collarettes and sometimes some large piece is across front of the waist, or even entirely covering it, and is then attached to a yard and a quarter of silk or satin, and the lace is gathered upon the shoulders. Very handsome short collarettes of point d'Venise are made with large open work Venetian points, and are fine. There is an effort to revive the old Honiton lace, with their light and leathery designs, and these are now shown in bridal collarettes, and for the dress and sleeves of dresses. Valenciennes is again in favor, and is especially liked for young ladies. Barbes of lace are not useful in the present style of dressing the throat, but the wide straight scarfs are suddenly revived to take to form the soft draped vest, trimming now in vogue. For fully gathered frills for the neck and sleeves one and a half yards are required of the lace. Honiton, or other heavy real lace, but of the lighter laces, such as Valenciennes, Mechlin and the darn of Oriental and Mantoupe laces, seven or eight yards are easily used, as these are all to be very full to be effective, and the frills usually extend down the front of the lace, either in one or two rows, gathered to the edge of the vest, and the side frills drawn and allowed to fall with careful grace without being fastened in a set plait or in some manner.

With ladies who have but one set of real lace the choice remains for dinner or opera and as is said for street and [illegible] Hundreds of Honiton lace are coming because they are so easily made to look like new, [illegible] each, and trimming and for the sleeves in expensive designs is still a card. The choice lace is especially Carrick, narrow, which is really midslin, with the designs accurate in horizontal stripes and the spaced between cut [illegible] with particularly smooth leaf in [illegible] and in curls that turn up [illegible] in wrist [illegible] An expensive lace that [illegible] is the Point de Venise, with its grain work [illegible] and open [illegible] and open [illegible] flowers, roses, [illegible] for this Point d'Venise [illegible] in collarettes the [illegible] and [illegible] all [illegible] [illegible] on the left side. There are also wide [illegible] that are deep enough to form a whole tablier or an apron, and are sold for $25 a card. For matin dresses and [illegible] for simple evening dresses of silk or of satin, and also for trimming the soft satins, are clusters of Mantoupe lace at $2 a card. For wholesome evening dresses and for bridesmaids there are sets of dishesse lace containing a flounce six inches wide, narrow lace for garniture, and a [illegible] lace of with corresponding designs. A bridal veil of dishesse and of point gauze, with orange blossoms and roses and lilies combined in the design, may be added to such a set, and this is in shape like a great scarf a yard and a quarter wide and more than three yards long, and may afterward be used for drapery on satin or velvet skirts. Bridesmaids' veils are most often of Spanish laces, and are only two and a half or three yards long, and cost from $20 to $40.

In black laces the handsome Spanish lace is much liked for fichus, scarfs to drape as vests, and as trimming laces, but the Escurial lace with the design outlined with a cord is the favorite. There are also many of the Spanish guipure laces with the silk designs outlined with chenille cord; this is not confined to black, but is shown in colors also, such as golden brown, Titian red, and gray laces, at $6 a yard, with fichus to match, for $6.50. The imitations of black thread lace are so fine that they are bought for trimmings by the most fastidious women.—Harper's Bazar.

Solar Theories.

A very interesting discussion upon solar theories was held at the second day's session of the National Academy of Sciences, at New Haven. It was based upon the reports of Prof. Holden and Dr. Hastings upon the solar eclipse of May 6 of the current year. The observations were taken at Caroline Island, and the conditions were favorable. Prof. Holden stated the facts upon which he rested his conclusion that the planet Vulcan, the existence of which was Leverrier's deduction from solar and planetarial perturbations, is a myth. But the chief interest of the session was created by the paper of Dr. Hastings, in which he gave the grounds for his belief that the accepted theories regarding the sun's atmosphere will have to be abandoned, and that in fact the whole question of the solar elements constitution and action must be reopened.

It is of course well known to men of science that all the theories that have been put forward are merely provisional. Many treatises have been written on the sun, and some of them are perhaps written in too confident a vein. But no astronomer of any reputation or standing has undertaken to assert that we possess any definite knowledge on the subject, nor has any hypothesis been framed which is free from very formidable objections and incongruities. Dr. Hastings sees strong reasons for doubting the theory that the sun is surrounded by an atmosphere of incandescent gas extending to a height of 600,000 miles above the photosphere, or possibly to double that height, and that some mysterious self-luminous matter is distributed through this incandescent atmosphere, together with other mysterious matter which reflects a diffusive light. He points out that this theory requires us to believe that an atmosphere from 600,000 to 1,200,000 miles deep receives no pressure, or practically no pressure, since the spectrum shows that the gaseous pressure at the limit of the chromosphere is scarcely perceptible. But he holds that the cometary evidence against the theory of a gaseous atmosphere is still stronger. Bodies approaching our earth with fourteen times its velocity encounter such a pressure at a distance of ninety miles from its surface—that is to say, at twice the assumed height of the atmosphere—as to become incandescent instantly. "But," says Dr. Hastings, "there is the direct evidence that within the limits of the orbits of the planets the density must be almost infinitely less than that of our atmosphere at every mile above the earth's surface. On the great comet of the last year passed at a distance of 90,000 miles from the sun, and therefore deep within the assumed tenuous atmosphere. The comet traversed the intermediate space for several millions of miles with a velocity 180 times that of the earth, not only without being stopped and precipitated upon the surface of the sun, but even without having been checked in the least."

This certainly is a formidable, if not an absolutely fatal, objection to the theory adopted by Prof. Young and many others, and it is by no means the only objection advanced by Dr. Hastings. Thus he points out that the [illegible] in the spectrum does not behave at all consistently, or in accordance with the current hypothesis. Sometimes it is very bright and apparent. At other times it is almost wanting. In short, says Dr. Hastings, "if the line demonstrates the existence of an atmosphere, it demonstrates also inconceivable changes in it." The editor concluded his paper with an attempted explanation of solar action based upon the diffusion of light. Prof. Young spoke in answer to him subsequently, and frankly said that "he had always thought that the accepted hypothesis was far from perfect." He added, however, that "the atmosphere of the sun was not an atmosphere in the same sense in which one speaks of the earth's atmosphere."

This is rather painfully suggestive of the shifts to which some theologians have been driven in attempting to account for the problem of evil, and which shifts Mill has so forcibly exposed in his essays on religion. If the sun's atmosphere is not what we understand by our atmosphere, then the scientific use of that term in explanation of solar phenomena is merely a shift to conceal scientific ignorance. And, indeed, it is plain enough that science has not yet discovered anything definite about the sun, all theories to the contrary notwithstanding. It is impossible to demonstrate the incandescence of the actual solar body or of its envelope or envelopes. It is impossible to explain solar action in accordance with what is known of natural law. The center of our system is to-day as profound a mystery to us as was to the Chaldeans and Akkadians and the Assyrian hypothesis of a subtle essence force called Akasa, of which the sun is the storehouse and center, is not more unintelligible than the hypotheses which our astronomers and physicists amuse themselves and perplex the lay public by putting forward.—N. Y. Tribune.

One of the Usual Sort.

"Let me have five two-cent stamps please," said a lady to the retail stamp clerk in the postoffice yesterday.

"Yessum," he said, handing them over.

"Can't you let me have them in one piece?" she asked.

"Certainly, ma'am," said the clerk. "Can I send them home for you?"

"Oh, no, I don't live far away—only on the North Side—and I'm going right home. I wouldn't want to put you to the trouble."

"No trouble at all," said the clerk. "I haven't much to do to-day and could very easily spare an hour."

"Very much obliged," said the lady, smiling sweetly. "Dear me," she said, putting on a stamp. "What a horrid bother it is to stamp letters! Why can't we send letters and let the post-office send in their bill once a month?"

"They might just as well," said the clerk, sympathizingly. "I'll mention the fact in my next message to Congress."

"Will you? How nice! But you mustn't mention my name. Say the idea was suggested by a North Side society lady, won't you?"

"Certainly, ma'am," said the clerk.

"That's the second letter I have sent to Gerty," said the lady, buttoning her gossamer. "Gerty is the sweetest girl going to Vassar now."

"How does Gerty like Vassar?" asked the clerk.

"Oh, Gerty likes Vassar first-rate; only she says they don't see much company."

"Paper! all about the election?" screamed a newsboy.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the lady. "I'd they have an election yesterday? Who is President now?"

"Arthur, I believe," said the clerk.

"Why, I thought Arthur was President last year?"

"Yes, but he is still President."

"What was the election for, then?"

"For gangers of marmalade and inspectors of hot biscuit," said the clerk.

"Oh! well, I hope they'll get good men. I attended the Woman's Congress awhile ago, and you know it was decided that the ladies ought to take more interest in public affairs. Well, good-by," and she sallied away.

"Who is that woman?" asked the next man in the line, who was shaking and shivering with rage.

"Bust me if I know," said the clerk. And the outflow of stamps proceeded.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Advertiser paper the name of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left my kidneys. I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

"When worthy men fall out, only one of them may be faulty at first, but if strife continue long, commonly both become guilty."

Don't Spill the Milk.

"There is no use crying over spilled milk," says the old saw. If you are not only bald, but have no life in the roots of your hair, there is no use crying over that either. Take both time and yourself by the forelock while there is a forelock left. Apply Parker's Hair Balsam to your hair before matters get worse. It will arrest the falling off of your hair and restore the original color, gloss and softness. It is a perfect dressing withal, clean, richly perfumed, cools and heals the scalp.

A fire at Wallaceville, Wayne county, Thursday night, destroyed the house of J. B. Wallace. Five children were thus driven out in the cold at midnight.

If You are Ruined

in health from any cause, especially from the use of any of the thousand nostrums that promise so largely, with long fictitious testimonials, have no fear. Resort to Hop Bitters at once, and in a short time you will have the most robust and blooming health.

Fred. Gordean's barn, with hay, agricultural implements and some wheat belonging to a neighbor, burned at Alcona.

Hood's Sarsaparilla,

is designed to meet the wants of those who need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and tone up the machinery of their bodies. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Hood's Sarsaparilla. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy. $1 a bottle, six for $5.

A vein of coal has been discovered on the farm of Philo Clark, four miles from Albion. The coal is said to be similar in quality to that at Corunna.

A Life Saving Present.

Mr. M. E. Aills of Hutchinson, Kan., Saved his life by a simple Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which caused him to procure a large bottle, and it completely cured him, which Doctors, change of climate and everything else had failed. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, and all Throat and Lung diseases, it is guaranteed to cure. Trial Bottles free. Large size $1.00.

Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

At Argentine, Genesee county, John Calhoun had an arm crushed while unloading logs at Stiles Bros.' mill yard.

Perfect Success.

Those two words have a vast meaning when fully comprehended. A perfect success can be truthfully applied to Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures dyspepsia, biliousness, torpidity, all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder. It is a perfect tonic and blood purifier, it keeps the skin clear and bright, drives away pimples and makes the general health excellent. Price 50 cents. Baker and Hall.

A child named Peter Lacroix, of Manistee, was fatally scalded by falling into a tub of hot water last week.

Iron, Potash, and the best vegetable alteratives, render Ayer's Sarsaparilla unequaled as a blood medicine.

Jackson county farmers feed stock on corn bought in Kansas, by the carload, at 28 cents per bushel.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs and barks. It gives tone to the stomach and makes the weak strong. Sold by druggists.

The house of Israel Friday, of near Clarkston, was burned last week.

Rev. H. W. Smith, pastor of the universalist church at Portland, has resigned his pastorate.

No matter how long you have been a sufferer from Rheumatism, there is hope of a cure since the discovery of Athlophoros—the champion remedy. Many write to confirm this. Their letters make a verdict which is unanimous, impartial, strong. As an instance, Alvin G. Vail, Crawford Co., Iowa, writes: "I send for five dollars worth of Athlophoros. The bottle I used has helped me very much. Pain all gone, but some lameness yet, and well there might be for I have been troubled for thirty-five years with rheumatism."

A Specific for Change of Life.

We are in receipt of a letter from J. T. Hamby, Esq., of Floral, Ark., in which the writer says: "Samaritan Nervine cured my female decline, and during the change of life it is a specific." Suggestive facts truly. $1.50.

—In digging for the Cape Cod Canal, there has been found, about eighteen feet below the surface, marsh mud. The fact is strong comment on the drifting cape sands, which have reared the shoals of Plymouth harbor, the bars of Chatham or Nantucket. The same diggings have brought to light, from beneath the sand, at about the same depth, the still recognizable frame of an oak flume or raceway. By tradition and town record the same flume could only belong to the ancient tide-mill, which Acadiens built in 1750, in their exile by the sea. Further inland borings have brought to the surface the smooth, wave-worn stones, which show that through the gap between the Sandwich hills the sea once flowed.—Detroit Post.

City versus Country.

I have heard good people declaim against the social life of cities as if there were really something criminal in a fondness for dinner parties, receptions, and balls, and a high degree of virtue in abstaining from such pleasures by those who could not have them if they would. I have had considerable experience of life in rural towns, and so far as it informs me I am willing to maintain that life in them is no more earnest, dignified with worthy interests and aims, than life in cities, but merely a less busy and a duller thing. The frivolous city girl's day is filled with engagements from morning to night—with shopping, paying and receiving visits, driving, in the park, and theater or ball going in the evening. Her mind is taken up with these things to the exclusion of anything like intellectual occupation—for novel reading does not come under that head. She is absorbed in pleasure-seeking in all its various kinds. The frivolous country girl has more time on her hands, but does she do anything better with it? She, too, seeks her pleasures, as many as are to be had, and sighs that there are no more of them. She shops and pays calls, and plays tennis in the afternoon instead of driving on the avenue; wishes there was a dance for the evening, but since there is not stays at home and does some fancy-work, finishes her novel, or chats with some intimate who "drops in" on her. What real difference in her character is made by the fact that she has but one party to attend during the week, where the other girls have had six? Is worldliness worse because it is on a larger scale? Is scandal about the last elopement in fashionable society more demoralizing than gossip about one's next door neighbor's son and the attention he is paying to Miss So-and-So? The virtue of minding one's own business is not more commonly practiced in rural places than in larger ones. I know of city girls who mingle with their pleasures an active care for the poor and sick, spending as much thought and time in charitable works as those who living in country places, have less demand upon their leisure. It is sad to see a man or woman spending life in thoughtless gaiety; to me, it is equally sad to see one wasting it in simple, negatively virtuous inanity. I know certain worthy persons the mere sight of whom is depressing beyond words. The vacancy of their minds oppresses me as a surface on in a strain of music distresses the ear; the dullness of their undeveloped souls, the contraction of the mental and spiritual space they are shut up in, affects me as positive pain. If it were an extern I necessity that compelled to this way of existence, the case would be hard enough, but being, as I know it is, the result of choice and habit, and that, again, the outcome of sluggish temperament and minds deprived of proper stimulus, the pity of it is the much the greater. Sometimes such people do suffer from this species of self-starvation, yet without knowing it, or at least without comprehension of the true nature of their dull unrest. Perhaps it is just such a one, of all persons, whom you will hear speaking in disparagement of "fashionable" society. In the name of reason, one exclaims internally, is it not better at least to enjoy one's self than to make an absolute nothing of one's life? To be pleased with trifles is at least no crime, but you would make it a virtue to be pleased with nothing.—November Atlantic.

Old Grimes.

This is a remarkable instance of perpetuating a man's memory, says a correspondent of the New York Tribune, who endowed no institution, founded no public library, and reared a monument (by his friends) in no fashionable cemetery. Every reader of this epitaph will give a new lease to the perpetuity of it, as the fireside memory of the quaint story is revived, and again repeat it over and over for the children to take up and continue. The facts in this narrative were incidentally gleaned from Mrs. Rebecca Harrington, nee Wigging, who was born in New Jersey, and raised near Niagara Falls, on the Canada side. Her memory is that "Old (John) Grimes" was born in Belfast, Ireland, about 1776. He was an educated man of cheerful disposition, at one time an editor in Toronto, Canada, perhaps fifty or fifty-three years ago. He subsequently engaged in the purchase of rags which he transported on a mule, and used to make his "headquarters" with one William Bigger, an uncle of the said Mrs. Harrington, who lived at Lundy's Lane, half a mile from Niagara Falls. Here Grimes would unload his merchandise, as he said, to "let the rags and mule cool off," and would sometimes stay several weeks. Soon after he began to be recognized as a regular visitor, he brought forth several copies of "The Epitaph," "Old Grimes is Dead," etc., which he said he had written and printed while in Toronto. The mound that covers him, the winds that sing his requiem, or the blossoms that exhale their sweet perfume in commemoration of his simple worth are unknown to me. I have never seen any apparently authentic account of "Old Grimes" before, and send this on a venture that you may think it acceptable.

Lengthening Short Women.

The London World tells of a new contrivance for making ladies taller. The woman who is to undergo this process is cased in very tight corset, and her feet are placed in shoes weighted with fifty pounds of lead each. She is then placed in a machine consisting of a ring, which encircles her waist, and is suspended from the ceiling at such a height as to prevent her feet from touching the ground. The pressure of the corset forces the upper part of her body upward, and the weight of the shoes stretches her from the waist downward. It is estimated that the extreme length to which the spine can be stretched by the process thus described is two inches, and that the knee and hip joints can be stretched an inch and a half more. Thus three inches and a half can be added to the height of almost any woman who has the courage to undergo the trouble and pain necessarily connected with a stretching process lasting, with brief intervals, during five or six months.

THE HERALD FOR 1884.

Advertising has become a necessity to business success, and if the trader and speculator find the use of printer's ink a paying investment why should not the newspaper publisher adopt the same method to make known his wares? Newspapers have become a necessity in every household. No well regulated family in these days thinks of getting along with only one newspaper. The daily traveller must have his trade or agricultural journal, a city political weekly, and a local sheet; the housewife needs a lady's magazine; the children sigh for a juvenile paper. The HERALD will seek to fill only one of these fields, that of a local newspaper. But it shall be our aim to make improvements in that direction and to fill that special field more thoroughly than heretofore. We shall give no chromos nor statuary, nor organs, nor sewing machines, to subscribers during the coming year. Recognizing the tendency of the times towards cheaper rates, we shall accommodate ourselves to it. We have chosen twelve publications, giving a good variety for family needs, have secured special terms on them, and can offer them in connection with the HERALD at "rock-bottom rates." No such rates have ever before been offered to our patrons. Under this club offer, however, we shall not accept elm wood or hard cider, or potatoes, or turnips on subscription.—These rates mean "cash down" with the order. The table below gives the name of each paper clubbed with the HERALD, the regular subscription price of the outside paper, and the club price of the same in connection with the HERALD. A glance at the figures will show the remarkable offer which we extend to our patrons for the New Year. We shall be prepared to take subscriptions for any paper or magazine published at reduced rates, but our special "rock-bottom" offer will be confined to the papers named in the appended list. Having done our part to give our friends the lowest figures on their reading matter for '84 we respectfully ask them to return the compliment and swell the subscription list of the HERALD during the ensuing two months beyond any number hitherto reached in its history.

13 Strike at the Bottle.

A nervous and disease-stricken old gentleman was sitting in his room on an easy-chair, his physician being at his side.

Said the old gentleman, "Now, doctor, you have been treating me for a long time, and haven't done me much good. I'm tired of all this. I want you to strike at the root of all my disorders."

Said the doctor, "Do you mean exactly what you say?"

"To be sure I do," said the venerable invalid.

"Well, here goes!" said the doctor;—and with one whack of his cane he broke to pieces the brandy-bottle which stood on the mantel.

The old gentleman was angry and excited, but he had a good answer ready for the doctor. "Doctor, if it hadn't been for your doctrine, I never would have got into the habit of drinking."

In Brown's Iron Bitters, there is strength for the debilitated, refreshment for the nervous, and new life for the broken-down.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

Charles Lanier, of Dansville, is here prospecting for the purchase of a farm.

Easlick's mill yard is filling up with logs. He contemplates starting up the mill as soon as the thermometer raises.

John Stewart returned last Thursday from a two months' visit in Ireland. He reports a pleasant journey going and while there, but a very rough sea on the return trip. He thinks there will be political trouble in Ireland.

The officers of Macon Grange were installed Friday afternoon, the 18th: Hon. W. H. Osborn officiating. "The table groaned under doughnuts and coffee."

Mrs. Beckwith, of New York, is visiting her son Frank Beckwith. She will remain until April.

Uncle John Collum has been very sick for some time, but is now on his feet again. He is over 80 years old.

Christie Miller is quite sick with inflammation of the lungs, with slight improvement to-day.

"Just because a few farmers are giving their notes for seed oats at $10 per bushel, and contracting with agents to sell their next year's crop on a commission of $2.50 per bushel, newspaper correspondents are crying "Fool-killer," "Ohio Vermin," "Bohe-me," and a'that. Why, there is a responsible organization down in Ohio who agree to collect the notes they hold against farmers for said oats and the $2,50 commission. All the farmers have to do is to collect the notes for next year's crop as taken by their agents,—whether against men of straw or what not. And they have a whole year to do it in, beside the statute of limitations. And if they never see their agents again, they have got the seed oats all the same.

The subscribers to the M. & O. railroad are utilizing their passes. J. F. Gilmore and wife took a trip to Allegan and return last week, starting Wednesday and returning Saturday. They stopped off at Hanover and stayed over night at Dr. Lee Ambrose's formerly from here, whom they report all right and doing well. They also stopped off at Addison over night at one of Mrs. Gilmore's sisters.—Frank says he never passed over so much good farming country in the same distance in all his travels.

Private houses are being deluged with leap year parties. The only protest we enter is against playing "Jersey Boys", Mollie Brooks." "The Needles Eye," etc., to instrumental music. The sense is lost. We would suggest that a few good singers organize a vocal orchestra and charge for their services; that would do away with the fatigue of both singing and playing at the same time, and the jargon and confusion from so many discordant voices. A. E.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Thermometer 28° below zero last Friday morning.

Eugene Groger lost a valuable cow last week.

Kirkby Bros. have returned to their work at Lenawee Junction.

Letters from Isaac Dowling report him shot through the arm in a skirmish with the Indians. He is in the northwestern part of Wisconsin.

John Brighton had the misfortune to lose $100 while unloading oats at the depot at Brooklyn, but on returning "Lucky John" was confronted with the little roll.

The "Turn of the Tide" was played on Thursday eve. of last week, and was quite a success, considering the intense cold.

There is to be a Washington's Birthday party at Ayer's hall, on Thursday eve., Feb. 21st. Barlow & Williams' full orchestra have been secured, which alone is a guarantee of a good party.

ADDISON ATOMS.

The thermometer indicated thirty degrees below zero in "Joeville" (the western part of town) last Friday morning. At this writing, Monday, it stands thirty-five above. If Vennor is in any way responsible for the sudden changes of the weather we move his immediate removal from the weather bureau.

A peculiar type of catching cold has been going the rounds here of late. It is somewhat amusing to see how all classes "catch on" without the usual precaution to see if the act be a popular one.

Mr. Edward Russell, whose wife died recently, has sold his house and lot on West Main street to a Mr. Van Tassel, employed for sometime past at the Exchange hotel. Mr. B. is one of the oldest residents of the place and will remove at once to the home of his brother, Mr. James Birdsall, of Raisin.

Mr. S. D. Nesmith has closed out his entire dry goods and jewelry business at Swartout's block to Mr. Horace Wilcox, of Woodstock. Mr. W. is well and favorably known at this place, Somerset and Kelley's Corners, and we predict for him a fine opening in his new business.

The fact that whiskey is a poor safeguard against cold was most fully but sadly demonstrated by Mr. Orlando Sanford, of Woodstock, on Friday afternoon of last week. Mr. S. is a man about forty years of age, without family, and possessed of a fine constitution and naturally congenial temperament. The facts connected with the incident above referred to are as follows as near as we can ascertain.—Starting out in company with a jug of whiskey to walk a distance of two miles, across lots, to the residence of Mr. R. Wheaton, he became intoxicated, and failing to get over a fence which lay across the path he paced back and forward in the snow along the line until overcome by fatigue and the intense cold he became unable to walk, and sank down against the fence, in which position he was found by some children returning from school. When taken up and cared for by the neighbors his limbs were found to be frozen so badly that amputation will probably be necessary, if indeed the poor victim should recover from the terrible ordeal.—Truly "the way of the transgressor is hard."

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

W. D. Wells has sold his blacksmith shop here and purchased one in Addison.

David Harrison has rented his farm to Peter Swick and bought the Sutton place. He will soon be a resident of Ridgeway.

The annual donation for the Ridgeway M. E. church will be held on Wednesday evening, Feb. 6. All are invited to come out and get acquainted with the new pastor and to have a good social time.

Since the HERALD mentioned the orange blossoms, it has been a query in the minds of the young'ns hereabouts to know who the lucky ones might be. But since Jay Santus came into possession of a new set of teeth his smiles put to an end the query, and to-day he visits Detroit, perhaps perhaps after something of the metallic kind: hence Mr. Editor prepare your cards for the near future.

Mr. Jack Hayes, the man who lost his leg here while working on the M. & O., is making his old friends a visit. He reports himself as feeling well and in good spirits.

There is hardly a day but some one is enquiring for a house and lot, or a lot to build upon. Some for one thing and some for another. The last one is looking up a location for a cheese factory, and this place is his choice, only that he thinks that stock can be watered easier at Britton, and we don't doubt it.

Meetings still in progress without any particular demonstrations.

Mr. Samuel Sharp and wife are at home visiting their parents.

School in Dist. No. 1 is thriving this winter, the wheat being separated from the tares under the strict discipline of A. E. Kalder, of Hillsdale co.

RIDGEWAY RATTLINGS.

Protracted meetings still distract.

Minnie Barrett is recovering from a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

Many children in this vicinity are on the sick list. The doctors pronounce it a sort of epidemic.

Mr. Enoch French, of Battle Creek, spent last Sunday with Mr. Joe Arner and family. We understand that he has a French class in this vicinity.

Mr. Ira Wilson, of Raisin, called on Ridgeway friends last Saturday eve.

Art Kelly met with what might have been a serious accident Sunday night. While returning from Britton with a friend, through carelessness on the part of the driver, the horse turned out of the beaten track and tipped the cutter into the ditch. A broken carriage top was the only mishap.

Miss Libbie Emmons has returned from a six weeks visit with her parents near Kalamazoo.

Alfred Mosher goes to Addison next Monday to work at blacksmithing. Good luck attend him.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cadmus have gone north to visit frinds. Mrs. C. goes to Kalamazoo and Mr. C. to Kalkaska.

Emmet Baker, of Monroe, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson.

Our Sunday School enjoyed a very pleasant sleighride and picnic dinner last Saturday. Four loads of happy people took a ride to Holloway and Tecumseh, inspecting the sights of each village, returning to Ridgeway for dinner, after which another sleigh ride was enjoyed. All report a very pleasant time, and party thanks are due the Superintendent and others who helped organize and conduct the festivities.

It is reported that the Literary Society will give a public literary entertainment in the audience room of the M. E. church as soon as the religious meetings cease. If this is true, we anticipate a very good presentation of an excellent program. Ridgeway has long needed a literary society and now that we have a good one started they should be greeted with a full house. Such an enterprise should be supported by the hearty good will and moral support of every christian community, and not let the ruts of old fashioned education and bigotry stand in the way of the good we may receive by such training. We but echo the sentiments of the community, and feel sure that our sentiments are endorsed by all our intelligent citizens.

MACON MOLECULES.

Rev. Mr. Carleton, of Hillsdale, preached at the Baptist church Sunday morning, and delivered a temperance address in the evening.

W. H. Crittenden has moved into his new house. Mr. Crittenden has one of the finest residences in our hamlet.

Miss Hilda Pennington returned home from Dakota last week, looking as though that "wonderland" was conducive to earthly happiness.

Jessie Collier is about to go to Milan where he has a position as clerk in a grocery and crockery store. A large circle of friends unite in wishing him success.

Owing to the inclement weather, the charade party at James Hatch's last week was not largely attended. Those who were there enjoyed the affair very much.

The funeral of James Collins' little daughter took place at the Baptist church Monday, Jan. 28. Rev. C. E. Conley, of Tecumseh, officiated.

A few Maconites hied away Monday evening to hear the much-talked-of Mattie Vickers. Well, we were satisfied that she is just immense.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Britton's hall is finished. It will be occupied by the G. A. R. post.

A jolly load of Ridgeway young folks came to town last Saturday.

The stave factory will go up as soon as the weather moderates.

A cheese factory is about to become one of the enterprises soon to be inaugurated here.

The flour and feed store of Exelby Bros. seems to be doing a flourishing business.

No school two days last week on account of the illness of Mrs. Burket, teacher.

A lively runaway last Thursday.

Ed. Rauch has so far recovered as to be able to attend to business.

When folks move into Britton they have to bring a house along, and that's what John Beasley did last week.

A series of very successful meetings are being held at the Christian church, conducted by the regular pastor, assisted by the Rev. McCullough.

An old fashioned school exhibition is being prepared for the boards at the opera house, and will come off shortly.

When the court at Newaygo stopped for breath, a few days ago, two of the attorneys improved the time by having a fight.

Last Saturday night Mrs. John Miller of Mendon, was run over by an engine, dragged about 20 rods and her person from the waist down literally torn to pieces.

An intoxicated man slept on a wood pile at Battle Creek all Saturday night, and now the doctors say the only way to save his life is to amputate both legs—they were frozen so badly.

Last Sunday evening Mrs. Elijah Andeson, an aged lady of Saranac, lost her way while returning from a neighbor's house, and wandered a long distance into the woods. Search was made and she was found, nearly frozen, bewildered and in a semi-delirious condition.

Joseph Palmer, of Carrolton, is pursued by the Fates, he thinks. On the 21st of March last he lost a child by death; April second following his wife died; May 23 he had his ankle crushed; late in November a barn containing a quantity of hay, grain, and farming implements was destroyed by fire, and last week he lost a $175 horse by drowning. He hopes for a turn in his luck.

THE MESSAGE OF THE SNOW.

All around me, through the forest
As I go,
Shining white in glittering radiance,
Lies the snow;
Through the silent, motionless air,
Near and distant—everywhere—
Soft and silent, pure and fair—
Falls the snow.

All the summer bright flowers slumbered
Neath the snow;
Sipping brooklets gently murmured—
Silent now.
Behind in Winter's icy chasms,
While King Frost triumphant reigns,
Silenced, too, the silver rills, strains,
By the snow.

Tiny snow-drops peep already
Through the snow,
Flowers blanched with timid terror
Of the snow.
Yet they nestle cosily here!
Whispering softly—"Spring is near;
Soon will vanish Winter drear
And the snow."

Lone, I tread with lingering footsteps
Over the snow,
While it casts a spell upon me
For the snow.

FIFTY POUNDS REWARD.

When a young married clerk suddenly loses his situation in a prominent bank where employers are reducing their hands, it does not follow that work can be had for the asking in London, and so Mr. Tom Craven found himself still seeking employment many months after his savings had dwindled down to a few pounds. The last resource of the young couple was the sale of every available art[illegible] of value they possessed, and when [illegible] young Mrs. Craven was in the point of starting to sell the last remaining valuable—namely, her husband's books.

"The children must live," said the young man, looking at two tiny figures in the bed [illegible] my other clothes are made for, so the books are no use to me. The only trouble is that you should have to take them, Clara."

"But, Tom, you can't go without books."

"I've got slippers," replied Tom. "Make haste, dear—[illegible] will say you in the lane."

Determined to keep up, Clara stooped for the books. "Shopping must turn up soon—perhaps [illegible] will hear from Brown & Co. this morning," she said.

"Very likely," responded Tom, in a despairing tone. [illegible]

[illegible] take him back [illegible] of success.

Quickly the heart-sick [illegible] into an old leather bag, and Mrs. Craven dressed herself in [illegible] waterproof and bonnet and [illegible] a thick veil. Hastily [illegible] the creaking old stairs and into the narrow street which [illegible] into which the lane opened [illegible] was one of those [illegible] Westminster streets which [illegible] the dwellings of the great and [illegible] disreputable [illegible]. The respectable servants [illegible] all hours, reduced [illegible] the shop-girls [illegible] other [illegible] remarkable [illegible].

Gusts of wind made the street lamps flicker and cast strange shadows as Clara Craven [illegible] towards the shop where "[illegible]" clothing was purchased. She passed a few doors off to let some persons go on their errand for she was sorely ashamed of her errand, and as she stood there her eyes fell on a placard that was fixed under the light of a lamp on the wall of a [illegible] station.

"£50 Reward."

"Fifty pounds! How nice to get it!" thought Mrs. Craven, and then she took another look to see if the [illegible] was clear for the business she had in hand. Two more people were coming, [illegible] went her eyes to the placard, and she read that this reward was offered to any person who would give such information as would lead to the apprehension of the perpetrator of a daring jewel robbery.

"Wish I could get a chance like that," said Clara to herself, half laughing, half sadly, and when she turned again towards the watch-shop she saw she might venture in. After [illegible] her husband's work disappointed in every possible manner, she finally accepted the pittance proffered, and then slipped back into the street, where she purchased a few of the absolute necessaries of life, and ordered some coals, which a greengrocer's boy wheeled in a barrow to her door, and then [illegible] the door [illegible].

"Would you mind carrying them up to my room in two baskets-full, if I give you twopence?" asked Clara, meekly.

The boy nodded by way of answer, and the young wife opened the door with her latch-key, and ran up for an old basket. While she was getting out of her room a man had [illegible] the house and passed up the stairs. The coal-boy never noticed him, for his back was turned to the door, and he was eagerly watching the signs of an approaching fight between two toughs on an opposite door-step. The staircase was very dark, so when Clara came down with the basket the man had squeezed himself into a corner unobserved; and when she went on her way, the stranger passed on to the top of the house, and entered the room behind that occupied by the Cravens.

An hour later a snug glow of fire warmed the young couple and their children, and the latter, having been satisfied with a meal, went sound asleep. Tom watched his wife's busy fingers mending shabby clothes for awhile, and then he, too, went to bed, sharing her fervent hope that "something would turn up to-morrow."

And so it came about that, when all were fast asleep, Clara sat on by the fire that still burned cheerily; and after eleven strokes had fallen slowly from the big clock, and the restless roar of traffic was somewhat less in the ever busy streets, her hands lay idle in her lap, and she blew out the candle to save its light for another time, and turned such a sad young face, such troubled blue eyes, upon the flickering fire that it seemed hard, hard so young a life should be so old in sorrow.

A sound of voices in the next room roused her. There was a door of communication between the two rooms, which was of course locked, but which made sounds easily heard. Clara knew that their neighbor was an elderly woman, she had met her on the stairs sometimes, and she wondered who her visitor could be at such an hour. Then the sound of frightened sobbing and expostulation made her listen attentively, for she feared her neighbor was in trouble, and determined to rouse her husband, if necessary.

"Not yet, Joe! Oh, don't say you must go yet!"

"Mother, I've stayed too long already. They'll be after me sharp now the reward's out! Think of £50, mother! The men who tempted me, and got the jewels, would round on me to win and get the reward."

Fire was it, then! But one sight would be four stood between Clara and the thief she had wished she could find time to step round the corner. There! she knew, was the police station, and, for the news she brought them she would get £50! She clasped her hands tight, and sat perfectly still, all the while knowing that every second lessened her chance of securing the living prize of property valued at £50. In her present straits, £50 seemed a fortune to her. No one who has not gone through a similar experience can ever know what that temptation was to Mrs. Craven. As she sat, her strained ears caught the mother's voice again.

"I'll not keep you, though my heart is breaking. My bonny boy, come to this! Oh, God, most merciful, save him from a felon's doom!"

"Mother, pray for me. If I escape, I vow to lead an honest life and make a home for you. It has not been my fault. Pray God to forgive and help me."

Clara's grasp of her hands relaxed. Then, with white face and sorrowful eyes, she stood up and looked at her two thieving sleeping boys. Then on her knees she fell, and stayed in earnest prayer until she heard the stealthy footsteps creep down the stairs, and the front door closed, and then she stole to the window of her darkened room, and, looking out into the lamp-lit street, watched a quick walking figure in an old country woman's cloak with a deep cape, and a large poke bonnet, such as her old neighbor always wore, and she knew that the young man had escaped in his mother's clothes.

II.

One of the most old-fashioned houses in an old country town was Miss Greybrook's. A steep flight of immaculately clean steps led from the pavement of the High street to her hall door with its shining brass knocker and bell-handle. On each side of this hall door was a large bay-window, just high enough to raise it inconvenient for any one to offer to shake hands with Miss Greybrook when they were in the street and she was tending her flowers in the window. At the back of the broad hall that went straight across the house there were stays leading down into large, well-kept gardens, and these were inclosed by a substantial brick wall that effectually prevented the fruit and flowers from profaning strangers.

Inside the house everything was expressive of wealth and solid comfort. Miss Greybrook herself was regarded by the townspeople as peculiar, but her peculiarities, being unmitigated by riches, she was never made to feel it unpleasantly. In person she was tall and angular, and a pair of piercing black eyes that shone out in vivid contrast to her gray hair gave her a remarkable appearance. Her caps were always made high and her dresses shorter than anybody else's, and she made no change for fashion or favor.

Now this old lady was Mr. Tom Craven's godmother. And, on the very cold, dull winter morning of which I have now to speak, she had risen from her high-backed chair in front of the bright steel fender at sound of the postman's knock, and advanced to meet the elderly servant who brought in the letters on a silver salver.

"Stop! from him," said the old lady, when she was alone again, turning over four others eagerly in search of a handwriting that was not there. "Poor and proud, like his father! Well, I've seen much folly in my time, but if he refuses my offer, a question if there is a companion left for such a man."

It was three weeks since she had written to Tom Craven, addressing her letter to the office of Brown & Co., by whom she thought he was still employed, and offering to overlook the hideous mistake he had made in marrying a penniless orphan-girl, and to devote a substantial sum to further his prospects in life. On the very morning that she was bewailing openly her godson's pride, and secretly her own, our friend Tom received a reply to the letter he had sent to Brown & Co., politely regretting that they could do nothing further to help him, and inclosing Miss Greybrook's letter, which had been lying nearly three weeks at their office.

Clara, with the sadness of the last night's struggle still upon her, ran down the rickety stairs at sound of the postman's knock, and received the letter for her husband. When she arrived, breathless, at the top floor again, she watched his face as he opened it. The few polite lines from the business men fell unread to the ground, while the envelope they inclosed was torn eagerly open. Clara looked over his shoulder and read, too, and then with one glance at the renewed light and vigor in his worn, anxious face, she relinquished her role of bravery, and cried out the misery of months in his arms. Bobby waked and Bertie crawled to the scene of action, and seeing their mother in tears, lent a shrill aid to the chorus. Upon which they were kissed, blessed and cried over till they thought the world (represented to them by their father and mother) had gone mad. When partial calmness had returned, Tom spoke joyously:

"Now wife, sell something of your small store, and send a telegram from me to the dear old girl!"

"Tom!" cried Clara, laughing through her tears, "how disrespectful!"

But the telegram was sent and brought in solemn wonderment to Miss Greybrook before ten o'clock by the postmaster himself. When once she had the opened paper in front of her eyes, and devoured the information that her godson was in London, and desirous of seeing her immediately, she gave orders for a fly to be in readiness to catch the next up-train, and that her fur traveling cloak and boots should be put to the fire immediately. In the anxiety that all the domestics felt to take a share in the general excitement, Miss Greybrook's cloak threatened to be torn in pieces, and when wanted, one fur boot was found warming in front of the kitchen fire, the other reposing on the sheep-skin rug beside the drawing-room steel fender. However, vouchsafing never a word of explanation, but, happily for the sanity of those she left behind, dropping the telegram in the hall as she walked out to the fly, Miss Greybrook started alone on her travels.

The dull foggy shades of a London winter evening had gathered, and two big and two little faces were pressed tight against the grimy top window of a house in a Westminster street, as a cab drove up.

"Go and bring her up-stairs, Clara," said Tom. "I can't go in my slippers."

"Yes—but I'm so afraid of her."

All fears were obliged to disappear, however, for the object of them had not waited to be brought up. She had intimidated the landlady by the commanding voice in which she had desired to be shown to the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Greybrook Craven; and that fat and lazy person had preceded the strange lady rapidly up so many flights that on reaching the top landing Miss Greybrook stood silent and stately, for she could not speak. She waved the landlady down again, just as the latter wanted to look in and see what would happen next.

Then Tom advanced, and his godmother kissed him first, then his wife. Then, observing Bobby and Bertie, she grimly smiled, and remarked aloud, but to herself, evidently:

"Children, of course!—being as poor as church mice."

Looking round the wretched room, and shaking the three chairs, she chose the least rickety, and sat down.

"Pack up—haven't got much to pack that I can see. You must all come back with me to-night."

Tom Craven and his wife exchanged glances, and at last Tom deferentially ventured to speak:

"You see, dear godmother, we—we need a few things to make us presentable at your house."

"Eh! what? My house is my own. Come as you are."

The worst must be said, then! "But—please excuse such a state of matters, but—I've got no boots."

Miss Greybrook gasped, and stared from one to the other.

"Boots! my godson without boots? Here, Clara—that's your name, I believe—run out, child, and buy all you need for everybody, and let us get out of this place! I can't breathe."

Away ran poor Clara, holding the fat purse Miss Greybrook pushed into her hand, and all unconscious what she carried in it. It felt so full, however, that she took a cab, and drove first to a boot shop where she purchased for her husband, her children and herself. Then came a big overcoat for Tom, and wraps for the little ones—and she told the cab-man to drive home fast. She had paid for her purchases with gold, and bank notes crackled as she closed the purse.

Miss Greybrook carried out her intention, and bustled them all off to the station. The children slept all the way in the comfortable first-class carriage. It was eleven o'clock when they drove up to the door of the old lady's house, and she grimly counted five heads in nightcaps thrust out into the night air from her neighbor's windows—amongst them the Rector's with a flannel rolled round as extra protection.

Inside the house all was done in the right way as soon as the word was given.

"My godson, his wife and children have come to live with me. Light large fires in the two best rooms, and get supper."

III.

Three years had passed. Tom was flourishing in a large firm in a seaport town where his godmother's money had bought him a partnership. It was only a short daily railway journey to his work, and he and his family were still happy inmates of Miss Greybrook's house. One day Clara accompanied her husband to this seaport town, and before taking leave of him at his office door, and proceeding to make the purchase which was her ostensible reason for bringing her bonnie face and fresh winter costume through the grimy streets, she waited while he went in for a book he wanted her to change.

While she was standing outside, great crowds of poor, respectable-looking people came in and passed on to a large room beyond. She was told they were emigrants, just about to start for New Zealand. She watched their faces with kindly interest as young and old passed by, and presently a woman who seemed old to be thinking of such a journey dropped her purse just in front of Clara, who stooped to pick it up. In returning it she saw what made her stop the woman and eagerly question her. Yes, it was her fellow lodger in the old Westminster street, and with a face of quiet happiness she told the lady that a young son who had gone to New Zealand three years before had sent her money to join him. "He's my only one, ma'am, and was a trouble to me once, but praise God he's doing well now!"

Then Clara in gentle tones wished her well, and when her husband came back to her she reminded him of the events of that miserable night which seemed so far—so very far off from the prosperous to-day and in a hushed and reverent tone, she said:

"Thank God, Tom, we never had that '£50 Reward!'"—Minnie Douglas, in Argosy.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. It stops falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals purely every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, this Vigor is unequalled. It contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy and pliable, of a superior texture, and a favorite vegetable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICKER, [illegible] Ky., July 8, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I was nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER's HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that by the use of your preparation I am now have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER's HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not a claim is known edge has the preparation ever failed [illegible]."

MR. ANDREW FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 8, 1882: "Your hair vigor began to give results in a few days after the change which nothing else had done. I have used AYER's HAIR VIGOR [illegible] and have been [illegible] of your [illegible] a bottle [illegible] a valuable compound [illegible] and [illegible] any one who [illegible]."

Mrs. A. Parks, [illegible] writes: "[illegible] AYER's HAIR VIGOR. It has completely stopped my hair from falling out, and I have had a good growth of new hair. It has [illegible] as a dressing."

We have frequently [illegible] testimonials to the efficacy of AYER's HAIR VIGOR. It invariably satisfies those who use the most skeptical.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and got in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accumulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 17, 1883.

In outlay and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give cheerful testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against pressure than any other cases in the market. PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

New Proprietor! New Editors! New Life and Blood!

Six months ago THE WORLD commenced its new career. Its growth has been unprecedented. Its wonderful advance in circulation, in advertising, in influence, in popularity, warrants the claim of a leading position in New York journalism.

No expense or effort will be spared until THE WORLD is recognized as the GREATEST as well as the BRIGHTEST and CHEAPEST PAPER IN AMERICA.

THE WORLD, as the leading Democratic newspaper in the country, knows no faction and recognizes no individual ambitions or aspirations aside from the general good of the party and the Republic. It seeks the triumph of principles—not men. It upholds great Democratic ideas and [illegible] of the party.

At the entrance of the new year the new World desires to express its gratitude for the hearty welcome it has received and the magnificent success it has already achieved. Its welcome comes from the people. Its success is their work. They have indorsed its merits by more than trebling its circulation in six months, and by doubling its advertising. For this they are entitled to our warm thanks.

No Democrat ought to be happy without THE WORLD. We call upon our Democratic friends in every town and handlet in the Union to start clubs for the Weekly. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician, or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty smoothly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like

It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all the weary life and energy.

Mind that you need not take our word for your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle. He will tell you that "It's the best medicine I ever invested."

LEBANON, N. H., Feb. 14, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Sarsaparilla, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,
F. C. CHURCHILL,
(Firm of Carter & Churchill.)

FITS A Leading London Physician establishes an Office in New York for the Cure of EPILEPTIC FITS. From Am. Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Ab. Meserole (late of London), who makes a specialty of Epilepsy, has without doubt treated and cured more cases than any other living physician. His success has simply been astonishing; we have heard of cases of over 20 years' standing successfully cured by him. He has published a work on this disease, which he sends free with a large bottle of his wonderful cure free to any sufferer who may send their express and P. O. Address. We advise any one wishing a cure to address

Dr. AB. MESEROLE, No. 96 John St., New York.

USEFUL AND SUGGESTIVE.

—In frying meat, fish or fowl, if you set it back on the stove to cool in the fat. Always take up while it is boiling hot.—Boston Globe.

—Delicate Cake: Whites of [illegible] eggs, three-quarters of a pound of butter, one pound of flour, one pound of sugar. Flavor with bitter almond—just enough to detect it. Mix like fruit cake batter and put in quicker oven.—The Household.

—Experience has shown that the greater part of the large farm is unprofitable, and that it would be policy for the owner to confine his labors and brains to fewer acres, even if some of the farm should be cast aside, or better still, put into permanent pasture on which to allow stock to range.—Chicago Times.

—Pudding made of cracked wheat is very agreeable and nourishing. To one quart of sweet milk allow nearly half a cup full of cracked wheat; put it in a pudding-dish and bake slowly for two hours, stirring it several times. If you choose to do so you can add raisins and a little cinnamon for flavoring, but most people prefer it well salted, and to eat it with a little cream and sugar. This is nice both warm and cold.—Chicago Journal.

—Mowing an acre to get five hundred pounds of hay when the same land might produce at least three tons; raising eighty bushels of potatoes when no more labor is required to raise three hundred, except to pick them up; raising three-year-old steers when two-year-olds can be made to weigh eighteen hundred pounds with only half the feed that the three-year-old requires, are among the things the world now justly declares are old fogyisms.—Troy Times.

—Pressed Chicken: Boil one or two chickens in a small quantity of water, salt to taste, and when thoroughly done, take all the meat from the bones, having removed the skin; chop the light and dark meat separately and season to taste. Put a layer of light and dark meat alternately into a crock, till all the meat is used, pour over it the liquor in which it was boiled, and put on it a small weight. When cold, cut in slices and serve. Cracker crumbs may be mixed with the meat if desired.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Farmer's Most Active Enemy.

This destroyer of the farmer's hard-earned savings is on every farm, in every house, and never leaves us day or night, summer or winter. It damages at midnight and destroys at noonday. The marks of its teeth may be seen on the pasture fence, it is wasting the barn sills and pegging away at your sulky plow. Even iron and steel are not exempt from its ravages. The plow comes in from the field bright with use next week it needs several hours of work and worry to make it scour. You lend your new bright hand-saw to a neighbor, who kindly leaves it lying on the grass a night or two, and its condition when returned mars its usefulness and lessens your faith in human nature. A careless farmer leaves his new mower in the field or the fence-corner until next summer, by which time this fell destroyer has damaged it one-third of its value. The sections are black with rust, the journals are all gummed, and the wood-work is penetrated and weakened in every part.

Those who have read thus far, will have recognized this enemy as rust, rot or decay, the most active promoter of which is oxygen. The invisible gas forms one-fifth of the entire bulk of the air, and eight-ninths of the weight of all the water on the globe. While of the greatest value in the economy of life, it is also a destructive agent of the most untiring kind. Yet its ravages are easily checked in many instances. A thin covering of some oil will perfectly protect steel and iron from its action. A coat of paint good enough to keep water from soaking into wood, will protect it from decay almost indefinitely. In the far West, where building is somewhat more expensive than in the East, farmers are disposed to leave their farm-tools out of doors the year round. Such men are making a great mistake. If they are not able to afford shelter for their tools, they can buy a gallon of paint, which, if carefully applied to the wood-work, will go a long way towards protecting it from decay. It is certain that if the farmers of any State would expend $1,000 for paint next year for this purpose, they would save $10,000 now likely to be utterly lost. If any one thinks this overstated, let him look around among his neighbors, and see the hundreds and hundreds of dollars' worth of machinery that is going to ruin from decay, which a little paint would prevent. Here at least in the protection of farm implements a penny saved is as good as a penny earned.—American Agriculturist.

Points About Sealskins.

Fine, close pile and soft, pliable pelts are the first considerations in choosing a first-rate sealskin, and, as several are required to make a mantle or cloak, or jacket of any considerable size, it is important that there should be uniformity of quality, hue and luster. Latterly the very dark colors have been most fashionable; but at the present time there appears to be a tendency toward the red or Vandyke brown. Only the best skins, however, will take the rich, dark color. Many skins are poor; and the fur is thin, in consequence of the animals having been killed in the summer season. This defect is easily seen by imitating the method of the trapper—holding the skin upside down and blowing gently, in order to see whether the fur is close and fine—a plan which applies to most other furs beside seal.

The wearing qualities of all furs depend largely on the care which is taken of them, and wearing them a few days in warm weather injures them more than months' use in cold weather. If a sealskin becomes wet from being caught in snow or rain, shake the water off and wipe with a soft, dry and perfectly clean cloth the way of the fur, which should run upward. Then hang the garment up to dry in a cool place, and, when dry, brush carefully, and no harm will result. If the fur should mat from neglect when wet, take it to a furrier, who will probably find no difficulty in restoring it to its original beauty and gloss.—Boston Herald.

Irish Wit.

In repartee Irishmen have long been distinguished. The joy of retaliation is a marked characteristic of the race. On one occasion Judge Porter, a popular Irish magistrate, in pronouncing the sentence of the court, said to a notorious drunkard: "You will be confined in jail for the longest period the law will allow, and I sincerely hope you will devote some portion of the time to cursing whisky." "By the powers I will!" was the answer; "and Porter, too."

A steamboat passenger not finding his handkerchief readily, somewhat suspiciously inquired of an Irishman who stood beside him, if he had seen it, and insinuated a charge of theft; but afterward finding the said article in his hat, began to apologize. "Oh," said Pat, "don't be after saying another single word; it was a mere mistake, and on both sides, too. You took me for a thief, and I took you for a jintleman."

"I engaged," said a burly lawyer, "a chaise at Galway to conduct me some few miles into the country, and had proceeded some distance, when it came to a sudden standstill at the beginning of a rather steep incline, and the coachman leaping to the ground, came to the door and opened it. 'What are you at man? What are you at, man? This is not where I ordered you to stop. Has the animal jibbed?' 'Whist, yer honor, whist!' said Paddy in an undertone. 'I'm only desaving the sly baste. I'll jist bang the door; and the crafty ould cratur will think he's intirely got rid of yer honor's splendid form, and he'll be at the top of the hill in no time.'"

The following are a few instances of those amusing blunders, proverbially termed "bulls."

On the edge of a small river in the county of Cavan, in Ireland, there is—or used to be—a stone with the following inscription cut upon it, no doubt intended for the information of strangers traveling that way: "N. B.—When this stone is out of sight, it is not safe to ford the river."

But the above is almost if not quite surpassed by the famous post erected a few years since by the surveyors of the Kent roads, in England: "This is the bridle-path to Faversham. If you can't read this, you had better keep to the main road."

In a debate which took place in the Irish House of Commons in 1795, on the Leather Tax, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Plunkett, observed, with great emphasis: "That in the prosecution of the present war every man ought to give his last guinea to protect the remainder." Mr. Vandaleur said: "However that might be, the tax on leather would be severely felt by the bare-footed peasantry of Ireland." To which Sir B. Roche replied that "this could be easily remedied by making the under leathers of wood."

The following is from the latter portion of an extremely affectionate poetic epistle, addressed to an Irish maiden:

I'm yours to command, both in sweepin' and laughter;
I'm awake all the night, that of you I may dhraime;
I'd hang meself now, if you'd marry me arther;
And though I may change, I'll be ever the same.

A Dublin advertisement informs us that an Irish doctor has taken a house in Liffey street, where the deaf may hear of him at all hours; but as his blind patients see him every day from ten till four, they must come at some other time. And the following bill was once presented by a farrier to a tradesman in the town: "For intirely curing your black pony that died, immediate payment is requested of one guinea."

An anecdote is also related of a professor, whose pupils making too much noise, felt called upon to remind them of the fact, and said: "Gentlemen, if every one of you will do me the favor of remaining perfectly silent for a few minutes, we shall be better able to distinguish who the individual is that is making the row;" which is quite equal to a medical report which began thus: "There exist at the present time a great many influential families in Dublin who have all died of the cholera."

Speech-Recording Invention.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the Vienna Electrical Exhibition is Gruffin's glossograph, a little instrument by which speech is automatically reproduced as soon as uttered. A small apparatus is placed in the mouth of the speaker—in contact with the roof of his mouth, his tongue and lips—and on being connected with an electro-magnetic registering apparatus the sounds are committed to paper. It is constructed in such a manner as not to cause any inconvenience to the speaker, neither is it necessary that the voice should be raised, as it reproduces a whisper as exactly as a shout; the only condition is a correct and distinct articulation. According to the inventor's calculation, it will be possible to write four or five times as fast by means of the glossograph as has hitherto been possible even by the quickest writer. The chief obstacle to the introduction of the glossograph, says the Pall Mall Gazette, will be the difficulty in deciphering the characters, but it is not impossible that, with the help of a second automatic apparatus, the characters produced by the glossograph may be translated into our common type-writing. The orthography would doubtless appear strange, but in these days of phonetic spelling this might not long be a hindrance.

Fatal Nearsightedness.

When the late Richard H. Dana was running in a certain district for Congress, he told an influential shoemaker, whom it was policy to win over, "If I meet you on the street and fail to bow to you, you must not think it is because I am unwilling to recognize a man in your walk of life, or am thinking of the difference in our social positions. It will be simply because I am nearsighted." Richard H. Dana was beaten, largely by that shoemaker.

A western paper says that the girls out that way have adopted this as their leap year motto, "If you see anything you want ask for it."

How often we hear middle-aged people say regarding that reliable old cough remedy, N. H. Downs' Elixir: "Why, my mother gave it to me when I was a child, and I use it in my family; it always cures." Who can name another medicine with such a record as this. Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters are another good medicine; and Arnica and Oil Liniment is just what it is recommended to be.

Eleven posts of the G. A. R., of Ottawa, Muskegon, Oceana and Newaygo counties, have organized a Northwestern Mich. G. A. R. battalion.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprang up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Swept into the Stream,

One Thousand Acres of Land, and "Right Smart of Bears."

On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboat stood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North: "When I was twelve years old, I killed my first bear on a new plantation my father was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acres of land went into the Mississippi years ago."

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turbid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to recklessness or ignorance the simplest thing might as well be complex as a proposition in Conic Sections. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the cities along their shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our ailments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs.

The most effective and inclusive remedy for disease is PARKER'S TONIC. It goes to the sources of pain and weakness. In response to its action, the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart begin their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The tonic is not, however, an intoxicant, but cures a desire for strong drink. Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have refused to yield to other agents? Here is your help.

PARKER'S TONIC

Makes fast and firm friends of all who use it. Invigorates the kidneys, liver, bowels and stomach and purifies the blood. Pleases the palate, stirs the circulation and cheers the mind. To women and aged persons it imparts strength and hopefulness. The best known antidote to the liquor habit. 50c and $1 sizes.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 31, 1884.

The possibility of civilizing the Indians is no longer a matter of doubt. A noble red man of Arizona has lately [illegible] knocked out his brains out with a pistol.

A western paper says the Mormons are all cowards. That kind of talk is unmentionable. A man who will deserting a good home and eight or ten matrimonial ties at once, what ever he other failings may be, is not a coward.

The Chicago News says the effort to get Roscoe Conkling and Grant into the same council chamber has not proved a success, so far. The placating politicians who are trying to bring the scheme to pass claim that no Republican blanket is big enough to cover the bickering crowd.

A Toledo man's wife spent $400 for a seal-skin sacque, and his property was sold to pay taxes on that account. Since then he has the following posted in his hat: "Single women are born fools; others become fools after they are married, and the rest are fools because they are determined to be so."

There is not a single distillery in operation within the State of Michigan and but few breweries. The argument used against prohibition in Ohio, that it would ruin large business investments, has but little force in this State. The money spent for liquor in Michigan goes to enrich outsiders.

Senator Sherman has introduced a resolution designed to precipitate a hot political discussion in the Senate. This is not at all surprising. As the next campaign is approaching it becomes necessary to put the "Southern Outrage" bill in repair and grease the machinery ready for grinding.

The Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Co. have purchased the National lines, which embrace the West Shore and Nickel Plate systems and control four lines between New York and Chicago. The business community will welcome the growth of the Baltimore & Ohio system, for it cannot be absorbed by the Western Union.

Eggs are retailing at thirty-five cents per dozen and cannot be bought even at that price. Sixteen million dozen eggs were imported into this country last year duty free. Which moves the Jackson Patriot to remark: "Ought not our hens to be protected like other 'infant industries,' or do those who pay thirty cents per dozen think that the price is dear enough without protection to the native product?"

The Chicago News thus touches up its Detroit namesake:

Mr. James E. Scripps, manager of the Detroit News hesitates about giving up that $20,000 he was assessed for liveing a Michigan doctor. We do not know how it is in Detroit, but in almost every other community a man would pay the Evil and thank God for the privilege of getting away from a doctor with his life. We fear Brother Scripps is one of those pernicious, inappreciative persons whose proper sphere is Indiana or Ohio.

The debate on the Fitz John Porter bill is dragging its slow length along. An effort is made to give it a partisan bias, but the sentiment of conservative Republicans is expressed in those few comments from the Philadelphia Times:

The nation has doubly wronged Fitz John Porter. It has first committed a most atrocious wrong by branding him as a traitor, and making him an alien and a stranger to the government for which he freely offered his life. It has next intensified that fearful wrong by the promotion of General Pope whose incompetency or worse could be hidden only by the unjust condemnation of Porter. Pope merited dismissal first as a fool and next as a malicious prosecutor of the innocent to conceal his folly; but Pope is a full Major General, and Fitz John Porter, who saved the army from Pope's imbecility, is a convict with every honest soldier and every honest citizen testifying to the consuming shame of his conviction. The country has no patience with the phrenzied partisans who, in ignorance or prejudice, resist the effort to restore Fitz John Porter to citizenship and rank in the army. It is one of the darkest shadows on the history of the Republic that it has not been done long ago, and every year it has been delayed has widened and emphasized the demand for even-handed justice to the gallant soldier who has been dishonored to save pretenders from dishonor.

A MINE HORROR.

Fifty-Seven Human Beings in the Ruins, all of Whom are Supposed to be Dead.

The Entrance Closed by a Terrible Explosion—Fruitless Efforts to Rescue the Imprisoned Miners—Names of the Missing Men.

DENVER, Jan. 28.—The Times Gunnison special says: A terrible explosion occurred at eight o'clock yesterday morning in the Colorado Coal and Iron Company's mine at Crested Butte. So far only the most meager details have been received here, but the loss of life is supposed to be terrible. There were sixty-seven men in the mine at the time. Of these, eleven who were just entering were thrown back to the entrance by the force of the explosion and have been rescued. One of these is dead. All the others are badly injured. There are fifty-six men yet in the mine, and that cannot be reached. They are all supposed to be dead.

The explosion was of such force as to entirely wreck the engine house, which stood fifty feet from the entrance. It is supposed the explosion was caused by a leak in the air compressor. Crested Butte people are doing all possible to rescue the miners. Two special trains have gone up from Gunnison with doctors and others on board.

LATER.—The explosion at Crested Butte mine yesterday morning was one of the most appalling that ever occurred in a mine in this country. Crested Butte is near Anthracite, the coal depot for the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, and the mine is owned by the town. The exact number of the men who are in the mine is not definitely known, but is supposed to have reached sixty-five. The explosion occurred either in chambers No. 1 or No. 2 just half an hour after the day force of sixty-seven men had gone to work. There were ten men at work in the chamber. Four of these escaped without except one man, John Andros, who was in the passageway just outside the chamber. He is badly burned, but will recover. Fifty-seven men were at work in chambers Nos. 1 and 2; these are all thought to have perished.

The explosion was of such force as to completely barricade the main entrance, and the appliances for supplying air located there were badly wrecked, and the roof of the tramway was taken off. The men at work on the anthracite were the night force of the C., C. & I. Company's mines. The citizens generally were working hard all day to rescue the men, although it is thought none can possibly escape alive. The town hall has been prepared for the reception of the dead. As soon as possible the fan was repaired and put to work pumping air into the mine, and the men set to work to remove the obstructions, so as to reach the chambers and get the bodies out to-night if possible.

The following are the names of fifty-five of the unfortunates, the other two being unobtainable: Henry Anderson, John Williams, M. T. Stewart, Jofin Martin, Thomas Rogers, James O'Neil, Jacob Laux, John Anderson, James Walsh, Peter Baker, William Davidson, Richard James, David Hughes, P. McManus, W. T. King, John Creelman, John Helar, Thomas Williams, John Shane, Patrick Barrett, John McGregor, John Myers, F. W. Smith, G. B. McHalson, William Mahony, Nick Probek, Thomas Lahey, John Prince, James Driscol, James Coughlin, Henry Stewart, B. Heffron, L. P. Heffron, W. L. Jones, John Donnelly, Carl Roderwald, Charles Sterling, Thomas Roberts, Jim McGuire, Fred Pettit, Pet King, Joseph Weissberg, H. Donagan, Joseph Kraust, James F. Stewart, Jr., William Neath, Morgan Neath, Thomas Glancey, John Rutherford, William McCowitt, A. M. Gottfred, Dan McDonald, William Aubrey, Ben Jeffries and Thomas Stewart.

Many of these were married men and leave families, many living here. At this hour everything is in such confusion that it is impossible to give details. A special train left Gunnison City at two o'clock with surgeons and a large number of citizens to render aid if possible. The town of Crested Butte is in mourning. Crowds of women in a cluster about the entrance of the mine are praying, wringing their hands and crying piteously, presenting a scene most heart-rending.

It is said that at the time of the explosion there were ten kegs of black powder in chambers 1 and 2, where the men were working and where the explosion is supposed to have taken place. The mines have the rules of drifting, and so it is impossible to definitely locate the accident until rescuing parties can gain admittance. The mine has long been considered dangerous by those acquainted with it. While one of the best paying mines in the country, its operation has always been attended with more or less approaches and real danger. "It is a fire damp mine," said superintendent Cameron, now in Denver, "and seems constantly to generate the most deadly gases. They seem to generate in the coal or under it, and pour out of the seams in the walls of the tunnels and shafts, yet the mine is the most perfectly ventilated in the world. Air is forced in along the shaft by machinery. No less than fifty-six thousand cubic feet of fresh air is forced into the mine every minute. This is ample to sufficient to fully supply the wants of miners and keep the air perfectly pure unless some accident happens to cut off or interfere with the supply. This is a greater amount of fresh air than is furnished to any other mine in the country."

Superintendent Cameron added: "We send a mine viewer through every chamber each morning before any of the men are allowed to go in. He must have returned in the morning before the workmen started in and everything must have been all right when he passed through the workings."

John McNeil, State Mine Inspector, left for the scene of the disaster last evening. He says he has no doubt that every man in the mine at the time of the explosion was instantly killed.

Caused by Negligence.

Captain Walton, of Pittsburgh, appeared before the Board of Supervising Inspectors of Steam Vessels, and presented a complaint of negligence against the men in charge of Davis' Island dam for failure to show signal lights on the outer piers, whereby the collision of the steamer J. N. Burton was caused; four lives lost, and the steamer destroyed by fire. The president of the board presented a communication from California, submitting for the test of the board a new life preserver made in California of "tule," which is claimed to support as heavy a weight as cork at a much less cost.

TERRIBLE STORM.

The British Islands and the Continent Swept by Furious Gales—Great Loss of Life and Property.

A FURIOUS STORM.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The wind blew a hurricane all last night. Much damage was done in the city, and many persons were injured. The glass roof of the Westminster aquarium was demolished during a performance, and a panic ensued. Several persons were hurt. A printing office on the Haymarket was unroofed, and a boy killed. Many vessels were wrecked, and a large number of lives lost. Telegraphic communication with the continent and also by the Atlantic cables was interrupted for several hours. The storm raged in Paris also. Railway and telegraphic communication was broken in all directions. Much damage was done in the suburbs and many persons injured in the streets.

The Free Thinker's H[illegible] at Portsmouth was destroyed. No boats are allowed to leave Portsmouth. At Hastings the theater and the pier had to be closed. The electric lights along the parade were extinguished and the seas dashed over the streets, making the walking dangerous. At Monmouth Wye, and Morpeth the rivers burst their bounds and flooded the highways. Southampton and Eastbourne suffered severely. Railway traffic was greatly deranged. At Torquay many casualties occurred. A mail cart was overturned by the violence of the wind. Many boats were swamped. The Iron Chapel at Newcastle went down. A falling roof killed a woman and two children. At Leeds the roof of a dwelling collapsed, killing one and injuring four occupants. The mail train between Durham and Darlington was twice stopped by the gale. The shops on the Isle of Wight closed early. A lady was knocked down by the wind and had her leg broken. At Newry, Ireland, many houses were unroofed. The police barracks were made untenable and the police were compelled to take refuge in the court-house. The bark Nocomis, Captain Murphy, from Londonderry for Baltimore, anchored in Lough Foyle, parted cables and was driven to sea. It is feared that the vessel and crew are lost. Reports from all parts of the kingdom agree that the gale was almost unprecedented in severity.

An explosion to-day in the colliery at Rhymna Valley, Wales, killed eleven miners. A rescuing party of three men including the manager were also killed.

TWENTY-TWO LIVES LOST.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Twenty-two of the crew of the ship Sinaia, sank in the English Channel by collision with the City of Lucknow, were drowned.

Minnesota Penitentiary Burned.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 26.—Early this morning a fire broke out in the State prison at Stillwater, and in spite of all efforts all the building was destroyed. All the prisoners, including the Younger brothers, were taken out and a placed under a strong guard in the yard. Loss probably $500,000.

LATER.—The fire caught in the basement of the State Penitentiary at 11:45 last night and was first discovered by a pedestrian, who failed to attract the attention of the guards and ran down town and turned in an alarm. The fire caught under the main office of the car company and when the department arrived it was impossible to do any effective work on account of the dense smoke. At one o'clock it became evident that the prison in the rear of the offices was doomed and Company K, State militia, was called to assist in removing the convicts, about 330 in all, who were shackled together by means of long, fine chains and removed to different points in the prison grounds. The fire spread with remarkable rapidity and, starting at the east end of the prison, soon reached the Warden's office and the rooms occupied by the guards. It then spread to the offices of the Northwestern Car Company, the entire front part of the building being a mass of flames. From the offices of the car company the fire spread to the kitchen and eating room of the prison adjoining, in which is situated the chapel. All the above named departments were gutted. The front part of the building where the fire started is composed of considerable wood work, which afforded means for transmitting the flames to the cell department of the prison, which is capped by a wooden cornice. The cells proper are fire proof, and had it not been for the difficulty alluded to, the fire could have been confined to the front or office part of the building. The convicts were transferred with little trouble and are now under guard. How the fire started is shrouded in mystery. Loss $500,000; all owned by the State and partly insured.

When the fire first started Chief Jay, of Stillwater, went into the burning structure and had a narrow escape from death. He was caught in the office of the car company and overpowered with smoke. While in this condition some one outside turned a stream of water into the room, which knocked him down and put out the light. He was discovered almost suffocated and dragged from the building more dead than alive. The fortunate feature consists in the saving of all the private and personal papers and letters of Senator Sabin. They were all saved intact. The fire was marked by an act of great heroism by George P. Dodd, of the Stillwater company. Immediately after the convicts had been removed the cry was raised that a man was confined in cell No. 22. The crowd stood aghast at the horrible fate in store for the poor wretch and many faces were turned in the direction of the cell occupied by the apparently doomed man. Dodd rushed into the building and was lost to view in a column of blinding smoke. In less time than it can be recorded he had reached the cell of the convict, who proved to be a new man in prison, and in a few minutes he returned bearing the rescued convict.

Death of Ex-Governor Letcher.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 26.—Ex-Governor Letcher died this morning at his home in Lexington. Soon after the General Assemsembly met Governor Cameron sent an official communication announcing the death, saying: "The life so ended was full of high and honorable service to the State and all the departments of the government, and all classes of people should unite in mourning for the loss and inreverent tribute to the memory of a wise, honest and patriotic son of Virginia.

Mr. Harvey Eaton and Bro., of Albion, are visiting friends here this week.

"Everybody's Friend" and "Solon Shingle" at the Opera House next Saturday evening.

S. P. Hosmer and A. W. Mills were delegates from Beers' Post to G.A.R. convention at Detroit, last week. Wm. DeMott, A. W. Slayton, Henry Stevens and Jehiel Davidson were also in attendance, and they all report a splendid meeting. A. W. Mills was chosen a member of one of the principal committtes of the state organization.

Last week Mr. A. Whelan had two men sawing logs with a crosscut-saw. While sawing a basswood tree about three feet through at the stump, at a distance of 30 ft. from the stump, the saw struck a razor blade. The men chopped it out. Now the question is, how it came in this tree entirely covered by six inches of solid timber and 30 ft. from the ground.

The present census places Detroit as the first city in population in the state, Grand Rapids, second; Bay City, third; East Saginaw, fourth; Jackson, fifth; Kalamazoo, sixth and Muskegon, seventh. East Saginaw claims that the June census will give her the third place and Muskegon is confident of passing Kalamazoo and will push Jackson close for the fifth place.

The Jackson Patriot appears in a complete new dress of type, and presents a very fine appearance. The Patriot is one of the ablest of all the Michigan dailies and is a strong advocate of tariff reduction and other much needed reforms. The paper is now fourteen years and 6 months old, is democratic in politics, and sound financially. The publishers, Carleton & Van Antwerp, have carried on the business for over eighteen years.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Commercial Telegraph Company will occur at the office of the President, Dr. R. B. House, at 7:30 P. M. Monday, Feb. 4th, 1884, for the election of officers for the ensuing year and for the election of two directors for three years in place of S. W. Borline and O. P. Bills, whose terms then expire, and for the transaction of such other business as may lawfully come before it. L. G. NORTH, Sec.
Tecumseh, Mich., Jan. 29, 1884.

The American Bazar for February, just received, is a beautiful number, and fully justifies the claims of the publishers, that they are making "The Best and Cheapest Fashion Journal of the Day." In addition to its fashion departments, its literary features are of the highest order. Its subscription price, only $1.00 per annum, places it within the reach of all, and we also notice that in its premium list every subscriber is offered a choice from a catalogue of standard works by the best authors, free. Send 10 cts for a sample copy to The American Bazar Co., 202 Broadway, New York.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

This periodical for February is already on our table, and is, as usual, overflowing with good things in prose, poetry and illustrations. The articles particularly interesting are "Henry Irving and His work," "New York City in its Early Days," "Sobieski and the Relief of Vienna in 1683," "The Colossal Statues of Germany and France," "Life on the Surface of the Ocean," etc., etc.,—they are profusely illustrated. In the department of fiction Etta W. Pierce's serial, "A Dark Deed," is continued and there are short stories by Mary A. Denison, Edward F. Trafton, C. G. Rosenberg, Surray Wyatt, etc., etc., and Sketches, Adventures, Poems, etc., by favorite writers—many of the poems are beautifully illustrated, in fact, all the illustrations are highly finished, and the colored frontispiece, "Little Mischief," is worthy of an elegant frame. The price of a single number is 25 cts, and the yearly subscription $2.50, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, N. Y.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 31, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

If you want lots of fun, go and see the masquerade carnival this evening.

Look out for the open Grange meeting at Macon Center. Program next week.

Mrs. Partington will appear in all her glory at the Opera House tomorrow evening.

The January thaw comes rather late this winter, but the weather prophets predict a cold February.

Geo. W. Freeze, of Clinton, is now on the road for J. K. Burnham & Co., of Detroit. He is much pleased with his new situation.

Trade was more than booming in Tecumseh last Saturday. Sleighing was good and farmers were here from twenty miles away.

Col. Sanford delivered his lecture in Clinton last Friday evening, his former date having been cancelled by reason of a big snow storm.

Mr. and Mrs. John Skinner, of Macon, on Jan. 8th, 1884, celebrated the anniversary of their wedding, which occurred 61 years ago that day. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner are both in good health and we hope they may live to celebrate many more anniversaries.

Brooklyn Exponent: Dr. D. Hyndman, of Norvell, was thrown from a cutter and badly injured one day last week. He is at present at the residence of his parents in this village, and Dr. Wm. Hyndman, of Kelley's Corners, is attending to his patients.

Adrian Press: Last week several Blissfielders tendered the widow of Charles Pierce a surprise, and left with her tokens of their kindly interest in her welfare, in the way of provisions, dry goods, &c. Her husband it will be remembered was drowned near Chicago last spring.

Adrian Times: While Supervisor Corbet, of Blissfield, was dividing his time, the other night, between cogitating the court house question and getting a nap, some thief stole thirty of the official's chickens. Mr. Corbett proposes to pay more attention to local affairs for a time.

Michigan Farmer: The Tecumseh HERALD says ten-dollar oats are being sold in that vicinity, some farmers having bought from ten to twenty bushels. The Michigan Farmer has exposed this "little game" several times, as have also other journals.—There is no excuse for being taken in by such old dodges.

Last Friday Dept. Sheriff Smyth arrested Jane Alexander, of this village, for larceny. The coat stolen from Kies Bros.' clothing store was found at her house, and upon a search of the premises a number of small articles were found which had evidently been stolen. It is thought that her house has been the headquarters of a gang of petty thieves. More developments are looked for. Among the articles found and awaiting an owner was a gold thimble with the initials "L. L. S." engraved thereon.

With the beginning of the year the Detroit Evening Journal congratulates itself upon the marked success it has achieved, and promises to give its readers the benefit of every dollar it earns for the next 12 months. The Evening Journal aims to meet the long-felt want for a clean, spicy and enterprising newspaper. It avoids sensationalism, and all matters of an objectionable character are excluded from its columns. This may be safely said to be one of the great secrets of its success, and as a family paper it is now a recognized favorite. It prints more reading matter than any evening paper in Detroit, and gives all the news of the day in an attractive form. It is the slave of no party, and the servant of no man or set of men, but stands as a thoroughly independent journal, devoted only to what it believes to be for the best interests of Michigan.

As schools of elocution and oratory the Justices' courts of Hudson take the cake. Justice Brown had an organ suit before him the other day and the Post thus describes the proceedings: "Owing to the high reputation of the parties, the peculiar nature of evidence and the legal shadings, there were some marked and interesting passages made by the counsel in the case, and the tropes, born of the occasion and flung in to illuminate the points attempted were really rich, racy and rare, especially in matters of contrast and comparison. For instance, in comparing the grades of chastity and pulchritude, one of the counsel soared into this ecstacy: 'Perhaps some be found pure as the icicles pendant from the temple of Diana.' The other, not to be frozen by these frosts of Ephesus, dived deep and climbed high, and brought forth this, in contrasting the character and testimony of parties: 'They are as remote from each other as the mud-sills of hell and the weathercock of heaven.'" It will be new to many people to learn that heaven has a weathercock, or that hell is bolstered up on mudsills. Still, of course, mudsills may be fireproof.

The ice crop this winter is of a superior quality.

S. W. Sadler returned to his home in Ovid last Friday.

H. W. Stevens, of this village has been buying apples at Manchester.

The masquerade carnival this evening promises to be well patronized.

The grand encampment of Odd Fellows will meet in Detroit, Feb. 13.

The salary of the Morenci postmaster has been increased one hundred dollars.

The Keene troupe is of the best comedy troupes on the road. They ought to draw full houses.

Misses Mary Beihl and Hannah Adler, of Adrian, were guests of the Misses Smith over Sunday.

A number of young people from Adrian attended the return leap year party here last Tuesday evening.

The freight engine on the Jackson Branch was obliged to take water from one of our city hydrants one day last week.

C. W. Akin, of Brooklyn, was in town the first of the week. He has gone into winter quarters now, but expects to have a good season next summer.

Ab. Usborne has purchased the vacant lot East of the HERALD office, and will erect a fine two story building thereon just as soon as the weather opens in the spring.

Rev. E. W. Borden will deliver a free lecture at Macon Center, Thursday, Feb. 7th, at 7½ o'clock P. M. Subject, "The wonders of the great city of Babylon." All are invited.

There is no better locality for a fruit drying establishment in Southern Michigan than at Tecumseh. We commend the subject to the attention of some of our enterprising farmers who have money to invest.

G. E. Brownell leaves this week for Vineland, N. J., which place he expects to make his future home. He leaves behind him a host of friends who will regret his departure, but bid him "God speed" down in the Jerseys.

Last Friday was the coldest day of the winter thus far. Two thermometers in the village, one at Spaulding's green house and the other on the east side of Mrs. P. R. Adams' residence—registered 24° below zero about six o'clock, A. M.

Seneca is to have another cheese factory, and Joseph Bell will be president, and Andrew Church, secretary of the corporation, which is called the "Union Dairy Association." The building will be erected in the Blood neighborhood.

Evening News: Bonner, of the Adrian Record, is a thrifty chap. Joe Murphy played the "Kerry Gow" at Adrian, Thursday night, and in the horse-shoeing scene it was Bonner's horse that was shod—a clear gain of $2 for Bonner.

Detroit News: Great Scott! A Gd. Rapids man has been arrested for "sassing" his mother-in-law. Since the decision in the Maclean-Scripps libel suit there seems to be left no liberty for either tongue or pen in this fair land of ours.

A new arrangement for the running of freight trains on the "old road" of the L. S. & M. S. railroad, will be put into operation soon.—Train crews will run from Toledo to Hillsdale and back and from Hillsdale to Elkhart and return, instead of from Toledo through to Elkhart and return, as now.

The Wampler's Lake correspondent of the Manchester Enterprise says:—"Last Saturday night the wind played a school boy game of rolling up the snow into balls measuring from two inches to sixteen inches in diameter. Thousands of them were scattered over the fields. People in this vicinity never saw such a sight before.

On Friday evening, Feb. 1, at the Tecumseh Opera House, will appear the celebrated actor Joseph H. Keene, supported by a well selected company, in that side-splitting comedy of "Mrs. Partington." Mr. Keene comes to us highly recommended as an actor of much merit by both press and public, and we hope to see the house well filled. On Saturday evening following the same company will present a double bill "Everybody's Friend" and "Solon Shingle." Secure your seats at Kiel's.

The return leap year party given at Armory Hall last Tuesday evening was the finest dancing party Tecumseh has seen in many months. About fifty couple were in attendance. The music was furnished by Ollie Hunt's orchestra, and was excellent of course. Adrian and Clinton were both represented by good delegations of young people who were well pleased with their reception by the committee in charge. Some of our own young men who were at the first leap year party failed to put in an appearance, somewhat to the disappointment of the managers. The refreshments were served by Will T. Eccles, and that portion of the entertainment was in full keeping with the rest. He furnished a splendid supper at a very reasonable figure. The committee are entitled to much credit for the successful manner in which the whole affair was carried out.

Wm. A. Whitney, one of the oldest pioneers of Adrian, died at his home in Detroit last week, after a lingering illness of several months. The remains were brought to Adrian for burial last Saturday, and a large concourse of people followed them to the cemetery. Mr. Whitney was the founder of the Adrian Press, and for many years was the manager of that paper. He has been a resident of Adrian for more than fifty years, and had always considered that city his home, although during the past two years he has passed a portion of his time in Detroit. He had a large circle of acquaintances, probably as any other man in Lenawee county, and was universally esteemed. His death removes another of the original settlers of the county, who are rapidly passing away.

THE M. & O. ROAD.

"You ought to have been with us the other day, on our inspection of the new M. & O. road," said Mr. Peter Miller this morning. "We had a great time. There was John and his wife, Jim Cairns and his wife, Al. Lawrence and his spouse, and myself and wife, and we drove to Tecumseh and took the train for Addison, stayed all night and came back the next day. We stopped with Deputy Sheriff Crandall, only he was not at home, and so did not know that he was missing some good society. That M. & O. road just takes my eye. It's in first-rate shape for a new road, and the trains run as nice as a top. But then the cars make a good deal of difference; their cars being new and running as perfect as you can think. Why you put them on the old road here and you could hear a pin drop in them. They have two trains a day. A fellow named Buck runs one, and "Si." Alverson down here in Fairfield or Madison runs the other. We went down with 'Si.'"—Adrian Times.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S VIEWS.

We are in receipt of a paper containing the balance of Mr. Albert Bath's lecture descriptive of his trip to America, from which we take a couple of extracts which will be of interest to our readers:

MICHIGAN LOWER PENINSULA.

This peninsula is 200 by 350 miles in extent and has 650 miles of water front. My stay here was in July, and I found the sun rather hotter than in the old country, and when out walking I was glad of a sunshade and the use of a fan. The crops I saw growing were Indian corn, wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, clover and Timothy grass, also a great many plantations of apples. The sorts were Ben Davis, Northern Spy, Red Canada, Baldwin, Ohio Winter, &c. The crop was a failure. Last year they had a heavy crop of apples. Some strawberries were grown in the open, but the fruit was very small, through want of better cultivation. There were some good fruit on the Little-do-black Cap raspberry canes. Sorghum, a sugar plant, was also grown. Good farms, with house and buildings were worth $64 (£16) per acre. In Lenawee county, where Tecumseh is situated.—Taxes are about 40 cents (1s. 8d.) per acre. The soil is chiefly of a sandy loam and clay, and a great deal of it very suitable for fruit growing. Potatoes grown on my uncle's farm were very good, and I brought some home with me. The clover crop which they grow in succession was very heavy, and I noticed it being stacked in barns. The farmers here were like the Canadians, they spent but little on manure, and did not crop by rotation. Salt is given to sheep and cattle daily. Wages were from 20 dollars (£4) to 24 dollars (£4 16s.) per month with board. Second class labor £3 to £3 12s. The meals were breakfast, dinner and supper, meat being served with each. The drink was generally tea or coffee. Domestic help gets from 6s. to 15s. per week. Farmers worked as hard as their men, used all kinds of machinery, and were very economical with labour. Water was drawn from wells by small windmills. Most of the farms in Lenawee county had apple plantations, and a few acres of forest land, which they required for building and fuel. Farm houses were chiefly built of wood. There are two flour mills at Tecumseh; I went over them; they manufacture flour by the roller system; the globe mills have a capacity to turn out four hundred barrels of flour in 24 hours.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

After travelling in a country which imposes a tariff on imported goods, on my return home in October I could better see the wisdom and benefits derived from Free Trade. The tariff of 25 per cent. on agricultural implements is not only injurious to the settler, but to trade generally. All religious sects were considered equal in the eyes of the people. From my observations in the States through which I travelled, I could recommend any farmer who intended to settle presuming that he had sufficient capital, to go to Michigan or Illinois, he would there have a good welcome and assistance from farmers, as American agriculturists are very friendly and well disposed to new settlers. Should he be limited as to capital, I should consider the prairie lands in Minnesota preferable. On the other hand, should he prefer pitching his tent in the British possessions, and, having sufficient capital to purchase a farm in cultivation, with house and buildings, I would advise him to go to the province of Ontario, but if with a small amount of capital, I should advise the fertile wheat growing province of Manitoba. He would find many friends in Canada, but no man should go to the Western World unless he intends to be industrious.—America has pushed on faster in developing her resources than our colony has, at the same time Canada is progressing fast, and when protection is swept away will proceed at a greater pace. The duties imposed to encourage one class interest is palpably at the expense of the rest of the community.

"Sixty laughs in sixty minutes" is in store for those who visit the Opera House to-morrow evening and hear Mrs. Partington.

Mr. M. E. Fuller, formerly of the Lake Shore, is the telegraph operator for the M. & O. at this place. Mr. Fuller came well recommended and seems well fitted for the place.

L. F. Wheeler started last week for Piqua, O., where he has accepted a position as retoucher and painter in a large picture establishment there. We wish Mr. Wheeler success.

On motion the matter was referred to the committee on ordinances.

It being reported to Council that some of the churches were going to erect and maintain street lamps in front of their places of worship, it was on motion determined by Council that should any of the church organizations of the village erect and maintain suitable lamps on any of the public streets, that Council will trim, fill and light such lamps the same as the other street lamps of the village.

The report of the committee on ordinances laid on the table at last session is taken up, and after some discussion is adopted.

DIED.

After a lingering illness of fifteen months duration, Gilbert, son of David and Elizabeth Harrison, of Macon, died in the sweet peace of perfect rest in Jesus, Dec. 16, 1883. He was born in Ridgeway, Dec. 21st, 1858, and lived a moral life from childhood, and was highly respected. In his strong youthful vigor and ambition he struggled hard for the mastery over the fatal disease of which he died. During the latter portion of his life his greatest anxiety to live was that he might honor God in a life of devotion to his service, and recommend to others that Savior whose love was so precious to him in his sufferings. Athlophoros

ATHLOPHOROS is a novel word to most people who speak the English language. The Greeks used it centuries ago, meaning by it "THE PRIZE BEARER."

ATHLOPHOROS is a novelty, not only in name, but in its elements. It is unlike any preparation yet introduced.

In the bitter gloom of a winter's morn
A babe was born.
The snow piled high against wall and door,
On the mighty oak boughs the frost lay hoar,
But the warmth and light earned the happy face.
So softly pillowed with down and lace.
The bees clamped out from the resting spire,
The night was redeemed by many a fire;
The cottage danced for the joy at the hall,
As the poor maid answered the rich man's call.
And his joy for a day was less forlorn,
Because a little child was born.

—All The Year Around.

The Italian Soldier.

The Italian soldier, as a rule, is short and square-built, and his general appearance conveys the impression of a not overrobust physique. But see him marching and it soon becomes apparent that he possesses more stamina than one would have given him credit for. How unmurmuringly he trudges for hours at a time along a dusty road under a hot sun with his heavy knapsack on his back, and his rifle slung across his shoulder. And our surprise is increased when we find what meager rations he has to sustain him under all his toil. His chief meal consists of a soup made with lard, meat, and maccheroni, or some other kind of paste. His mess is prepared in large caldrons, round which at a given signal the men gather each with a tin can, into which is poured a not very abundant supply of soup and an almost invisible lump of meat. In setting out on a long march the soldier drinks the soup and keeps the meat to eat on the road. Besides this he gets coffee without milk in the morning and about two pounds of bread to last him throughout the day. A tumbler of wine is served out to him on an average every third or fourth day in the year. If abstemious Spartan in its simplicity, his dress is equally exempt from the charge of luxury. A loose coat of coarse grayish blue cloth covers the infantry soldier from neck to knee. His trousers are of the same material, but when marching, the latter are exchanged for canvas trousers, and when working in camp a canvas tunic is donned instead of the coat. His headgear is a hat very like that in use in the French army. The uniform of the bersaglieri is somewhat more elaborate in fancy. This army consists of picked men, indeed, only strong fellows could march at the rapid pace they are trained to. Otherwise their drill is much the same as that of the ordinary regiments. They wear a black tunic with red facings, and a black broad-brimmed hat with a bunch of green feathers stuck at one side. They are armed, like the infantry, with Werderly rifles.—Cor London Daily News.

A Monster Mountain of Clay in Montana.

We rolled onward through the midst of the grotesque and picturesque buttes for hours; and their broken, jagged walls and towering peaks stood out against the clear sky on either side to the line of the horizon. Suddenly, on our left, a broad stretch of beautiful grassy valley appeared, sweeping away about a mile, gently curving upwards to the very base of one of the grandest and largest buttes of all, which rises abruptly from the level plain to a height of nearly 800 feet. This monster mound stretches along parallel with the railroad for a long distance. Its spine is broken by one large embrasure or pass, separating a small portion of it from the main body. Its bald and barren heights are bleached by the awful wintry tempests, and on its scarred and rugged bosom is inscribed the epitaph of departed ages. To it great cycles are but days, and centuries but swift hours of time. But even now, among the "hills, rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun, and the vales stretching in pensive quietness between," the joyful voice of man and the busy hum of labor awake the torpid echoes of the past, which erst knew no sound but nature's wild. This monster clay mountain stands on the very border of Dakota, and marks the line of Montana. This is the great "Sentinel buttes."—Rochester Democrat.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS.

Our Correspondent's Researches and a Remarkable Occurrence He Describes.

ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan. 10, 1884.

MESSRS EDITORS.—The upper portion of Vermont is one of the pleasantest regions in America during the summer and one of the bleakest during the winter. It affords ample opportunity for the tourist, providing he chooses the proper season, but the present time is not that season. Still there are men and women here who not only endure the climate, but praise it unstintingly, and that, too, in the face of physical hardships the most intense. The writer heard of a striking illustration of this a few days since which is given herewith:

Mr. Joseph Jacques is connected with the Vermont Central railroad in the capacity of master mason. He is well advanced in years, with a ruddy complexion and hale appearance, while his general bearing is such as to instantly impress one with his strict honor and integrity. Several years ago he became afflicted with most distressing troubles, which prevented the prosecution of his duties. He was languid and yet restless, while at times a dizziness would come over him which seemed almost blinding.—His will power was strong, and he determined not to give way to the mysterious influence which seemed undermining his life. But the pain and annoying symptoms were stronger than his will, and he kept growing gradually worse. About that time he began to notice a difficulty in drawing on his boots and it was by the greatest effort that he was able to force his feet into them. In this manner several weeks passed by, until finally one night, while in great agony, he discovered that his feet had, in a short while, swollen to enormous proportions. The balance of the narrative can best be described in his own words. He says:

"When my wife discovered the fact that I was so bloated, she sent for the doctor immediately. He made a most careful examination and pronounced me in a very serious condition. Notwithstanding his care, I grew worse, and the swelling of my feet gradually extended upward in my body. The top of my head pained me terribly indeed, so badly that at times it seemed almost as if it would burst. My feet were painfully cold, and even when surrounded with hot flannels and irons felt as if a strong wind were blowing on them. Next my right leg became paralyzed. This gave me no pain, but it was exceedingly annoying. About this time I began to spit blood most freely, although my lungs were in perfect condition, and I knew it did not come from them. My physicians were careful and untiring in their attentions, but unable to relieve my sufferings. My neighbors and friends thought I was dying and many called to see me, full twenty-five on a single Sunday that I now recall. At last my agony seemed to culminate in the most intense sharp pains I have ever known or heard of. If red hot knives sharpened to the highest degree had been run through my body constantly they could not have hurt me worse. I would spring up in bed, sometimes as much as three feet, cry out in my agony and long for death. One night the misery was so intense that I arose and attempted to go into the next room, but was unable to lift my swollen feet above the little threshold that obstructed them. I fell back upon the bed and gasped in my agony, but felt unable even to breathe. It seemed like death.

"Several years ago Rev. Dr. J. E. Rankin, now of Washington, was stationed here as pastor of the Congregational church. We all admired and respected him, and my wife, remembered seeing somewhere that he had spoken in the highest terms of a preparation which had cured some of his intimate friends. We determined to try this remedy, accordingly sent for it, and, to make a long story short, it completely restored my health, bro't me back from the grave, and I owe all I have in the way of health and strength to Warner's Safe Cure, better known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I am positive that if I had taken this medicine when I felt the first symptoms above described, I might have avoided all the agony I afterward endured, to say nothing of the narrow escape I had from death."

In order that all possible facts bearing upon the subject might be known, I called upon Dr. Oscar F. Fassett, who for nineteen years United States Examining Surgeon, and who attended Mr. Jacques during his sickness.—He stated that Mr. Jacques had a most pronounced case of Albuminuria or Bright's disease of the kidneys.—That an analysis showed the presence of albumen and casts in great abundance, and that he was in a condition where few if any ever recover. His recovery was due to Warner's Safe Cure.

Mr. John W. Hobart, General Manager of the Vermont Central railroad, stated that Mr. Jacques was one of the best and most faithful of his employes, that his sickness had been an exceedingly severe one and the company were not only glad to again have his services but grateful to the remedy that had cured so valuable a man.

Mr. James M. Foss, assistant superintendent and master mechanic of the Vermont Central railroad, is also able to confirm this.

I do not claim to be a great discoverer, but I do think I have found in the above a most remarkable case and knowing the unusual increase of Bright's disease feel that the public should have the benefit of it. It seems to me a remedy that can accomplish so much in the last stages ought to do even more for the first approach of this deceptive yet terrible trouble.

A little tot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

That weak back or pain in the side or hips you will find immediately relieved when a Hop Plaster is applied. It strengthens the muscles, giving the ability to do hard work without suffering. Take none but this, 'tis sure.

When a remedy has proven itself to be a cure for consumption and a perfect lung restorer, it should be kept in every well regulated home. We refer to Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, a single dose of which will cure an ordinary cough or cold. A few bottles will cure consumption. It is very pleasant to take.

Is your system running down? Is there a feeling of decrepitude taking possession of you? Are the functions of your digestive and urinary organs impaired? Is your blood bad? Do sores and pimples trouble you? Do you suffer from aches and pains? Are you weak and does the least exertion give you fatigue? Beware! Regain perfect health by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.

The attention of our readers is respectfully called to the advertisement in another column of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., the celebrated seedsmen. They do the largest business in their line in the United States; raise the bulk of their seeds on their own farms, by the most approved methods, and have obtained a world-wide reputation for the quality and variety of the seed they put upon the market, and their integrity in filling all orders entrusted to them. Their beautiful Seed Annual for 1884, sent free to all who apply for it, will be found of practical value to all who desire to purchase seeds true to name.

For scrofula, syphilitic disorders, thin and watery blood, sluggish liver (indicated by poor digestion), weak kidneys (indicated by urinary sediments), deceased mucous membrane (indicated by both nasal and urinary catarrh, inflammed eyelids, etc.), use Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It gradually rebuilds a broken down constitution and restores robust health and strength to every part. No other remedy equals it.

James Darling and John Hilliard, attempted to cross from Cross Village to Beaver Island on the ice. Hilliard died in the attempt and Darling was badly frozen.

Aunt Rachel's Joy.

Rev. W. B. Evans, Washington, D. C., writes: "Aunt Rachel, the dear old colored saint, who has been a constant sufferer with inflammatory Rheumatism for 16 years, has been greatly benefited by Athlophoros. I consider it almost in the light of a miracle. She is almost beside herself with joy. The pain has all left her limbs. A little stiffness remains, but another bottle will effect a permanent cure. It is indeed a most wonderful medicine. I think it ought to be spread throughout the length and breadth of this land."

Dr. David Ward, of Detroit, one of the great pine kings of Michigan denies that he is worth $25,000,000. He modestly admits, however, that perhaps he is worth $15,000,000.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally. It acts directly upon the blood and the mucous surfaces of the system. Price 75 c. a bottle.

It is very probable that Muskegon will be selected as the headquarters of the proposed new lighthouse district.

As a home remedy to be kept at hand for cases of sudden illness, and for the prompt relief and cure of throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable.

Judge Ira Rix, an old and much respected citizen of Kalamazoo, died last week, aged 84 years.

"A Celebrated Case."

It seems a pity that Mr. Michael O'Connor, of Galesburg, Ill., is not related to the celebrated Charles O'Connor. He says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of dyspepsia and general debility."

D. T. A. Fletcher, of the Quincy mine, one of the leading physicians of the upper peninsula, is hopelessly ill.

Absolutely the best Porous Plaster ever made: The Hop Plaster is composed of Fresh Hops, Balsams and Gums. Weak Back, Side Ache, Sore Chest, and all pains are speedily cured by its use. Apply one. Only 25 cts., at any drug store.

The people of Arenac county are to settle the question of where they will locate the county seat, by ballot.

SKILL IN THE WORK-SHOP.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of confinement in close rooms have impaired his health or dimmed his sight let him at once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of Hop Bitters. His system will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight become clear, and the whole constitution be built up to a higher working condition.

The life of a true Christian is like a beautiful river; it flows on in a steady, even course the storms of life may ruffle its surface, but the deep undercurrent moves on undisturbed.

—M. Roustan, the new French Minister at Washington, is about forty-eight years of age. He has held many Consular posts, and in 1881 was appointed Ambassador to Tunis. "Yes; probably that's the reason you ain't in a cigar store now," was the crushing reply.—Texas Siftings.

—"Young Calvin" wants to know if we "believe that the angels have wings, and why we think so?" We think they have, Calvin. We never saw their wings, but we know that whenever a young man becomes perfectly convinced that he has met an angel he spends about all his spare time holding her tight with both arms, as though he feared she would fly away the minute he let her go. And if they had no wings there would be no cause for this widespread, almost universal fear.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Angling for Pointers.

While Lord Chief Justice Coleridge was in Chicago, a reception was given his honor by the Hon. Emery A. Storrs. During a lull in the brilliant festivities, Me lud Coleridge felt some one plucking at his sleeve, and upon turning around discovered a long, lank, masculine specimen of a native from the Sucker State, with an anxious look on his hatchet face, and a piece of red flannel around his throat.

"Jist step this way a minnit, Mr. Coleridge," said the apparition, "come inter this bay winnly. I want ter ask yer suthin."

The astonished chief justice followed the man into the alcove, and was thus addressed:

"Judge, they tell me you are a big legal luminary over in England."

"Well, aw—I don't weally—"

"Don't be at all bashful an' diffident in my presence," said the man with the bronchial difficulties, "I know suthin' about the law bizzines myself, ef I do say it, an' I've bin elected justice of the peace down in Jo Daviss county. Now, what I want ter git onto is a few pinters on some legal matters as has puzzled me considerable since I was elected. The ole common law, ef I understand the thing right, is the same in Illinois as hit is in England, ain't hit?"

"Why—weally—I believe the common law of England is not—that is—has not been greatly modified since its adoption by the United States."

"That's what I thought. Now, over in your country does the cote allow a lawyer to go on the cost bond for his client?"

"Well—weally—aw—that is not the practice"—

"That's just what I tole 'em down in Jo Daviss county, an' a spike-haired shyster hit me with an' ink-bottle because I wouldn't allow no sich kind ef monkey work. Did you ever marry a couple, an' did yer git yer pay in sausiges, spring wheat or cash?"

"Aw—marry a couple?"

"A Dutchman come ter my house last week with a license made out in another county, an' he insisted on me hitchin' him an' his gal right there an' thar. He was so full that yer could hear the beer swash inside of him. I tole the Dutchman he couldn't git spliced on no sich a license as that. Yer can't marry an English couple in one bailiwick on a license made out in another, can yer?"

"I—I—aw—you seem to"—

"A damfool of a justice, who held ofliss before the citizens run me in, onoect give a verdict for the defendant in a suit, an' then taxed him up with the costs. I remonstrated with the old grey-headed lunatic, an' we left the matter ter the judge of the district cote, an' when we had stated the case, the jedge cocked up one eye like a game chicken an' sed, 'Wal, gentlemen, I don't know but hits all right in Jo Daviss county, an' the bull crowd cackered right out."

"I—I—aw—weally—I must be going," said the poor Lord Chief Justice, trying to edge away.

"One minnit, kernel, or jedge rather—what do yer charge fer swearing witnesses in a civil suit, ten cents or two bits?"

But the Lord Chief Justice had flown from the horrid precincts of the deep bay window.—Texas Siftings.

Scientific False Pretense.

There are those who have every facility for the pursuit of science, who have an ample salary and every appliance for work, yet who devote themselves to commercial work, to testifying in courts of law, and to any other work to increase their present large income. Such men would be respectable if they gave up the name of professor, and took that of consulting chemists or physicists. And such men are needed in the community. But for a man to occupy the professor's chair in a prominent college, and, by his energy and ability in the commercial applications of his science, stand before the local community in a prominent manner, and become the newspaper exponent of his science, is a disgrace both to him and his college. It is the death-blow to science in that region. Call him by his proper name, and he becomes at once a useful member of the community. Put in his place a man who shall by precept and example cultivate his science, and how different is the result! Young men, looking forward into the world for something to do, see before them this high and noble life, and they see that there is something more honorable than the accumulation of wealth. They are thus led to devote their lives to similar pursuits, and they honor the professor who has drawn them to something higher than they might otherwise have aspired to reach.

I do not wish to be misunderstood in this matter. It is no disgrace to make money by an invention, or otherwise, or to do commercial scientific work under some circumstances. But let pure science be the aim of those in the chairs of professors, and so prominently the aim that there can be no mistake. If our aim in life is wealth, let us honestly engage in commercial pursuits, and compete with others for its possession. But if we choose a life which we consider higher, let us live up to it, taking wealth or poverty as it may chance to come to us, but letting neither turn us aside from our pursuit.—Prof. H. A. Rowland, in Popular Science Monthly for November.

They are not always unwilling slaves in the east. Among the slaves found in the possession of Ali Saidi, the Cairo dealer recently arrested by the English, were six women, three Circassians and three negresses. Five of them received their freedom, but the sixth—a beautiful Circassian girl—refused to accept freedom, her ambition being, perhaps, to become the slave of some wealthy Egyptian pasha.

John Quincy Adams, who is well known in Socorro County, New Mexico, has sold a third interest in his lode for $13,000. While prospecting he found his haversack on fire, his prospecting glass having focused the sun's rays upon it. As the haversack contained six pounds of powder, he dropped it and got out of the way. It fell into a crevice, and a large mass of rock was blown up. Adams turned mournfully to gather up what might be left of his effects, and found a vein of silver that the explosion had exposed to view.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left me before I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

Mrs. Mary Charon stands charged with bigamy at East Saginaw. She did not marry two Saginaw men—it wasn't as bad as that—but one of her husbands hailed from Freeland.

Don't Spill the Milk.

"There is no use crying over spilled milk," says the old saw. If you are not only bald, but have no life in the roots of your hair, there is no use crying over that either. Take both time and yourself by the forelock while there is a forelock left. Apply Parker's Hair Balsam to your hair before matters get worse. It will arrest the falling off of your hair and restore the original color, gloss and softness. It is a perfect dressing withal, clean, richly perfumed, cools and heals the scalp.

The new Episcopal church, Saginaw, will be consecrated about the first of February.

A second bottle effected a cure. No other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Like an Evil Spirit.

In olden times it was thought that evil spirits came in through cracks and keyholes. The generally approved way to keep them out was to plug up the keyholes and stop the cracks with cotton. Notwithstanding these preventive measures, the evil things had their own way and often came in as they pleased.

So comes malaria now-a-days. We try to keep it out of the keyhole and it comes in by the crack. We stop up the crack, and lo! it comes from a leak in the plumbing, or an opening from some neglected drain, or from some unsuspected source and unguarded direction.

We cannot always keep malaria out, but we can give it battle and drive its effects from our systems. If BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is taken in time, malaria has not a ghost of a chance. This is the great family medicine. Your druggist sells it, and you ought to keep a bottle in the house.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt".

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
Bull Dog Plug in this part of creation.

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for cumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption,
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he died was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

A Bird that Turns Somersaults.

There's a pretty little bird that lives in China, and is called the Fork-Tailed Parus. He is about as big as a robin, and has a red beak, yellow legs, black tail, and red-and-yellow wings. Nearly all the colors are in his dress, you see, and he is a gay fellow. This bird has a trick known by no other birds that ever I heard of. He turns somersaults! Not only does he do this in free life on the trees, but also after he is caught and put into a cage. He throws his head far back, and over he goes, touching the bars of his cage, and alighting upon his feet on the floor or on a perch. He will do it over and over a number of times without stopping, as though he thought it great fun. All his family have the same trick, and they are called Tumblers. The people of China are fond of keeping them in cages and seeing them tumble.

ONLY.

Only a flash of indignant eyes,
Only a glance of pained surprise,
Only a ring from a finger small
Dropped at his feet, and that was all.

Only a maiden sad and drear,
Longing for some one still held dear,
Only a tear on a ringless hand,
For the lover gone to a foreign land.

Only a ship by the sea waves tossed,
Only a man with hands idly crossed,
Sea below, and sky overhead,
With a bitter sigh for the love now dead.

Only an aching pain in his heart,
For the cruel words that made them part,
Only a wish to be back once more,
Down by her side as in days of yore.

Only a sight of a pure, pale face,
Sweet and grave in its womanly grace,
Only regret for the pain he had given
Only a prayer to be forgiven.

Only a glance in his tender eyes,
Only a smile of sweet surprise;
Only a clasp of the fingers small
Only a kiss—and that was all.

A Regular "D. B."

Not long ago a well-known newspaper man took day board at the Sherman House, says the Chicago Times. He was at home in the place, and was a privileged character. One day he sauntered behind the office counter into the regions that are supposed to be sacred to gentlemen who wear diamonds and address congressmen, governors, tourists, porters, newsboys and other statesmen by their first names, when his eye happened to catch sight of his own name on a slip with others over the bookkeeper's desk. He would not have given it a passing thought had not the letters "D. B." been attached. He "flew off the handle" on the instant, and demanded an interview with the proprietor. That august functionary was found, and to him the irate journalist addressed a few remarks. "Do I owe you anything?" he asked. "No, sir,' was the prompt reply. "I have paid my bills all right so far as you know, haven't I?" "Certainly. I have no complaint to make."

"Then why do you permit your clerk to post me over his desk as a 'D. B.?'"

"I do not; there must be some mistake."

The journalist assured him that there was no mistake, and that he had seen the objectionable and significant letters with his own eyes. The more he thought of it the madder he got. The proprietor could not pacify him until he promised to have the matter investigated and the guilty man punished. It was found that the night clerk had perpetrated the outrage, and that evening the injured citizen took an early opportunity to take him to task. "What did you mean by putting 'D. B.' after my name?" inquired the newspaper man. "O, go away," he replied, thinking his interlocutor was "chaffing," as was his custom, "don't bother me." "No, I won't go away, and I demand a civil answer to my question."

The clerk looked up and saw an angry man in front of him. Then his countenance was suddenly bisected by a grin, and he doubled up like a man with the colic. "You took day-board, didn't you?" he inquired, as soon as he regained his composure. "Yes, I did, and I have paid for all the day-board I have enjoyed." "So you have," was the soothing response, "but just come around here a minute, till I show you something. You see you are in good company. You are an associate of several millionaires and railroad magnates. They are each and every one designated the same way, 'D. B.' That is short for 'day-board.' Regular boarders are marked 'R. B.'"

The journalist spent a week's salary trying to bribe his audience with liquid nourishment to keep still, but like all good things the joke leaked.

Origin of Popular Phrases.

VAMOSE.—A Mexican phrase—an adaptation of the Spanish verb vamos, meaning literally, "let us go."

TAFFY.—This word, which is now used as a vulgar synonym of flattery, is by no means of recent origin, as many suppose, but was really coined 200 years ago, and has been in use in London fully that period.

BOSS.—This term, which is extensively used in the United States and England to designate the person placed as overseer of workmen and working women, is an improvement on the Dutch word baas, meaning employer.

BOGUS.—An Anglicism—the vulgate for "Borghese," the name of a forger who "operated" somewhat extensively across the water about thirty-five years ago. He passed false tokens and counterfeit bills to the amount of many thousand dollars, and hence the term "bogus" is applied to whatever is false and fraudulent.

A DELUSION, A MOCKERY AND A SNARE.—The fact that this familiar saying has about it a certain Biblical ring, has sometimes led to its being quoted as from one or other of the Hebrew prophets: the words are, in fact, an extract from the judgment of Lord Denman, of the English house of lords, on the appeal of Daniel O'Connell to that body from the verdict rendered at his trial.

RED TAPE.—An English expression, originated by Carlyle and made popular by Dickens. It was designed to represent the ceremonious delays and official formalities characteristic of the British governmental routine. It is similarly used in this country to ridicule the tardiness with which everything is effected by the formalism of government officials. The expression arises from the fact that government officers generally tie up their bundles of paper with red tape.

CANTEEN.—This is, perhaps, the only word in our language which, originally passed into a foreign tongue, and was afterward taken back in a modified form. As originally spoken by the Saxon, it was simply a tin can; but the Gaul, as is his wont, placing the noun before the adjective, and pronouncing the letter i as e, brought it out as cantin, pronounced canteen. Adopting a thousand other French terms, the obtuse Englishman took back his own original word in a new shape, without any inquiries on the subject, and hence we now say canteen instead of tin-can.

A little dot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

A boy came home from school much excited, and told his father that the teacher said all human beings were descended from apes, which made the old man so mad that he replied angily: "That may be the case with you, but it ain't with me. I can tell you that, now."

The Colored Metropolis.

There are sixty-five thousand colored people in Washington. In no city in the United States, not even New Orleans, is there a larger colored population. Many of them have settled here since the civil war ended. A better opportunity can be nowhere found for studying the effect of freedom and the legislation subsequent to it than here, says a Washington letter. The colored people here enjoy all the social and political rights that law can give them, without protest and without annoyance. The public conveyances are open to them, and the theaters, the jury box, the polls of party power, are theirs. Many of these men are wealthy, and the aggregate wealth of the colored property owners in the district amounts to millions of dollars. Hundreds own comfortable homes, and some handsome residences; their churches are many, including three or four buildings that are ornaments to the city. As a class they are industrious, find plenty to do and are beginning to show capacity for thrift and saving.

But the color line is rigidly drawn in what is known as society. Wealth, learning, official place, gives no colored family the right or privilege of entering the best or commonest white society on terms of equality or endurance. In this respect the colored people live as separate and exclusive a life as in the days of slavery, and, as a drop of African blood was once held to make a man a negro, so now it taints him and makes an insurmountable barrier against social recognition. The most striking illustration of the tendency of the race to imitate the white people is seen in their own rules, classes and customs. First of all, we find that in this large colored community social lines are as rigidly drawn as they are between themselves and the white society of the West End. There are three recognized social classes among the colored people. Neither acknowledges the other, and it is the ambition of those in the lower to be received in the higher circles, just as among the whites.

The upper crust, so to speak, consists of men of wealth, learning and high political place. The people exchange calls with all the ceremony of the whites, some of them driving in their own carriages, leaving cards with scrupulous attention to etiquette. They dine with each other, and are waited upon by colored servants with whom they will permit no other relations than those of master and servant. Probably, the leading family in the highest colored society here is that of ex-Senator Bruce, who is now the Register of the Treasury. Bruce is a light-complexioned, intelligent-looking man. He is said to be worth about $100,000. He lives in a handsome house that he owns on M. street. It is richly furnished. A superb piano stands in the reception-room, and a choice collection of books lines the wall of the library. Mrs. Bruce is a handsome woman, with not a suggestion of her race in her face, and whose manners are regarded as the consummation of ease, grace and courtesy. She dresses as richly and handsomely as any woman in the city. In official circles Mr. Bruce is always received with courtesy, and as a political equal, but there the line is drawn. Mr. Bruce entertains his friends handsomely, and his wife pays and receives calls from those of her select set with unvarying regard for prevailing etiquette. Another member of the social circle is John T. Cook, the Collector of Taxes for the District. He lives in excellent style and entertains handsomely. Prof. J. M. Gregory, Professor of Latin at the Howard University, and John M. Langston, the Minister to Hayti, with their families, are recognized members of the best colored society, while Dr. Charles B. Purvis' society and that of his wife are eagerly sought.

Dr. Purvis is a very busy man, being the surgeon in charge of the Freedman's Hospital, and the Professor of materia medica at the Hospital School. Nearly all of his scholars are white, Dr. A. T. Augusta and his wife also are received in the highest circle of colored society, while Dr. Augusta as a physician commands the respect of his white brethren in the profession. Mr. Henry Smith, for many years the librarian of the House of Representatives, entertains a great deal, and his wife calls in her own carriage. R. T. Greener, a member of the District bar and a graduate of Howard, and his wife, who is an accomplished musician, are much in society. The Rev. Dr. Alex. Crummel, rector of the leading colored church of the Episcopal denomination, is always welcomed. He is regarded as the most learned colored man in the District and is highly respected by the white clergy of his denomination. Of course Fred Douglass ranks as the leading colored man of the District, but he goes but little into society. He lives on his fine estate on the eastern branch of the Potomac. Douglass is worth about $[illegible]. While his wealth and ability make him easily the foremost man of his race, he is not popular. He is regarded as guilty of the same sins toward the colored men of which he accuses the whites, namely, refusal to recognize them or have personal relations with them.

Mr. M. M. Holland, who is an officer in the Post-office Department, is said to be the best classical scholar in the district, and his attainments bring him the highest social recognition of his people. Wormley, of Wormley's Hotel, is a leader of the best set on account of his wealth, reputed to be $150,000, and his relations with prominent white men. Smith Wormley, one of his sons, is a large owner of real estate here, and another son has an excellent practice as a physician.

Because of their exclusiveness, wealth, learning and prominence, this circle is not looked upon with any favor by the majority of the colored people here. The usual remark, which may perhaps be attributed so envy or to disappointed ambition, that one hears among colored people is that this exclusive set is not good enough for white society and too good for that of their own race. Fortunately, there are enough of them to make a sufficiently large circle for the social life they desire.

There is another and a much larger society here that may be designated as of the second rank. While holding no social relations with the set just mentioned, they are equally exclusive as regards those whom they hold beneath them in the social scale. This class is composed of Government clerks and of people in comfortable circumstances. There are a good many colored men in Government employ as clerks. These form the basis of the society of the second rank. Many of them own comfortable homes, and one of the finest streets in the city is occupied by them. This is Sixteenth street, between the Scott statue and the White House. It is a splendid avenue, broad, well-paved and in the heart of the most fashionable part of the city. Nearly all of these colored residents own their houses, and refuse to sell. The property is very valuable and must ultimately pass out of their possession. These people are very fond of social life, but they do not find it in entertaining, but rather in sociables, balls, picnics and especially in their churches. They are well-dressed, seem to prosper, and are happy. For the great bulk of the colored population—the servants, laborers and the poor—they have sympathy, but no more have social relations with them than a white family would. These latter in the main are thriftless, living from hand to mouth; happy if they do nothing, happy if they get a job. Their social instincts are gratified by the organization and maintenance of societies of all sorts, benevolent, patriotic, social and economic. There are nearly one hundred of these organizations, supported almost entirely by the laboring colored people.—Washington Post.

Reducing the Blemishes.

A sallow complexioned old lady, accompanied by a remarkably unprepossessing daughter, recently walked into a photographic gallery.

"Be you the photograff man?" she inquired, wiping her spectacles, and carefully adjusting them to the various spurs, dips, angles and sinuosities of her Corinthian nose.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the artist in plate glass and chemicals, "can I do anything for you?"

"No, I'm too far over the bay to waste any mechanical genius on me. It's my daughter, Partheny, here, that I wants tuk."

"All right, madam, will you ——"

"Can't yer soften down her complexion a little, an' tone up her nose what was broke fallin' out of a winder?"

"I think so," replied the artist.

"An' kin yer wipe off them freckles?"

"O yes."

"I've seen photograff of our relations, an' I've allers noticed that the picters flattered 'em clean out of sight. I know enough about the biz to recognize that you've got the whole thing in your own hands, an' kin turn out a perfessional beauty of the first water, just as yer please. Do you think you kin reduce those ears a trifle—jest a leetle. I know Partheny has got big ears, but still she aint no rabbit. Partheny is a generous girl, as yer kin see by her ears."

"I think there will be no difficulty ——"

"How about that air squint in the left optic? Do yer think yer can manage that?"

"O yes, I can touch it up with India ink."

"What particular pose do yer think Partheny would take best in, full face or a side show?"

"You mean quarter view or a profile?"

"I guess I do. Yer see the photograff is goin' to a young feller what put an advertisement into a newspaper for correspondents, an' Partheny's writin' to him. Now yer see how necessary it is for the picter to kinder favor her little blemishes. You'll do the fair thing by Partheny, won't yer?"

"Certainly; what size, madam, cabinet or cards?"

"Which is the biggest?"

"Cabinet."

"Guess, then, we'd better try her on a cabinet. If the photograffer does a good job, the bigger the better. What's yer figgers?"

"Twelve shillings a dozen for cabinets."

"How much for one?"

"Same price. It is the negative that costs, not the number."

"Well, all right. You just go ahead an' square them shoulders back a little, an' bring the nose down fine, an' wipe off the freckles an' straighten the eye, an' reduce the ears, an' whiten the complexion—an' the hair! It won't be red in the picter, will it?"

"O no. There will no color be shown but black."

"That's a comfort. Gracious! Partheny, what would he think of yer sent him an ol' paintin' taken from life! Kin I stay in the room?"

"O yes."

"All right. Strike an attitood, Partheny, an' we'll rope in that young man as sure as yer a foot high."—N. Y. Star.

At the Opera.

What is that man doing on the stage, with his mouth wide open?

He is singing, darling.

But I can't hear him.

That is because the girl at the piano is playing so loud, dearest.

But why does she play so loud?

She wants the audience to know, my precious, that she is a bigger man than the singer.

But is she playing the tune?

O no; only the accompaniment, darling.

Then she ought not to play so loud that we can't hear the singer; had she?

O yes, my sweetness; she must make all the noise she can.

Then it's no use for him to sing while she's playing.

Not much my love.

Why don't they make her play softer.

She would not do it, my treasure; she wants the people to know she's there.

Does the singer like it?

Not much, he wishes some one would tie her hands behind her.

Do the audience like it?

Not much: they wish somebody would throw the piano and the player into the river and give them a chance to hear the music.

If it were to be done, would the brave men who threw them in the river be punished?

Not at all, my angel; it would be a work of charity and mercy.—Oil City Derrick.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me."

Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN,
18 Sullivan St., New York, June 14, 1883.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The writer, well known in North Boston, Hon. B. W. HALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1883:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, purifies and strengthens the vital forces, and thus cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, such as scrofulous vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

DIPHTHERIA!

THE PROSTRATION which follows Diphtheria, and the persistency with which it clings to the patient, are well known to all who have had any experience with this terrible disease.

The following letter shows how the restoring and invigorating properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla overcome it, and how by vitalizing and enriching the blood it neutralizes and eradicates the poisoned matter from it, bringing to the convalescent the color, life and vigor of robust health.

LOWELL, MASS.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co.: Gentlemen—My little girl had the diphtheria last April. The disease left her very weak, blood poor, with no appetite, and she could not seem to rally from its effects. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA was recommended by a neighbor. After she had been taking it a few days we noticed a change for the better—she began to eat with a relish. It seemed to take out the poison the disease had left in her blood, the change being very noticeable in her face. She took it two months and fully regained her health, much to our delight. We now recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA with a great deal of pleasure. Very truly yours,

Specialty in Farming.

The assistant in agricultural experiments in the Agricultural College at Ames, Ia., presents strong reasons why the farmers should commence to be "specialty" farmers; that is, each one should select one branch of agriculture, as wheat-raising or dairying or the breeding of one kind of stock, and bend his whole energies to its mastery in all of its details, instead of carrying on mixed husbandry that includes the raising of oats and corn and wheat and stock. He assumes that the average farmer of to-day spreads his energy over too many kinds of work to advance much in knowledge of any one. The subject of agriculture is yearly becoming broadened by science. The writer refers to workers in scientific matters; how hopeless would be the task of a scientific man who attempted to become a second Leonardo, the master of all the knowledge of his time. For a man now to accomplish anything of benefit to the world in study, he must not only take one branch of study, but a single division of that branch. Thus in farming the man can accomplish most who limits himself to work in some one small part of his great profession. For instance, instead of investing five hundred dollars in cattle, five hundred dollars in horses and five hundred dollars in swine, let him put all of his capital into the business of breeding one class of stock. Let his reading be largely on the habits of this stock and its treatment and care by the most successful breeders, and let him attend all gatherings of like breeders, where he may hear interchange of experience in his chosen work.

No doubt this is very good advice if not carried too far. It is well, indeed, to have a large number of "specialty" farmers who will rapidly improve their departments of agriculture, and thus benefit all farmers. It will do very well for those farmers in good financial circumstances, if they have a taste for one kind of work, to devote to it their entire time. In most cases where there is intelligence and energy displayed, this "specialty" farming would prove more remunerative than general farming, and besides would tend more to increase the common stock of knowledge. But a very large majority of farmers are not fitted mentally for such work; success in a special line of work requires more than ordinary ability. They have not ready means, and could not afford to have their little all "in one bottom trusted." Agriculture is so limited by the weather, by disease and by insects, that a variety of crops and different kinds of stock seem to be necessary for most farmers, so that if one is lost by a frost or a pestilence or an insect, others will be left on which the husbandman can exist.

To the average farmer then, whose bank account is not very large, this advice to give up all but one branch of agriculture is not good. He must continue to have his different crops, his cattle and his hogs and his sheep. And, indeed, such a system is best for maintaining the soil's fertility, for the richest soil will become worthless by long-continued use in the bearing of one plant. "Mixed husbandry" is essential to the best agriculture of which any country is capable, and it presents a problem a broad one, indeed, compared to the improvement of one breed of cattle that should be solved: It is the rotation of crops best calculated to sustain the fertility of the land, and the relative amount of stock per acre that can be profitably kept on a farm.—Lansing Republican.

Conservative Turkeys.

Turkeys share with geese the curious conservatism that prevents them taking new shapes to please poultry fanciers. The ordinary fowls never hesitate at any absurdity, and there is nothing a breeder could ask a pigeon that it would not do. But geese and turkeys refuse to become anything save what they were. They will grow as large as you please, for they like that. Feeding is agreeable to them. But they will not turn trumpeter or tumbler, nun or capuchin. It is no use trying to develop "variations under domestication." They prefer to stay as they are, and politely but firmly decline to be anything else. This may seem, of course, a want of courtesy, or be construed into a lack of originality. But it is just as well after all in this world of change that something should remain as it always was. The geese on the Egyptian sculptures are one of the few representations that even the meanest capacity can comprehend. The turkey is one of the few birds that can be directly referred back to its primitive type. Wilence p. where this admirable fowl, so handsome in person and so excellent at table, came within the sphere of poultry-yard history does not record but its name in various languages betrays suggestions of such differing and such distant sources that it would seem as if from the first its origin had been a puzzle. Yet no one who has ever seen a turkey in a farm-yard could set eyes upon a wild one and fail to recognize it. The latter may be a trifle taller, and the coloring be, perhaps, less decided, but there is no possible room for doubt as to species. Yet, with an acquiescence in civilized tastes that can not be too highly commended, the tame bird has been careful to lose the coarseness of flavor of its wild congener, and with much consideration has exchanged the vulture leg-bones of its primitive ancestor for delicate shanks, replacing muscle and sinew with fat, and padding its breast with an amplitude of good meat. These changes act upon the bird precisely as broadcloth and boots act upon the savage caught fresh with all his paint and tattoo. They elevate his moral tone, and give him personal consequence. He moves about as if of importance, acquires the civilized sense of property, begins to possess and assert rights, inaugurates social conventionalities and etiquette. The better he is treated the better he becomes, more self-respectful and fatter.—London Telegraph.

The American Agriculturist truly says that in enumerating the crops of the country it should be borne in mind that the boys and girls are the most important. A failure in the grain crops may be remedied by succeeding harvests, but the future prosperity of the country depends on the character of the sons and daughters of American farmers.

A MODERN RESURRECTION.

A Miracle that Took Place in our Midst Unknown to the Public—The Details in Full.

Detroit Free Press.

One of the most remarkable occurrences ever given to the public, which took place here in our midst, has just come to our knowledge and will undoubtedly awaken as much surprise and attract as great attention as it has already in newspaper circles. The facts are briefly as follows. Mr. William A. Crombie, a young man formerly residing at Birmingham, a suburb of Detroit, and now living at 287 Michigan Avenue in this city, can truthfully say that he has looked into the future world and yet returned to this. A representative of this paper has interviewed him upon this important subject and his experiences are given to the public for the first time. He said:

"I had been having most peculiar sensations for a long while. My head felt dull and heavy; my eye-sight did not seem so clear as formerly; my appetite was uncertain and I was unaccountably tired. It was an effort to arise in the morning and yet I could not sleep at night. My mouth tasted badly, I had a faint all-gone sensation in the pit of my stomach that food did not satisfy, while my hands and feet felt cold and clammy. I was nervous and irritable, and lost all enthusiasm. At times my head would seem to whirl and my heart palpitated terribly. I had no energy, no ambition, and I seemed indifferent of the present and thoughtless for the future. I tried to shake the feeling off and persuade myself it was simply a cold or a little malaria. But it would not go. I was determined not to give up, and so time passed along and all the while I was getting worse. It was about this time that I noticed that I had began to bloat fearfully. My limbs were swollen so that by pressing my fingers upon them deep depressions would be made. My face also began to enlarge and continued to until I could scarcely see out of my eyes. One of my friends, describing my appearance at that time, said: "It is an animated something, but I should like to know what." In this condition I passed several weeks of the greatest agony."

"Finally, one Saturday night, the misery cultimated. Nature could endure no more. I became irrational and apparently insensible. Cold sweat gathered on my forehead; my eyes became glazed and my throat rattled. I seemed to be in another sphere and with other surroundings. I knew nothing of what had occurred around me, although I have since learned it was considered as death by those who who stood by. It was to me a quiet state, yet one of great agony. I was helpless, hopeless and pain was my only companion. I remember trying to see what was beyond me, but the mist before my eyes was too great. I tried to reason, but I had lost all power. I felt that it was death, and realized how terrible it was. At last the strain upon my mind gave way and all was a blank. How long this continued I do not know, but at last I realized the presence of friends and recognized my mother. I then thought it was earth, but was not certain. I gradually regained consciousness, however, and the pain lessened. I found that my friends had during my unconsciousness, been giving me a preparation I had never taken before, and the next day, under the influence of this treatment, the bloating began to disappear and from that time on I steadily improved, until to-day I am as well as ever before in my life, have no traces of the terrible acute Bright's disease, which so nearly killed me, and all through the wonderful instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy that brought me to life, after I was virtually in another world."

"You have had an unusual experience, Mr. Crombie," said the writer who had been breathlessly listening to the recital.

"Yes, I think I have," was the reply, "and it has been a valuable lesson to me. I am certain, though, there are thousands of men and women at this very moment who have the same ailment which came so near killing me, and do not know it. I believe kidney disease is the most deceptive trouble in the world. It comes like a thief in the night. It has no certain symptoms, but seems to attack each one differently. It is quiet, treacherous, and all the more dangerous. It is killing more people to-day than any other one complaint. If I had the power I would warn the entire world against it and urge them to remove it from the system before it is too late."

One of the members of the firm of Whitehead & Mitchell, proprietors of the Birmingham Eccentric, paid a fraternal visit to this office yesterday, and in the course of conversation Mr. Crombie's name was mentioned.

"I knew about his sickness" said the editor, "and his remarkable recovery. I had his obituary all in type and announced in the Eccentric that he could not live until its next issue. It was certainly a most wonderful case."

Rev. A. R. Bartlett, formerly pastor of the M. E. church, at Birmingham, and now of Schoolcraft, Mich., in response to a telegram, replied:

Mr. W. A. Crombie, was a member of my congregation at the time of his sickness. The prayers of the church were requested for him on two different occasions. I was with him the day he was reported by his physicians as dying, and consider his recovery almost a miracle."

Not one person in a million ever comes so near death as did Mr. Crombie and then recover, but the men and women who are drifting toward the same end, are legion. To note the slightest symptoms, to realize their significance and to meet them in time by the remedy which has been shown to be most efficient, is a duty from which there can be no escape. They are fortunate who do this; they are on the sure road to death who neglect it.

The life of a true Christian is like a beautiful river; it flows on in a steady, even course; the storms of life may ruffle its surface, but the deep undercurrent moves on undisturbed.

"When worthy men fall out, only one of them may be faulty at first, but if strife continue long, commonly both become guilty."

After the Sunday Dinner.

After the Sunday dinner, what? Well, it all depends. A person whose brain is wearied with intellectual work during the week, or whose nervous system is exposed to the strain of business or professional life, ought to sleep within an hour or so after his Sunday dinner, if he can. It is surprising how much like a seven-day clock the brain will work if the habit of a Sunday nap be once formed. Nature will take advantage of it as regularly and gratefully as she does of the nightly sleep, and do her best to make up lost time. People on the other hand, whose week of toil is chiefly physical, may well give their minds activity while their bodies are resting. Two sermons and three or four hours of solid reading are a real rest to some on Sunday, while to others such a course amounts to a positive Sabbath-breaking. Sunday is a day of rest, not a day of work, religious or otherwise. It is a day of repose, not for exhaustion. But what the dogmatists on one side and the liberal liberals on the other are apt to overlook is the fact that all men do not rest alike any more than they labor alike, and what may help one may kill another.

Neuralgia has very properly been called "the twin sister" of Rheumatism. Both are equally painful, alike stubborn, and results of the same causes. Athlophoros proves that both yield to the same treatment. Says Mr. J. E. Reed, of Los Angelos, Cal.: "I cannot tell you how glad I am that I found this great remedy Athlophoros. I had a violent pain in my face and took the remedy according to directions. Before I finished the first bottle the pain was gone and has never returned."

Samson's Legs and Locks.

When Delilah clipped off Samson's locks that mighty athlete at once became "as other men." If it could be proved that the possession of luxuriant hair would enable men to tear open lions' jaws, Hiscox & Co. would be driven wild in the effort to supply enough of Parker's Hair Balsam to meet the demand. As it is the Balsam prevents your hair from falling out, and restores the original color if faded or gray. Besides it is a great addition to the toilet table simply as a dressing.

As Stag Island is in Canadian waters, the attention of Senators Palmer and Conger is respectfully called to the case. The United States can furnish plenty of gravel, and a duty of about 40 per cent should at once be levied on gravel. The same policy prevails in the matter of salt, limestone, and scores of other things found, grown or made in Canada. Why not in the case of gravel, sand, etc? These Marysville men should not be allowed to ruin the American gravel trade or enrich themselves with impunity.

Adrian Times. If Fitz John Porter is restored to his old position in the regular army, as it seems likely now he will be, he will owe his restoration to the votes of men who were fighting to destroy the union when he, holding a command in the union army, was refusing to fight because he was disloyal to his superior officer.

True. And he will also owe his restoration to the votes and assistance of Gen. Slocum and a score of other Union soldiers who risked their lives to uphold the Union. It is a significant fact that both the Union and Confederate brigadiers in congress almost without an exception are in favor of doing justice to Fitz John Porter. Men who belonged to the fire in the rear brigade at the opening of the war are now terribly shocked at the prospect of Porter's restoration.

The bloody shirt debate in the Senate had the wind taken out of its sails by the failure of the Democrats to offer any opposition. Sherman and Mahone led off with violent speeches, but as the New York World says, "the creaking of their own wheels was all the sound they heard." Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, had rehearsed his speech four times at his private boarding house. Senator Frye, of Maine, had a sky scraper ready.—Conger, of Michigan, intended to pose as Zach Chandler had done, and frighten the Democratic wolves.—Every Senator on the Republican side had on a statuesque double-breasted black frock coat. Fresh from the hands of their barbers, they looked as if they appreciated the fact that the eyes of the galleries were upon them. Hoar cast a look of agony at the mass of manuscript on his desk not seeming to note the look of amusement upon Ingall's face. Frye looked as if he had lost his best friend. The melancholy glances of various Senators to the galleries, where their special friends and admirers were sitting, so amused Dan Voorhees that he almost laughed outright."

DOWN TO DEATH.

Horrible Accident on the Indianapolis & Chicago Air Line Railroad,

Caused by the Giving Away of a Bridge—Six Persons Killed and Several Injured—Heartrending Scenes at the Wreck.

LIST OF THE KILLED AND INJURED.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—The south bound accommodation train on the Indianapolis & Chicago Air Line, due here at 10:30 yesterday morning, met with a terrible accident when seven miles from this city at Broad Ripple. At that point the railway crosses the White River on a truss bridge of two spans, each 100 feet in length. The engineer had gone to the baggage car for a drink of water, and the locomotive was in charge of the fireman. When the locomotive reached the center of the bridge the fireman felt the structure sinking. He had a hand on the throttle which he opened, giving the locomotive all the available steam. The engine sprang forward with great force, breaking the couplings between the tender and baggage car.

The locomotive kept the track, but the baggage and smoking cars and another coach dropped through and were piled up in a mass at the foot of the piers, the smoking car being partially telescoped on the baggage car.

The wreck was partially submerged, but the portion above water immediately took fire from the stoves. The firemen state that when he looked back, after the locomotive reached the south end of the bridge the cars were on fire and smoke was obscuring the scene.

News of the wreck reached this city in a short time, and a wrecking train with surgeons and other assistance was at once made up and sent to Broad Ripple. On reaching the wreck a chaotic scene was presented. The bridge and cars were yet burning, and those present were so lacking in presence of mind as to be unable to extinguish the flames or afford any relief to the sufferers.

The officials of the road went to work vigorously and systematically, and in a short time the fire was extinguished and the search for the bodies begun. Six persons were either killed outright or burned to death. The remains recovered were burned and charred almost beyond recognition being horribly mutilated and the only means of identification was the finding of incontrovertible trinkets known to be the property of the dead men. The following is a list of the dead:

John Brewer, Lafayette, Ind., engineer.

J. E. Ricketts, baggage-master, New Albany.

George Lowry, brakeman, Buena Vista, Ind.

Thomas Parr, bridge foreman, Indianapolis.

Abel T. Smith, American Express messenger, Indianapolis.

The only passenger killed was John Bray, a stock dealer, residing at Deming.

Ex-Sheriff Seman, of Noblesville, had his right arm broken, and was injured badly about the head and body.

Lynn Clark, of Westfield, Ind., was injured internally and will die. The others injured are:

Joseph Claybaugh, Frankfort, cut on the head.

A. T. Peddigo, Frankfort, body bruises.

W. P. Howk, Westfield, head badly cut.

W. T. Sweeny, Carmel, skull fractured.

Mrs. Sullivan and babe, Carmel, slightly hurt.

B. Snyder, Tipton, slightly injured.

A gang of workmen had been making repairs on the bridge, all of whom were slightly injured. The two passengers seriously hurt, Seman and Clark, were left at the Broad Ripple and the others were brought to this city. The accident is now attributed to defective threads on the supporting rod of the bridge, the nuts on the ends of the rods fitting so loosely that the bridge was unable to support the weight of the train.

The scenes at the wreck were extremely distressing. The dead were in the ruins of the smoking and baggage cars, and these one on top of the other, were in deep water. A skiff was used for ferrying to land the remains of the dead. B. J. White was working under the bridge when the train went over, and says he thinks the rods pulled through the nuts, letting the bridge down. To all appearances one break occurred within fifteen feet of the pier and another about midway of the span.

White's escape was truly marvelous. Standing on the ice the falling bridge and cars struck him on the head, drove him through the ice down to the very bottom of the river. The timbers did not rest upon him however, and he swam out, more dead than alive, covered with bruises, but able to walk.

The new-boy on the train says he could have extinguished the fire with one bucket of water but it was not to be had. C. C. Loder and J. B. Horton were in the smoking car. At one end lay a man with skull crushed and life extinct; across him, close to a red-hot stove, lay Lynn Clark, a heavy timber binding one leg immovable. Loder tried to find the ax with which each car is provided, but it was on the other side of the car in three feet of water.

"For God's sake don't desert me," cried Clark. "We did not desert him," said Loder, "until the flames scorched us and we were almost suffocated with smoke. Before leaving I kicked out a window near Clark and left him in agony. Presently the flames burned the timber in two and he fell by Clark, and he crawled out of the window which we had broken for him."

"Within five minutes after the train went down," said Conductor Losey, "the entire wreck was wrapped in flames. In less time than that all who had not escaped already were drowned. Frightful screams came from the ruins near the pier, but with two buckets and no boat we were powerless, and all that we could do was to close our ears and pray for death to relieve our comrades."

A patch of gray beard led to the identification of John Bray. A train order in a vest pocket led to the belief that a handful of bones, to which were hanging a few shreds of roasted flesh, were the remains of Engineer Brewer. A button, a half inch of suspender or undergarment led to the identification of the others.

It is believed that all the killed have been recovered except Thomas Parr, who was supposed to be at the bottom of the river. The bridge and train were entirely destroyed.

THE MORMON QUESTION.

Provisions of Senator Hoar's Anti-Polygamy Bill Reported in the Senate From the Committee on Judiciary.

PROVISIONS OF THE BILL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Senator Hoar reported to-day from the Committee on Judiciary an anti-polygamy bill which embraces the principal features of the Edmunds bill introduced the present session, and adds other provisions originating with the committee, as follows:

The first section provides that in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation under any statute of the United States, a lawful husband or wife of person so accused, shall be a competent witness, and may be called and compelled to testify in such prosecution.

The second section provides that in any such prosecution, an attachment may be issued for any witness, and his or her immediate attendance compelled, without previous subpoena, when it is reasonable ground for believing he or she will unlawfully fail to obey the subpoena issued in the usual course.

The third section provides that a prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation may be commenced at any time within five years after the commission of the offense; this provision, however, not to apply to any offense already barred by existing limitation.

Section 4 provides for the certification of marriage in Territories, and penalties for the violation of its provisions.

Section 5 provides that records of marriage or anything in the nature of a marriage ceremony of any kind made or kept by any officer clergyman, priest, or person performing any civil or ecclesiastical functions, whether lawful or not, in any Territory of the United States, shall be subject to inspection at all reasonable times by any judge, magistrate or officer of justice appointed under the authority of the United States, under the penalty of a fine not to exceed $1,000 and imprisonment not to exceed two years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Section 7 provides for the amendment of all laws providing for or allowing registration or voting by females in the Territory of Utah, and makes it unlawful for any female to vote at any election hereafter held in the Territory of Utah for any public purpose whatever.

Sections 8, 9 and 10 provide for the amendment of all laws in the Territory of Utah which provide for the identification of voters at elections, and for the recognition of the capacity of illegitimate children to inherit, and which confer jurisdiction on probate courts, except in respect to deceased persons and the guardianship of infants and insane persons.

Section 11 provides for the amendment of all laws which provide that prosecution for adultery can only be commenced by the complaint of the husband or wife. It also provides that such prosecutions may hereafter be instituted in the same way as prosecutions for other crimes.

Section 12 provides that all laws incorporating, continuing, or providing for the incorporation known as the Mormon Church, as far as the same may preclude the appointment of certain trustees of said corporation as hereinafter provided, shall be annulled. It also directs the President, with the consent of the Senate, to appoint fourteen trustees, who shall exercise the functions prescribed for trustees of such corporation, and shall hold office two years, and shall report annually to the Secretary of the Interior as to property, business affairs and operations of said corporation.

Section 13 provides that it shall be the duty of the Attorney General of the United States to institute and prosecute proceedings to forfeit and escheat to the United States the property of corporations obtained or held in violation of section three of an act of Congress approved July 1, 1862. All property so forfeited to be disposed of by the Secretary of the Interior, and the proceeds applied to the use and benefit of the common schools in the territory in which such property may be.

Section 15 provides for the amendment of all laws creating or continuing the association called the Perpetual Emigration Fund Company.

Section 16 directs the Attorney General of the United States to take steps to dissolve that corporation, and provides that the assets in debts shall escheat to the United States and be invested by the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of the common schools of Utah.

Section 17 provides for the abolishment of existing election districts and apportionments of the representation concerning members of the Legislative assembly of the Territory of Utah, and it shall be the duty of the Governor, Territorial Secretary and United States Judges of said Territories to district the Territory and apportion representation so as to secure equal representation of citizens of the United States according to numbers in said legislative assembly, such establishment of districts and representation to continue until Congress shall otherwise provide.

Section 18 provides that all registration and election offices of every description in the Territory of Utah shall, upon enactment of this bill into a law, be declared vacant; and that all duties relating to the registration of voters, conduct of elections, the receiving or rejection of votes, the canvassing and returning of the same, and issuing certificates or other evidence of election in said Territory shall for the present be performed under the existing laws of the Territory and United States, by persons who shall be selected to perform that duty, by a board specially provided for by this bill. It provides that this board shall consist of five persons, to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, not more than three of them to be members of one political party, and each to receive a salary of $3,000 per annum; that this board shall continue in office until the legislative assembly of the Territory shall make provision for filling the registration and election offices in the Territory, and that the Secretary of the Treasury shall be the secretary of the board, and keep journal proceedings and attest its action. It provides for the canvass of all returns of elections by this board, and the issuance by it of all certificates of election to members of the Assembly, such certificates to be the only evidence of the right of such persons to sit in such assembly. It provides, however, that the board shall not exclude from the polls or refuse to count the vote of any person otherwise eligible to vote on account of any opinion such person may entertain on the subject of bigamy or polygamy.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—A singular case was reported to-day from the Senate Committee on Claims. It was on the bill for the relief of Eliza H. Powers, of Patterson, N. J. During the war she was engaged in caring for sick and wounded soldiers in various hospitals and not only devoted her time without compensation, but gave largely of her means for the relief of the sufferers. She is now old and an invalid. She has met with financial reverses and is in a needy condition. This bill provides for the payment to her of $2,500 to reimburse her for her expenditures in behalf of the Union cause. The Senate committee reported favorably on the bill.

Col. Dewitt Foster of Mexico has been spending a few days with his friends Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Clark of this village. The Colonel says that the Mexican Republic is developing wonderfully since their railroad system got in operation.

Jackson was all excitement again Tuesday over a murderer committing suicide at the old Crouch homestead Monday morning. A man named James Foy, who had been employed at the Crouch farm for several months, went to Union City on Monday, and while there shot a well known citizen named Shuler. Foy declared he would not be taken by the officers, and would kill himself before he would go to the penitentiary. He killed himself about five minutes before the officers arrived at the Crouch homestead. The people were greatly excited over the affair.

Two serious accidents happened in the village Monday afternoon. Mrs. L. E. Montgomery fell upon the ice and broke her left arm just above the wrist, and Mrs. R. Ford, had a similar fall breaking her left wrist in almost exactly the same place. The fractures are not considered dangerous, but they will subject the victims to forced rest and considerable inconvience for several weeks. It is a wonder more accidents didn't happen during the ice storm.

Deerfield Record: Greatly exaggerated accounts of the catastrophe at the M. E. church, last Sunday have appeared in a number of papers, which we wish to correct. The facts are that the breaking of the rotton joist allowed the floor to sink, and in no place did the floor go down more than one foot. The only danger possible, was that which might have resulted from a stampede, and all danger in that direction was averted by the coolness of Marshall Stansbury.

E. H. Barrows loaded his photograph car on bob-sleighs one day last week and started for Milan. While passing over a rough piece of road just this side of that place, one bob slid into a ditch and upset the car.—The fire in the coal stove escaped, setting fire to the chemicals, and the entire car was consumed in less than ten minutes. Nothing was saved except the suit of clothes he had on.—His Tecumseh friends made up a purse for him to help him get a new start.

Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mills, of Franklin, were the central figures of a pleasant surprise. About 60 of his friends and neighbors hearing with regret of his intentions of selling out and moving away took it into their heads to call upon him, which they did in an impromptu manner just as he and his wife were seated at the supper table. It is needless to say that everybody enjoyed themselves hugely. They all wish Leroy and his wife many years of prosperity.

Last Saturday was a lively day in Tecumseh; and business was booming.

Mr. E. H. Barrows desires to return his thanks to his Tecumseh friends for the sympathy they extended to him in such a very substantial manner.

The new time schedule of the M. & O. will be found in this week's HERALD. Business is increasing in both the freight and passenger departments and new stations are opened every week.

This libelous item appears in one of our exchanges: "It is claimed that the next day after the wedding the station agent at Brooklyn reported "seven wives on hand" instead of seven cars."

The new landlord of the Exchange Hotel in this village, Alex. Frandt, took possession last Monday morning. He comes well recommended, and knows how to "keep a hotel." Success to him.

There are now five presidential postoffices in Lenawee county with the salary of the postmasters as follows: Adrian, $2,400; Hudson, $2,100; Tecumseh, $1,800; Morenci, $1,100; Blissfield, $1,100.

Never take down your sign while you expect to do business, for it indicates that your business is poor and you are loosing your grip, commercially speaking. The judicious advertiser will receive ten dollars for every one invested in the columns of a live newspaper.

We see by the Grand Traverse Herald that the Michigan Flooring and Handle Manufacturing Co., of which Dr. Stewart is President, A. W. Slayton Secretary, and J. Gilchrist Trustee, has just made its annual statement. It is a stock company, $20,000 stock; $13,090 paid in, and entirely out of debt.

The written challenge of Dufur, the wrestler, directed to McLaughlin on the termination of the match at the Detroit opera house, to wrestle for $1,000 a side in Boston, New York or Detroit, has been accepted by the colonel, and the $50 forfeit money deposited with E. H. Gillman by Dufur has been duly covered.

The Heck Bros. have just placed in their mill one of the latest and most improved corn shellers and propose to do shelling for their customers. So thorough and saving does it do its work that a church mouse could not get a meal from the waste of a year.—Heck Bros. mill is kept running night and day to fill their orders and the local demand for their flour speaks volumes in its praise.

The Tecumseh paper mills were shut down a few days during the past week while the steam boilers were being repaired.

It is to be hoped that every one, high or low, rich or poor, will go and witness the beautiful and touching drama, "Driven from Home," at the Opera House on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week.

James Lowry's house, which is situated in the northeast portion of this township, was burned last Sunday night with all its contents. The loss falls heavily on Mr. Lowry who is in no situation to meet it. Luckily however, the property was insured in the Farmers' Mutual for $600, and this sum will make his loss good partially at least. The loss will undoubtedly be settled promptly.

Clinton News: A young man named Charles Fleeman, was shot at Bridgewater station last Friday. He was alone at the time and it is supposed that he was cleaning his gun when it was accidentally discharged. The jury rendered a verdict to that effect. Still, it is held by some that he committed suicide, and for that reason the German Lutheran church, of which the young man's parents are members refuse sepulture to his body within the cemetery and consequently there is much excitement over the matter in that little settlement.

Those who like to whirl in a skating rink may like to know what the Century magazine thinks of this popular amusement: "There is no finer, more manly, graceful, invigorating sport than roller-skating. It gives endless scope for personal courage, endurance, skill and taste. One can't get tired of it, for it is an art whose possibilities are boundless, and whose minute and finer developments are infinite in suplety and bewildering in their complex variety. Nowhere can our young people—young ladies and gentlemen together, meet in more hearty, natural and hearty relations than at the rink."

Stepping into the express office this morning we saw a crate with two sheep, a buck and a ewe lamb, marked Col. F. Dewitt Foster, City of Victoria, Mexico, via. Monterey, Mexico. These sheep were presented to the Colonel by W. S. Osborn, Abner and Henry Wilson. They are shipped via. T. W. & W. from Toledo to St. Louis, and from there to Larado, Texas, via. Missouri Pacific. From there they go by rail over the new Mexican Central railroad to Monterey, making a distance of 2200 miles by rail. From there they will go overland to Victoria, a distance of 300 miles. They will be presented to the President of the Republic of Mexico.

The Coldwater Republican tells how a Bronson man got an overcoat cheap and he didn't steal it either:

Last week while in Detroit, Prof. W. H. Wieand, of Bronson, stepped into Mabley's Clothing house to purchase an overcoat. He found one at $35 that just suited him, but concluded it was too much to put into a garment of that kind and chose one at $27. The money was paid, and just as he was leaving the store a cash boy requested him to step down to the cashier's desk, which he did, and the money was refunded with the explanation that they gave away every twentieth overcoat, and that he chanced to be the lucky person. The next day the Professor concluded he could afford to have the overcoat first looked at, and walking into Mabley's store inquired if they would exchange he paying the difference, to which they very kindly consented. The eight dollars was deposited, and again as he was leaving was requested to walk up to the captain's office, when the money was returned as before. He had bought the twentieth overcoat the second time. It's too cheap to wear well.

THE M. & O. ROAD.

Having occasion to make a trip to Toledo last Tuesday we took the afternoon train on the M. & O. which passes this station at 1 23 P. M. The train consists of locomotive, one baggage car and one passenger coach.—Arrived promptly on time and we were soon speeding down the road towards Toledo. Ridgeway and Britton were reached before we hardly knew it, and in forty minutes after leaving Tecumseh the train halted at Dundee. It was just one hour's ride from Dundee into Toledo. Their passenger cars are models of neatness and convenience, and the train officials seem to be picked men who are well up in their business. The trains run into the Wheeling & Lake Erie depot at Toledo, which is also used by the Baltimore & Ohio company.—We are informed that the M. & O. have a traffic arrangement with both these eastern companies which gives them an outlet for both freight and passenger business to all the principal eastern cities. They also have an arrangement with the Erie Railway and will sell tickets via. that road to New York. Over 1,000 freight cars are already distributed along the road, and other rolling stock is being added as fast as needed. It takes time, of course, to get a new railroad in running order, but the officials of the M. & O. are planting their enterprise on a firm basis, and we believe the road will become at an early day one of the most popular lines in Michigan. We had five hours' time in Toledo for business and returned on the late train via. the Lake Shore.

Hudson Gazette: A citizen of Canandaigua has sued the old woolen manufacturing company of Morenci for amount of faith he put into the concern, viz., $2,500. He prefers a judgment to a certificate of stock, of equal value.

The celebrated McGibeny family have been secured to give one of their musical entertainments at the Opera House on the evening of Feb. 22d. It is unnecessary for us to say anything commending this wonderful musical family as they are world wide known, but we annex a few press notices.

Deerfield Record: A little ripple of excitement was caused on the street Monday afternoon, by the report that a student of the high school, Miss Minnie Diver, aged nearly 14 years, and the adopted daughter of Asa Diver, had made an attempt to commit suicide by taken poison. The facts are that Miss Diver asked permission to leave the school room about two o'clock, and going down town, purchased two grains of strychnine at Wood's drug store, for the purpose, as she claimed of killing the mice which visited her desk and mutilated books, etc., but which she placed on snow and ate while returning to school.—She was discovered in the hall of the school house shortly afterwards in a week condition and unable to stand, and a doctor sent for, who proceeded to administer antidotes. She had recovered sufficiently by night to be carried home, and at last accounts was improving. No cause is assigned for the rash deed.

The Question, "What is the most economical way to fence land," was quite well discussed. It was the general opinion that the coming fence is to be largely composed of wire in some form, either as barbed wire or wire and wood combined. "DRIVEN FROM HOME."

Beers Post, 140, G. A. R., of Tecumseh, to create a fund for the relief of sick, disabled and deserving soldiers, have engaged the popular young actor and author Mr. Harry C. Chapman to produce his successful emotional society drama "Driven from Home, or High and Low Life in New York City," at the Tecumseh Opera House on the evenings of February 14th and 15th. Mr. Chapman will be supported by the best local talent of Tecumseh, we have some very good, and judging from those who have already accepted parts we can predict that Mr. Chapman will be most ably supported.

Mr. Chapman has had an experience of six years in the work of rehearsing amateur talent, during that time has established a most enviable reputation. The press of the cities where he has been engaged speak very highly of his powers, both as an actor and a coacher of amateur talent. We have good reason to believe that he will bring our talent out in a way that will not only be creditable to them and himself, but will also prove a very pleasant surprise to many.—This is the first venture of the kind for the G. A. R. and they are lending all energy to make it a commendable success. The price of admission has been judiciously placed at the popular figure 25 cents and 35 cents for reserved seats, which places it within the reach of all to assist a most laudable cause and witness a thorough presentation of an excellent play. The Battle Creek Journal in speaking of Mr. Chapman's recent engagement in that city says:

The play is an interesting one and the actors considering the fact that the most were amateurs, played their parts exceedingly well. Mr. Chapman in the leading roles of Jacob Goosengeimer and Harry Clifton, showed himself to be a character actor of rare merit possessing extraordinary powers of impersonation. Taken altogether the play produced a most favorable impression both by the superior excellence of the drama itself, and in the admirable style in which it was rendered.

"FOX'S BOOK OF MARTYRS" contains many frightful stories of most agonizing suffering. But nothing, either in story or picture, can be more distressful than the sharp, severe, shooting pains daily and nightly endured by those who are martyrs to that most terrible torment, Neuralgia. To get rid of this martyrdom is the first business of all who suffer.

ATHLOPHOROS regenerates painful nerves, and drives out the horrors of Neuralgia.

ATHLOPHOROS gives health to Rheumatic sufferers whom the most skillful physicians have not been able to heal.

ATHLOPHOROS operates on the blood, muscles, and joints, and dissolving the acids that cause Rheumatism, removes them from the system.

ATHLOPHOROS is pronounced by all who have tried it an indubitable specific for these obstinate and painful diseases.

Read the testimony of one of the sufferers. David Little, Sumner, Benner Co., Iowa, writes:

"I am past 77 years of age, have had the Rheumatism three years and eight months, lost one-third of my weight, could not walk, but shuffled along on crutches; could not sleep; nerves shattered, no strength in my hands, wrists, knees or feet. But thanks be to God for your great discovery! The medicine arrived Saturday night. I took a dose Sunday morning, felt it all over me, and kept on with it. Monday morning I got up and dressed myself, and walked out into the kitchen without the aid of crutch or cane, and wished them all a happy New Year. I rest well nights, am gaining in strength, and now I can enjoy life. Wish I could put ATHLOPHOROS in the hands of every sufferer from this terrible disease."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

CRYING FOR AID.

Loss of Appetite, Headache, Depression, Indigestion and Constipation, Biliousness, a Sallow Face, Dull Eyes, and a Blotched Skin, are among the symptoms which indicate that the Liver is crying for aid.

Ayer's Pills

will stimulate the Liver to proper action, and correct all these troubles. One or more of these Pills should be taken daily, until health is fully established. Thousands testify to their great merit.

No family can afford to be without AYER'S PILLS.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

When you come to think of it, it is not odd that literary people prefer a pipe to a cigar. It is handier to smoke when they are writing, and ever so much cleaner. And then it gives them the true essence and flavor of the tobacco.

The most fastidious smokers among all nations and all classes of men agree that the tobacco grown on the Golden Tobacco Belt of North Carolina is the most delicious and refined in the world. Lighter than Turkish, more fragrant than Havana, freer from nitrates and nicotine than any other, it is just what the connoisseur praises and the habitual smoker demands. The very choicest tobacco grown on this Belt is bought by Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co., and appears in their celebrated Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco. It is known the world over. Get the genuine with Bull trade-mark, then you will be sure of having absolutely pure tobacco.

ZOA-PHORA

Is a Sovereign Remedy for all Complaints peculiar to

WOMEN.

MISHAWAKA, Ind., Dec. , 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years, but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MRS. C. G.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am noway afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

A Death-bed Confession.

A gentleman, who had led an exemplary life, and against whose moral or religious character there had never been so much as a breath of suspicion, was taken very sick, and in presence of death, certain acts hitherto unconsidered came to his mind with agonizing force, resulting in the following confession of crimes, which he hoped, albeit with slender faith, might be forgiven him:

I have on two or three occasions borrowed postage stamps and failed to repay them.

I have neglected to strew ashes on my icy sidewalk, notwithstanding that I knew my neighbor was old and gouty.

I have sat in the horse-car and looked out of the front window until some other gentleman has given his seat to the feeble old lady who had entered the rear door.

I have talked in a loud voice at the theater, and even gone so far as to anticipate the action of the drama by keeping all within hearing posted in what was going to be done next.

I have looked over the shoulder of another who was writing something that was no business of mine.

I have whistled and played the devil's tattoo in the presence of a writer in the throes of composition.

I have talked about my own affairs for hours with a man who I was well aware was dying to tell me about his.

I have permitted a lady, clad in heavy furs, to keep the car window open, in my cowardice preferring to suffer from catarrh for weeks afterwards rather than insist upon the window being instantly closed.

I have allowed myself to be bored for hours by a man, when my judgment should have told me to instruct my servant that I was always out when ever this gentleman presented himself.

After working long and arduously upon an article for the press, I never failed to mention to the editor that this was something I had just dashed off.

I have several times thought my wife the most fortunate of women because she had me for a husband, and I have reflected long and earnestly upon the unhappy lot of women in general because there was not enough of me to go round.

I have persisted in reading some of my own compositions to people who I knew were suffering terribly under the infliction.

I have told a friend that I have read his book with absorbing interest, and been weak enough to return it to him without having cut open the pages.

I have tipped a waiter, in the hope that he would attend to my wants before waiting upon the gentleman at the next table, who could not afford to relieve the hotel-keeper from the hard ship of paying his servant's wages.

I have sat in the car with my ticket hidden under my thumb, that haply the conductor might pass me by unnoticed.

I have kept a man standing bare headed at his open door on a cold day, when I might just as well have gone inside and sampled his cigars.

While playing cards I have caught a glimpse of my opponent's hand, and still have failed to win; and having been given a card too many, I have foolishly cried "mis-deal" before ascertaining whether my hand was good enough to warrant me in dropping the extra card unnoticed upon the floor.

I have put a whole dime into the contribution box, when the one with a hole in it, that the shop-keeper refused to take, would have answered every purpose.

I have caused the shop-keeper to fall into mendacity by asking him if his berries were as good at the bottom as at the top.

I have rejoiced when my friends told me that my children were the perfect image of me, notwithstanding my mirror ought to have reminded me that I should be sad rather than joyful, if my friends told the truth.

I have committed many other grievous offenses which time fails me to enumerate. My last and wickedest crime has been to make this confession, when I might have carried my secret to the grave, and left the world to believe that I was indeed the perfect man I had always tried to make everybody think I was.—Boston Transcript.

Cable Ciphers.

The immense business and high rates of the Ocean Telegraph have led to a new feature in business—the manufacture of "codes," by which messages can be packed in a simple and economical manner. This specialty has been pursued by a number of "packers," the most prominent being J. C. Hatsfield. Great skill is necessary, since all words are to be avoided which have a similar sound. The packer's object is to make a word (and for an entire sentence, for instance, a banker may receive a cablegram from London containing the word "lowder." By turning to his "code" or book of words he finds that this means "the Bank of England has raised its rate of interest to 6 per cent." By the same rule a grain dealer may receive a cablegram containing the word "doaxed," which, by reference to his code, will be interpreted thus: "Buy and ship by steamer 1,000 bushels corn." The importance in economizing is found in the fact that it costs $2.00 to send one word to India, while China is nearly one-third more. One word to the east coast of South America costs $1.50 and to the west coast the rate is $8.

The best instance of packing in ancient times was Cæsar's dispatch to the Senate "Veni, vidi, vici." This is a neat fiction, a pretty play of fancy, but it suggests the wonderful skill which might be attained in the art of prevarication. A firm in India, which formerly sent its monthly report in sixty words, now conveys the same information in sixteen, this making a saving of $88.—N. Y. Cor. Troy (N. Y.) Times.

The Boston Saturday Evening Gazette says that "society" in that city does not appear to feel the stress of the times, balls, parties and dinners being more numerous and more elegant in their details than ever.

Florence Hasser, of Mexico, Mo., suicided because the bridegroom came not at the appointed time.

When a remedy has proven itself to be a cure for consumption and a perfect lung restorer, it should be kept in every well regulated home. We refer to Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, a single dose of which will cure an ordinary cough or cold. A few bottles will cure consumption. It is very pleasant to take.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

This periodical for February is already on our table, and is, as usual, overflowing with good things in prose, poetry and illustrations. The articles particularly interesting are "Henry Irving and His work," "New York City in its Early Days," "Sobieski and the Relief of Vienna in 1683," "The Colossal Statues of Germany and France," "Life on the Surface of the Ocean," etc., etc.—they are profusely illustrated. In the department of fiction Etta W. Pierce's serial, "A Dark Deed," is continued and there are short stories by Mary A. Denison, Edward E. Trafton, C. G. Rosenberg, Surray Wyatt, etc., etc., and Sketches, Adventures, Poems, etc., by favorite writers—many of the poems are beautifully illustrated, in fact, all the illustrations are highly finished, and the colored frontispiece, "Little Mischief," is worthy of an elegant frame. The price of a single number is 25 cts, and the yearly subscription $3.50 postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, N. Y.

Is your system running down? Is there a feeling of decrepitude taking possession of you? Are the functions of your digestive and urinary organs impaired? Is your blood bad? Do sores and pimples trouble you? Do you suffer from aches and pains? Are you weak and does the least exertion give you fatigue? Beware! Regain perfect health by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.

The American Bazar for February, just received, is a beautiful number, and fully justifies the claims of the publishers, that they are making "The Best and Cheapest Fashion Journal of the Day." In addition to its fashion departments, its literary features are of the highest order. Its subscription price, only $1.00 per annum, places it within the reach of all, and we also notice that in its premium list every subscriber is offered a choice from a catalogue of standard works by the best authors, free. Send 10 cts for a sample copy to The American Bazar Co., 202 Broadway, New York.

For scrofula, syphilitic disorders, thin and watery blood, sluggish liver (indicated by poor digestion,) weak kidneys (indicated by urinary sediments), deceased mucous membrane (indicated by both nasal and urinary catarrh, inflammed eyelids, etc.), use Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It gradually rebuilds a broken down constitution and restores robust health and strength to every part. No other remedy equals it.

SKILL IN THE WORKSHOP.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of confinement in close rooms have enfeebled his hand or dimmed his sight, let him at once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of Hop Bitters. His system will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight become clear, and the whole constitution be built up to a higher working condition.

The True Test.

If a man is hungry within an hour more or less after a meal he is a dyspeptic, it shows his stomach is not able to dispose of what he has eaten, but to eat again, and thus impose more work, is absurdity. Take Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic which cures dyspepsia, and all stomach, liver, kidney and bladder troubles. It is a perfect tonic, appetizer, blood purifier, a sure cure for ague and malaria diseases. Price 50 cents, of Baker and Hall.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprang up and began to steal the notices in which the press and the people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names, in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Swept into the Stream,

One Thousand Acres of Land, and "Right Smart of Bears."

On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboat stood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North: "When I was twelve years old, I killed my first bear on a new plantation my father was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acres of land went into the Mississippi years ago."

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turbid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to recklessness or ignorance the simplest thing might as well be complex as a proposition in Conic Sections. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the cities along their shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our ailments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs.

The most effective and inclusive remedy for disease is PARKER'S TONIC. It goes to the sources of pain and weakness. In response to its action, the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart begin their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The tonic is not, however, an intoxicant, but cures a desire for strong drink. Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have refused to yield to other agents? Here is your help.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—Petroleum has been discovered in the Punjab, Hindostan

—China's navy consists of nearly seventy vessels of all sizes and constructed almost entirely under native supervision.

—Lord Ripon, the Viceroy of India, is immensely popular among the natives, and the Calcutta native papers were printed in golden ink in honor of his recent visit.

—An iron-worker named Stokes, of Manchester, Eng., found a hare in a trap, and as it was suffering greatly he killed it. The act being committed on Sunday, a bench of magistrates fined him twenty shillings.

—Frederick William, the Crown Prince of Germany, and heir apparent to the throne, who has been visiting Spain and Italy lately, is fifty-two years of age. At home he is known as "Unser Fritz," which, being translated, means "Our Fred."

—The Revenue and Agricultural Department of the India Government have been trying to introduce improved agricultural implements among the natives. The Indian farmers received eighty-three different kinds. From official reports received from various districts it appears that out of the whole number distributed twelve only of the implements found favor in the eyes of the native agriculturist. Among the acceptable new tools is an American corn-sheller.

—According to Dr. Sach, of Buenos Ayres, there is no danger of an exhaustion of the quinine supply. The experimental plantations in Java and the Island of Reunion have been very successful; and, besides these nurseries, the trees have been cultivated in Bolivia by the million for ten years. At three places in the last-named country, taken as they come, the number of trees growing is given, severally, at 70,000, 200,000 and 3,500,000.

—Here is a a description of a Russian prison, written by Prof. Thun, of Leipsic: "The prison at Kara, near Irkutsk, is said to be one of the worst. If is an ordinary farm-house, surrounded by a high fence. There are no tables or chairs, only platforms, on which the prisoners lie packed like sardines. The food consists merely of bread and soup, with a very little grit. There is no hospital or other care for the sick. All those condemned to hard labor are compelled to wear chains, whether at work or in prison, and all correspondence is forbidden."

—It is only just about one hundred years since the brutal punishment of pressing to death was abolished by law in Great Britain. It was supposed to be the penalty for felony, but any criminal who refused to plead either guilty or not guilty was condemned to it. The criminal condemned to be pressed was laid naked upon his back, and had iron laid upon him, as much as he could bear and more and more, being meantime fed upon bad bread and stagnant water until he either died or pleaded. In 1726 a man accused of murder in a small English town refused to plead and was pressed for an hour and three-quarters with nearly 400 pounds of iron, after which he pleaded not guilty, but was convicted and hanged.

Malta and the Maltese.

The Maltese Islands are four in number: Malta, Gosso, Comino and Cominitto—Malta being the largest of the group. The axis of the group—twenty-nine miles in length—runs from southeast to northwest in the same direction as the Appenines. Malta is fifty-five miles from the most southerly point of Sicily, and 125 miles from Mt. Etna. During the last great eruption of this 10,000-feet high mountain the glare of its fires was distinctly seen from here. About 200 miles southwest of us Cape Bon points its finger out into the sea, and the northeast end of Africa begins at the finger-nail. Thus situated then, midway between the continents of Europe and Africa, and directly in the middle of the great water highway connecting American and European markets with Egypt, Asia and the Indies, Malta possesses an importance easily realized. She has been possessed by all the countries bordering on the Mediterranean in turn, and has been a bone of contention whenever the dogs of war were let loose.

Malta and its officially styled "dependencies," though only fly-specks on the broad map of the world, now geographically form part of Europe, though as to climate and productions they have much in common with neighboring Africa. The island of Malta itself is seventeen miles long by nine miles broad. A boat sailing round it would traverse about fifty miles. Its principal posts are the Great and Quarantine harbors at Valletta, which is separated by the hog's-back tongue of land called Mount Sceberras, on which the city is built. Among other bays on the northern shore is that of St. Paul, in which, 1,800 years ago, the Christian orator was driven ashore. With the perspicacity that you would naturally suppose him possessed of, St. Paul lighted on his feet when he struck Malta, for he not only chose the most beautiful of all the bays in the island to be wrecked in, but the people received him kindly, and, being ripe for it, were easily converted to Christianity. Prior to St. Paul's advent the inhabitants of Malta worshipped mythological gods. Only yesterday I saw a statue of the goddess Juno, before which the ancient Maltese have bowed down and sacrificed. It stands under an archway in a niche of the gate that leads into the old city of Citta Vecchia—the most venerable of the Maltese cities. The fine Cathedral that stands there is several hundred years old, and is built on the site of the house of Publius, who entertained the great Apostle. There are long, narrow catacombs traversing at all angles the underground of Citta Vecchia, in which the early Christians took refuge from persecutors. They are dug through solid rock, which rock, however, is easily worked—cutting more like cheese than granite. The atmosphere of Citta Vecchia is hazy with legend and sacred with the localities connected with St. Paul's stay in the island, and the Catholics, whose religion now prevails here, have made the most of them.

The highest point of Malta is 750 feet above sea level. There are not many trees visible excepting in the walled-in gardens of the wealthy. Water is but in such enclosures. Lemons, figs, pomegranates and dry apples flourish. The potatoes raised in the island are of the best, and its string beans, peas and beets are not surpassed anywhere. Olives do well here and grow wild. In short, it is a climate most favorable for vegetables and semi-tropical fruits and flowers. The pumpkins are high in color but low in taste. A sawdust pudding would be as palatable as a Maltese pumpkin pie. The "fields" of the Maltese peasant are inclosed in stone walls and will not average more than half an acre each. Two-thirds of the surface of Malta is rock, and the soil of these fields has mostly been "made." It takes a man's lifetime to change a rock floor into a fertile "farm," but the Maltese are patient and industrious. They love their island. They affectionately call it Fior del Mando, or the Flower of the World; but to the naked eye of the traveler the appropriateness of the term is not apparent.

When I first came here the dreary grayness of the barren landscape, the burnt yellow soil, the intense white and tiresome yellow of the low, unlovely houses, the scanty foliage and the imprisoning sea surrounding it all gave me a feeling of loneliness and homesickness, to which I succumbed at once and went to bed with the heartache. I thought of a certain placid lake girdled by evergreens, through which in the dreamy Indian summer time all the possibilities of glowing colors were sprinkled in profusion, and the heartless landscapes of my island abode was blotted out of sight by tears. But I soon got to know that Malta was not devoid of beauty—a beauty peculiarly its own. It has an atmosphere of color that makes an impression deeper than that of form, and the very scenes that first repelled me soon assumed a fairness and vividness that won my warm admiration. It was an honest victory for Malta. In spite of myself, against my will, I have come to feel and appreciate the loveliness that rests on rock and sea, in sky and air and climate. I never tire of the sunsets and twilights. And I have found life and health and hope here, and, therefore, there is warm enthusiasm in my tone when I say, "Viva Malta!"

These islands once formed part of a much larger tract of land and probably belonged to Africa or Europe, perhaps both. It is evident that Malta has diminished in size during the historic period. On the southern shore are to be seen cart tracks which abruptly end at the very edge of a cliff eighty feet high. Similar ruts are elsewhere found throughout the island. Volcanic action, doubtless, has submerged the country that once made Malta part of a mainland. One writer claims Malta to be a bit of the classic Island of Atlantis. Its known history is classic enough for ordinary purposes. Its first inhabitants (of which there is any record) were the giants who dared to war with Jupiter. Homer says these first gigantic inhabitants (Cyclops) were named Phœacians, and called the island Hyperia. Calypso—the fascinating nymph—had a residence here in which she entertained Ulysses on his return from the siege of Troy, while his wife Penelope was waiting for him at home engaged in plain needlework and shirt-making. I called at Calypso's "residence" one day, but she was out. She lived in a wet cave.—Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

Theater-Going in Paris.

A great many Americans who have never been in Paris imagine that, as it is the home and center of dramatic art, the theaters themselves and everything connected with them are perfect. This is one of the popular illusions that need to be dispelled. All the theaters, except the Eden, are stuffy and uncomfortable, and getting your ticket and going through the necessary formalities before you reach your seat are sufficient to deter many people from ever attending a performance. To begin at the beginning, when you go to buy your ticket you find yourself not before a good-sized window where you can converse intelligently with the ticket-seller, on the contrary, most of the ticket offices are cramped-up little places, and the window, or rather the opening across which you must make your wants known, is a little aperture often not more than ten inches square. If this so-called window were on a level with your elbows you might get on passably well, but it is usually on a line with your stomach, and to carry on your conversation it is necessary to bend over painfully low.

The ticket-seller is usually a woman—the buraliste, as she is called—and, as a rule, she is no longer at an age that inspires any tender passion. On the contrary most of these buralistes have been so long in office that they believe themselves to be the veritable manager of the theater. Directors, actors and authors fear them much more than they fear the public. The buraliste's reply to your questions is generally very short, and not always sweet, and I sometimes think that the little windows were made expressly to keep the ticket-seller at a safe distance from her purchaser.

If you succeed in getting a ticket you will receive not the convenient little bit of pasteboard so familiar to America, with the date and hour of performance, number of seat, etc., printed, but a large square piece of paper with your name, number of seat, and, if the play is given every night, number of the performance written thereon. Thus, if you purchase a seat for the fifteenth representation of a piece you must keep a look out to see when that fifteenth performance takes place. At many of the theaters you get no check attached to your ticket; the number is simply written on, and when you arrive at the theater your ticket is taken up and you are placed by an usher. To finish with the ticket, if it costs more than ten francs it must have a Government stamp, for which you pay two cents.—Boston Courier.

—Eight hundred dollars in greenbacks were found tucked away in the corner of a sleigh owned by a firm in Portland, Me., when it was brought out for use after the late fall of snow. The money is supposed to belong to a tramp who slept in the stable for a while and was sent to jail for three months for vagrancy.—Boston Transcript.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left me before I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

On the night of Jan. 21, the house of Henry Cunningham, of Charlevoix, was burned, with most of the contents.

Nearer to Nature.

Nature has made her laws with us, which we must obey or suffer the penalty. This penalty is often lung or throat trouble, which leads on to consumption. Every man believes consumption incurable. People have been educated to this belief which is proven incorrect by Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which is nature's great helpmate, and it cures consumption and and all throat and lung diseases speedily and permanently. HUMAN BLOOD.—On the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system. Disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause. A remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's Sarsaparilla undoubtedly does, must be the means o preventing many diseases that would occur without its use. The Peculiar Old Mystery!

It was one of the peculiarities of the old-fashioned Doctors that they never would tell patients what they were prescribing for them. They said it would do the patients no good to know, and that it would only be gratifying a foolish curiosity. In order to keep patients from knowing, they would write prescriptions in dog-Latin, so that most patients could not read them. All that sort of thing is now over. The patient wants to know what he takes. He is weak, and wants to be strong, or he is dyspeptic, and wants to digest well. Or he has a troublesome liver which he wants to put to rights. So he takes Brown's Iron Bitters about which there is no mystery at all. This is the best preparation of iron in the world, in combination with gentle yet efficient tonics. It gives strength. It builds up enfeebled systems. It enriches impoverished blood. It removes feminine weaknesses. It casts out debility. It is what you want, and your druggist has it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Gathered from All Quarters.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE, Jan. 30.—A petition was presented signed by 4,000 citizens of the District of Columbia, and other petitions signed by a large number of citizens of the Territories of Washington, Idaho and Dakota, all praying for the enactment of a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia and Territories. At one o'clock, the hour designated for the funeral ceremonies of the late Representative Mackey, the Senators proceeded in a body to the hall of the House of Representatives, and on their return the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—A resolution was adopted calling on the Postmaster General for all reports made by special agents of the Postoffice Department to the Postmaster General during 1881, having reference to the Star route investigation, which had not heretofore been published. At the expiration of the morning hour all public business was suspended, and arrangements made for the funeral ceremonies of the late Representative Mackey, which took place in the Chamber at one o'clock. Upon the conclusion of the ceremonies, the members of the Senate retired and the House adjourned.

SENATE, Jan. 31.—A large number of petitions from a dozen or more States were presented and referred, praying for prohibitory liquor laws in the District of Columbia and Territories. The conference report on the Greeley relief bill was taken up, and the Senate refused—25 to 27—to concur in the committee of conference and resolved to appoint a new committee. Mr. Blair introduced a bill to pay the employes of the Government for wages withheld in violation of the eight-hour law. A resolution offered by Mr. Platt was agreed to, directing investigations by the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Postroads into the cost of telegraphic correspondence, and how such has been affected by the consolidation of the Western Union and other companies, and by large stock dividends. The Senate resumed consideration of the bill providing a method for settling incomplete titles of lands acquired by the United States from the Republic of Mexico, but without action went into executive session and adjourned till February 4.

HOUSE.—Mr. Anderson, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a resolution, which was adopted, calling on the Secretary of the Interior to explain by what authority 189,000 acres of land were certified to the State of Kansas for the benefit of the Atchison & Santa Fe Railroad. The bill declaring a forfeiture of the lands granted the Texas Pacific Railway Company under the act of Congress approved March 3, 1871, and the acts supplemental thereto, was passed—yeas, 259, nays 1. Adjourned.

SENATE, Feb. 1.—Senate not in session.

HOUSE.—Mr. Dockery introduced a bill prohibiting the removal of employes of that body except for cause, during the vacation; referred. The conference asked by the Senate on the Greeley bill was agreed to and Messrs. Randall and Calkins appointed conferees. The morning hour was then dispensed with and the House went into Committee of the Whole on the Fitz-John Porter bill which passed after a lengthy discussion by a vote of 181 yeas to 7 nays. Adjourned. The Senate was not in session.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

EAST RIDGEWAY ECHOES.

The annual donation supper of the Church of Christ, of East Ridgeway, will be held in the basement of the First Christian Church of that place, Wednesday evening, Feb. 20th, 1884. All friends and well wishers of the church and cause of Christ at that place are cordially invited to be present on that occasion and lend a helping hand. BY ORDER OF COM.

The serial meetings held with the Church of Christ in East Ridgeway, closed Friday evening, Feb. 1st: The sermon of Rev. P. McCullough, of Oxford, Michigan, the pastor's assistant, were in "demonstration of the spirit and with power," were well timed and well received by the large audiences who listened to their delivery. The visible results of the meeting were 15 additions to the church; most of whom are heads of families. There have been three valuable accessions to the church since the close of said meetings; all heads of families. In this accession of 18 persons to the church quite a considerable amount of wealth was brought in, and as those who are in possession of it are persons who are liberally disposed with their means, they will be of great benefit to the church in a financial way, as well as adding very materially to the spiritual force and power of the church.

B. F. RAPP, Pastor.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

The happy couple start out on life's journey with the good wishes of all.

The funeral of Mr. L. M. Dean took place at the church on Wednesday last at 2 o'clock, P. M., Rev. Mr. Campbell officiating.

The Misses Clark entertained a party of young people at the residence of their mother last Saturday evening. Games, music and refreshments were the order of the evening. William J. Osborn entertained over a hundred of his friends last Saturday afternoon and evening. It was one of those kind of parties where every one goes to have a good time, and judging from appearances we should think they did. The presents were numerous and all useful. May Will and his wife live to enjoy another decade of married life.

ANOTHER BLOODY CHAPTER.

In the Crouch Tragedy—A Detective Shot on the Public Highway.

We obtain from the Jackson Patriot the particulars of the last act in the terrible Crouch murders.

Last night soon after 8 o'clock the Patriot received a telephone message from Horton in this county to the effect that Detective Brown, of Jonesville, who has been engaged in working up the Crouch case, had been shot on the public highway about one and a half miles from that village. Further inquiry brought out the following particulars of the terrible transaction. The detective had been down in the Crouch neighborhood and after dark started for Horton on foot. When at the distance from that place just mentioned, he met two men in a buggy who drew rein and asked him if he was Detective Brown. He replied in the affirmative, when the smaller of the two men thrust forward a revolver close to his person and fired. The bullet entered his left breast about four inches from the heart and passed through to the shoulder blade where it remains. The unfortunate man fell to the ground, while his murderous assailants whipped up their horse and drove rapidly in this direction. Soon after, Brown got upon his feet and walked on as best he could for about a quarter of a mile, when he was overtaken by a couple of young men named L. Goldsmith and Wm. Younger, from Jackson, who helped him into their buggy and took him as quickly as possible to the hotel at Horton where he now remains.

With the quick eye of a professional Brown noticed a number of points touching his assailants that may prove of value to the officers. The horse was a bay with a small white strip in the forehead, and was hitched to an open buggy. One of the men was larger than the other, and wore an overcoat of dark color. The smaller wore a light overcoat and did the shooting. Both had on Scotch caps.

The outrage it is conjectured occurred about fifteen minutes after seven o'clock. As soon as the Jackson officers heard of it they telephoned to take Detective Brown's statement in writing, in order presumably that a record might be had of it in case of a fatal result from the wound. This statement we learn was accordingly written out by him, but of course we are unable to give more than his verbal account of the transaction. He asserted that the man who fired the revolver was about the size of Judd Crouch and had looked like him. As Judd is said to have been in Horton in the evening just before the shooting this anouncement created intense excitement.

Detective Ryan and Officers Snyder, Boyle and Lourin left for the scene of the difficulty as soon as it came to their knowledge. Officers from Horton also started in pursuit of the assassins and every exertion will be made to hunt them to their lair.

The celebrated McGibeny family have been secured to give one of their musical entertainments at the Opera House on the evening of Feb. 20.—It is unnecessary for us to say anything commending this wonderful musical family as they are world-wide known, but we annex a few press notices:

WE DO NOT CLAIM

that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the sold of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack and bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I remain,

Very truly yours,
MRS. S. S. MOODY,
No. 75 Broadway.

A HUNTER'S STORY.

How He Was Overcome and the Way by which He was Finally Saved.

(Correspondence Spirit of the Times.)

An unusual adventure which recently occurred to your correspondent while hunting at Brookmere in this State is so timely and contains so much that can be made valuable to all readers, that I venture to reproduce it entire:

The day was a most inclement one and the snow quite deep. Rabbit tracks were plentiful, but they principally led in the direction of a large swamp, in which the rabbits could run without difficulty, but where the hunter constantly broke through the thin ice, sinking into the half frozen mire to his knees. Notwithstanding these difficulties, the writer had persevered, although a very small bag of game was the result, while tramping about through a particularly malarial portion of the swamp, a middle-aged man suddenly came into view, carrying a muzzle loading shot gun and completely loaded down with game of the finest description. Natural curiosity, aside from the involuntary envy that instinctively arose, prompted the writer to enter into [illegible] with the man, with the following result:

"You've had fine success, where did you get all that game?"

"Right here, in the swamp."

"It's pretty rough hunting in these parts, especially when a man goes up to his waist every other step."

"Yes, it's not very pleasant, but I am used to it and don't mind it."

"How long have you hunted hereabouts."

"Why bless you, I have lived here most of my life and hunted up to ten years ago every year."

"How does it happen you omitted the last ten years?"

"Because I was scarcely able to move, much less hunt."

"I don't understand you?"

"Well, you see, about ten years ago, after I had been tramping around all day in this same swamp, I felt quite a pain in my ankle. I didn't mind it very much, but it kept troubling me for a day or two, and I could see that it kept increasing. The next thing I knew, I felt the same kind of a pain in my shoulder and I found it pained me to move my arm. This thing kept going on and increasing, and though I tried to shake off the feeling and make myself think it was only a little temporary trouble, I found that it did not go. Shortly after this my joints began to ache at the knees and I finally became so bad that I had to remain in the house most of the time."

"And did you trace all this to the fact that you had hunted so much in this swamp?"

"No, I didn't know what to lay it to, but I knew that I was in misery. My joints swelled until it seemed as though all the flesh I had left was bunched at the joints; my fingers crooked in every way and some of them became double-jointed. In fact, every joint in my body seemed to vie with the others to see which could become the largest and cause me the greatest suffering. In this way several years passed on, during which time I was pretty nearly helpless. I became so nervous and sensitive that I would sit bolstered up in the chair and call to people that entered the room not to come near me, or even touch my chair. While all this was going on, I felt an awful burning heat and fever, with occasional chills runing all over my body, but especially along my back and through my shoulders. Then again my blood seemed to be boiling and my brain to be on fire."

"Didn't you try to prevent all this agony?"

"Try, I should think I did try. I tried every doctor that came within my reach and all the proprietary medicines I could hear of. I used washes and liniments enough to last me for all time, but the only relief I received was by injections of morphine."

"Well, you talk in a very strange manner for a man, who has tramped around on a day like this and in a swamp like this. How in the world do you dare to do it?"

"Because I am completely well and as sound as a dollar. It may seem strange, it is true that I was entirely cured; the rheumatism all driven out of my blood; my joints reduced to their natural size and my strength made as great as ever before, by means of that great and simple remedy, Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure, which I believe saved my life."

"And so you now have no fear of rheumatism?"

"Why, no. Even if it should come on, I can easily get rid of it by using the same remedy."

The writer turned to leave, as it was growing dark, but before I had reached the city precisely the same symptoms I had just heard described came upon me with great violence. Impressed with the hunter's story, I tried the same remedy, and within twenty four hours all pain and inflamation had disappeared. If any reader is suffering from any manner of rheumatic or neuralgic troubles and desires relief let him by all means try this same great remedy. And if any readers doubt the truth of the above incident or its statements let them write to A. A. Coates, Brookmere, N. Y., who was the man with whom the writer conversed and convince themselves of its truth or falsity. J. R. C.

A Pretty Story.

"I believe in a providence," said Victor Hugo to a company gathered around him in the Rue de Clichy, "because I am a providence myself." Being asked for an explanation, the poet repled: "We caught a mouse yesterday evening. His death sentence was already pronounced, when my little granddaughter, Jeanne, with eyes glistening with tears, begged for the life of the gray prisoner. Her mother hesitated whether to listen to the dear little advocate or not, and in her doubt said, 'Grandfather shall decide.' So they came to me. For a moment I held the power of life and death over the diminutive creature, and I thought; The heavenly providence may find itself in my situation when the fate of a being of a higher order is to be determined.' Naturally I set the mouse free; for when a man undertakes the role of providence on a small scale, he should at least imitate generosity."

To cure an ordinary cough or cold take one dose of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry before going to bed at night. It will cause a suspension of nervous excitability, allow you sweet repose, and by morning the cough will be none. It is the best and therefore cheapest cure for coughs, colds and consumption; is sold by druggists generally, and ought to be found in every intelligent household.

A New Yorker on a recently dreamed that he was a Texas desperado in a town threatened by Indians, and when he woke up he found that he had crawled under the bed.

"Ish this 'er postoffice?" inquired Cauliflower, slightly disfigured after nineteen rounds of sour mash. "No, this is a butcher shop," replied the sarcastic mailing clerk, licking a faded one cent stamp. "Shoo! Ish that sho! Well, give me a tender line for my muzzer."

Quack doctors, electric belt and other swindlers who live by frightening our young men and young women by nasty circulars, will find their occupation gone when it becomes generally known that Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is a certain cure for all weakness of the urinary organs, nervousness, etc. Obey the laws of health, take a few bottles of this sanative remedy and you will soon [illegible] vigorous manhood and be emancipated from all worriment of mind and consciousness of body.

The story is told of an old lawyer in Michigan who lost his way in the woods a number of times while the country was new. At length he secured a pocket compass and its use was explained to him by a friend. But shortly afterward he lost his way again and lay out as usual. When found he was asked why he did not travel by the compass. He did not dare! he said. He wanted to go north, and he "tried to make the thing point north, but it wasn't no use, 'twould shake, shake, shake round and point southeast every time.

Remember a complete cure for aches and pains, sores, pimples, urinary sediments, disturbing dreams, nervousness, despondency, indigestion and general weakness of mind and body, brought on by improper habits or otherwise, is found in two or three bottles of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, as has been proven by the experience of many who long suffered, but now feel well and strong in all parts of the body.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that "the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time." Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

Adam's Fall.

Ever since Adam's fall, which subjected human nature to diseases of the flesh, there has been a demand for a blood purifier. We all realize the fact that upon the purity and vitality of the blood depend the health and vigor of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only a sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause; hence a reliable blood purifier is of greater importance to the people than is generally supposed. We are pleased to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla bears unmistakable proof of being the best of a medicine and we think it worthy a trial.

A bowl of good pea soup is as satisfying as a hearty dinner on a cold day. To make a gallon of it, wash a pint of peas and soak them over night; then boil in five pints of water, gently simmering three hours or so, until thoroughly soft. With a potato-masher rub the soup through a colander or wire sieve. A pound of beef or ham bone may be boiled with the peas. The soup may be seasoned in various ways—with onions, cloves, pepper, etc.

For three years Mr. R. C. Wright, of Gaston, N. C., had been an intense sufferer from Rheumatism. His friend J. A. Warwick, of Petersburg, Va., writes: "Before the first bottle of Athlophoros was finished he was able to walk, and now goes about all over his farm." In this case, which the friends of Mr. Wright regarded as desperate, a test was made of Athlophoros. It surprised friend and patient by its prompt and thorough action on the blood and diseased parts, and won the emphatic opinion that it was truly a specific for Rheumatism.

A little dot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

The B. & O. telegraph company are [illegible] The company is now operating 15 wires from New York to Chicago, which is about half as many as are operated by the Western Union company, and are now engaged in constructing five wires from New York to Boston, which will be finished in June. Lines from Chicago to St. Louis, a Indian point and Cincinnati, another from Pittsburg to Cleveland, three to Chicago and arrangements are also completed for the construction of lines in Texas and Louisiana, taking in Houston, Galveston and New Orleans. The attention of the company is to provide ample facilities between the larger places for meeting the demands of public business.

The flood at Cincinnati has already surpassed that of last year. The situation Monday is thus described: "To-day the water has been rising with increased rapidity, mounting up at the rate of an inch an hour. All hope that the inhabitants of the city would be spared a repetition of last year's disaster has fled. At 10 M. the great flood of 1883 had been surpassed with the waters still gaining in an stream above, and threatening in violence at this point. There is reason for much alarm, and what will be the limit no one can tell. The best judges have no hesitancy in predicting six feet, a depth of one foot and eight inches over the highest mark of 1883. This means frightful destruction of property, perhaps an alarming loss of life and much hunger. Houses that withstand the water at its present depth will be overturned at 69 feet or at a less depth and in some instances there will be a consequent loss of life.—Thousands will be cut off from a condition of self dependence. It is now a week since the sun has been seen and hope and cheer have been gone as long. Everything is gloomy, and the future is filled with yet darker pictures."

The Evening News thus describes the troubles of Congressman Eldredge:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Representative Eldredge, of Adrian, Mich., is the most disconsolate member of the Michigan delegation. He was among the last to draw a seat, and consequently he had to go over on the republican side. His seat is up near the wall, close by a picture of the landing of Columbus. Mr. Eldredge says he is getting to have a great dislike for Columbus, and wishes he had never existed. In order to catch the speaker's eye Eldredge is compelled to walk round the hall. He also has great difficulty in voting. Not being fully posted on a question, he often finds himself voting with the republicans. During the discussion of the Fitz John Porter bill, a division was demanded on a motion to limit the debate. The republicans were opposed to it, and when they got up they urged Eldredge to do the same. Wishing to be accommodating he did so. Later, a yea and nay vote was called, but the Adrian representative found out in time which side his party were voting on, and had his name recorded all right. Mr. Eldredge frequently visits the Michigan colony on the democratic side and pours the tale of his troubles into his colleagues' ears. He is afraid he may become a republican; but, however else he may change, it is not likely he will be other than a revenue reformer.

THE DELUGE.

Great Desolation Caused by the Continued Floods in the Ohio River Valley—People in Their Mad Despair, Riddle Relief Boats with Bullets—The Situation at Wheeling—Growing Worse at Cincinnati—Danger at Other Points.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 11.—Yesterday the water fell below the danger line, and the scene of devastation presented to the eye was complete. A great part of the city is still inundated, and the business is covered with mud. In the extreme southern part of the city great suffering prevails, and starving people are crying for food and the almost dry clothing. CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 11.—The stage of the river at midnight was sixty-six feet four and one-quarter inches and a heavy rain is falling. The Water-Works Department will order all the elevators stopped to-day. The big Shields pumping engine is the only one that can work in this stage of the river, and sixty-six feet ten inches will stop it. The reservoir has five days supply of water in it. The stage of [illegible] was surpassed yesterday in rising, and the river rose almost constantly all day. There is now little doubt that the mark of last year will be passed within the next twenty-four hours. The extreme [illegible] are greatly [illegible] the gas company has [illegible] supply. The gas supply will last night. At all night the street lamps will be lighted and gas burning in very few places. The offices in the Western Union operators' room are supplied with candles, and theaters are running with electric and calcium lights and private gas machines. The water yesterday on both sides of the embankment skirting the tracks of the Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore Road in Mill Creek Valley so softened the earth as to cause two slides, leaving the track unsupported. This compels trains on this road to enter on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton track. The Bee Line trains are compelled to make a terminus at the Stock Yards, three miles out.

GALLIPOLIS, O., Feb. 11.—The river is rising three-quarters of an inch per hour, and it is raining heavily. The water is seven feet above the high water of last year. The steamer Telegraph went to the relief of Point Pleasant yesterday. The town is completely submerged and the inhabitants have gone to high grounds. Chesterhill, Addison and other small towns are suffering in the same way. At Catlettsburg, Ky., the river is now two feet higher than last year, a drizzling rain falling. The Big Sandy River is reported rising at Richmond. At Ripley the river is rising three-quarters of an inch an hour. Many houses that stood through the flood of last year have been reached now and entirely swept away. The water is twenty-two inches higher than last year.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 11.—An engineer on the Scioto Valley Railway waded out to Portsmouth yesterday morning and telegraphs from Piketon, twenty-four miles north, that the water is five feet higher at that city than last year. The steamer Bonanza is lying afloat on a sidewalk, and people are entering a hotel through the second story windows. Where the engineer left three houses were burning which the engines could not reach. Manager McCrea, of the "Pan-Handle," announces that traffic will be open between Pittsburgh and Columbus this morning.

AURORA, Ind., Feb. 11.—The water is still rising, and is now at the door of the Aurora National Bank. Only one drug store remains out of water. It is raining now. At Madison, Ind., the water is rising half an inch an hour and it is raining.

FLOOD NOTES.

The water guards on the James River in the upper section of Lynchburg, Va., are giving way, and a great destruction of property is threatened by an inundation. The river is rising rapidly.

James E. Fennessy, manager of Hinck's Opera House, Cincinnati, received a dispatch from Colonel Mapleson Saturday night announcing the postponement of the opera advertised for this week owing to the floods.

The greatest freshet ever known was caused in the Cumberland Valley Saturday by the breaking of the ice in Conodoguinet Creek. Four valuable bridges between Carlisle and Susquehanna, Pa., were swept away, and mill-dams and other property were badly damaged.

William Flynn was shot through the breast with a Winchester and probably fatally wounded. Frank Flynn received a shot through the hand, inflicting a slight wound. Frank Hell, the driver of the hack, was shot through the back of the neck and died an hour afterward. Robert Hargreave, a bystander, was shot through the breast and will probably die. J. H. Craig, a prominent banker man, received a charge of buckshot through the back and his condition is considered precarious.

The affair originated nine weeks ago on account of Frank Flynn endeavoring to prevent Doran from opening a gambling house. It culminated at the time in Doran making a cowardly attempt to assassinate Frank Flynn, failing in which he fled the city, returning secretly a few nights ago. Flynn was unaware of his presence in the city until the fatal volley was opened on him.

Intense excitement prevails and strong threats are made of mobbing the prisoners. The seven were arrested and are now in jail. A. Doran, two Pruitt Brothers, Howard and three others. The citizens are loud in condemnation of the numerous and cowardly act. Judge Wood has been telegraphed to by leading citizens requesting him to adjourn court at Malvern and return here and hold a special session to try the murderers. If the request is granted the law will probably be allowed to take its course. If he does not the citizens boldly threaten to bulldoze the jail and hang the prisoners.

A Son Brutally Murders His Father Near Uniontown, Pa.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 11.—Saturday night Union Township, three miles east of here, was the scene of a brutal murder, the victim being Alpheus Wilson, aged sixty years, and the murderer his son Frank. The two, who had been drinking, had a quarrel, which ended in the father ordering Frank away from home. The latter complied, but in ten minutes returned and called his father outside. The old man started for the door but before he could reach it Frank drew a revolver and shot him dead. The parricide then went to the house of Dennis Springer, a short distance away, where he remained all day, threatening to kill any one who attempted to arrest him.

Sunday evening Sheriff Sterling and two constables went to Springer's, and after some little trouble captured him, but not before he attempted to shoot the officers. On his way to jail he passed his father's house. His mother came out to see him, and he told her that he intended killing the old man; he was intoxicated when the deed was done, but it made no difference.

A Right of Way Fight.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 9.—This morning a force of workmen, ostensibly operating under the charter of the People's Street Railway Company, commenced laying tracks on Norwegian Street, but their work was stopped by an injunction obtained by the Pottsville & Mahany Railroad. The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad is said to have secured the control of the People's Street Railway, whose charter authorizes the laying of tracks and running of cars by horse or steam power on any street in the city.

The object of the meeting is to take such action as required for miners' interests. Just what this will be the officers refuse to state. RHEUMATIC SYRUP CO., Rochester, N. Y.

THE MINISTER WHO FAILS to interest his congregation and build up his church is generally accused of being a poor preacher, or of not studying hard enough. That is not always where the trouble comes from. Dyspepsia and liver disorders are responsible for many a dull sermon and many a vacant pulpit. When the Digestive apparatus is working wrong and his nerves are giving him pain, his brain refuses to do its duty, it is almost impossible to make or deliver a good sermon. Give your suffering minister a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. You will see its effect on next Sunday's preaching. The Rev. Mr. Zehring, of Codorus, Pa., was paralyzed, and could not walk except with crutches, until Brown's Iron Bitters made a new man of him. The Rev. Mr. White, of Rock Hill, S. C., says: "It restored me to strength and vigor." Brown's Iron Bitters is not only for the minister, but for all people.

About five minutes after we saw him marching off with a damsel. Verily, the time of miracles is not past.

Nothing so improves a property as well kept hedges around it. We have but few in Lenawee Co., but Mr. A. B. Aylsworth of the Dayton Hedge Company informs us that about 100 miles of hedge is contracted to be set in the spring in this county and he will probably contract for many miles more before the summer is through.

Go and hear Rev. Hudson on the Recent Floods, next Sunday evening. And by the way, would it not be well for some of our public spirited citizens to move in the direction of a response to the calls for relief, and call a public meeting, say next Monday evening to see what can be done? Michigan had help in her time of need; shall we be ungrateful?

There will be a meeting of all persons interested in the cause of Prohibition at the Reform Club Room, on Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of disbanding the old Prohibition Club and reorganizing in the interests of the New Union Party. Hudson Post: When the bobs started on Lafayette street Tuesday eve. there were four lads and lasses thereon; when it stopped half way down one lad had his leg nearly broken, one had a face badly scratched, while the ladies were so badly entangled in female gear that the fact of one of them having her arms around a boy's neck was excusable, on the ground that she did not know it.

Blissfield Advance: Another meeting was held Wednesday afternoon in the interest of a cheese factory. The attendance was not large, owing to the unpropitious weather. We understand a building has been provided for, the only other essential point to be gained in a sufficient number of cows. Will the farmers in the vicinity take interest enough to guarantee the necessary number?

Wheeler was driving into the city on Park street, her horse became frightened and ran away, and Miss Wheeler was thrown violently from the cutter and picked up in an unconscious condition. She was taken to the residence of John Clark, and Dr. A. Stephenson summoned. The horse rushed madly down Maumee street and was stopped near the corner of Main.

The young men of Clinton will give a return leap year party on Monday evening, Feb. 25th.

On Thursday, Jan. 31st we inserted a notice in the HERALD of seed corn for sale, stating that samples could be seen at this office. During the ensuing eight week days forty-three men called at our office to see those sample ears. And yet some folks think an advertisement in a paper is never read.

A SUIT-ABLE SURPRISE.

Yesterday was the sixty-ninth anniversary of Mr. A. VanAntwerp's birthday. A number of his personal friends conceived the idea of making him a surprise and presenting him with some token of their friendship and esteem. They assembled at early evening and proceeded to Mr. VanAntwerp's residence on Pearl street, and literally took the family by storm, as it was snowing briskly at the time.

The victim was seated by the fire utterly unconscious of what was in store for him, while the guests filed in led by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ayers, who had planned the affair, and took possession of the house. After order was restored, a large bundle was brought in, and S. C. Stacy in a few remarks, presented to the host a brand new suit of clothes in behalf of the assembled friends; coat, vest and pants and all the other et ceteras to make a complete suit. Mrs. VanAntwerp also received a few articles of glassware from her lady friends. After an hour or so passed in social chat, the extension table was spread in Mrs. Ayres' apartment of the house and the guests sat down to a bountiful repast. When the edibles had been properly disposed of, the friends passed the remainder of the evening in friendly intercourse and all departed for home wishing Mr. VanAntwerp many returns of his birth-day anniversary and voting the affair to be a most suitable surprise.

SEED CORN.

James B. Colvin, of Raisin, has a letter in the last Michigan Farmer on the subject of seed corn which we think will be of interest to our readers:

I wrote you last February giving my method of preparing seed corn, and in the next week's Farmer I saw my letter published, and, by the way, it proved a splendid advertisement, for in a very short time my corn was all sold. Your paper has a wider circulation than I had supposed. I had orders from Michigan that I expected, but I did not expect orders from Illinois, Ohio, and the State of New York, which I did have in plenty. I could have sold ten times as much seed as I had to spare. Now for the result. I sold seventy-five bushels of shelled corn, and it went far and wide and gave the best satisfaction. Not a word of complaint ever reached me of a failure. I am so well satisfied with my last year's experiment in kiln-drying seed, that I have this fall dried a still greater quantity, and I think I have proved that it is the only safe plan to adopt. When the first freeze came the first part of November, I had husked and put to dry about one-half the quantity of seed I intended to save, but after that freeze I dared not save any more. I husked and tried some and found that very little of it would sprout. I wish to say to farmers generally, do not hang your seed corn up in hog pens or in the corn house, or horse barn, or any such place, but put a wide shelf up over your cook stove and dry it there. When well dried it will keep any where safe, if you keep mice away from it. But be sure you put it up before any severe freezing weather. The room in which I dry my corn is 18 by 35 feet, ten feet from the ceiling to the floor, which contains my house furnace. I put in a scaffolding four feet from the lower floor, on which I spread my corn. The room is warm night and day, and in a very short time the corn is fit to shell, then I shell, put in barrels, head up, and keep in this room until spring.

FROM BAY CITY TO PETOSKEY.

PETOSKEY, MICH., Feb. 4, 1884.

DEAR HERALD:—

I do not know as your readers will care to hear from me again, but having plenty of leisure, for business is extremely dull, I tho't I would drop a word to the HERALD. Leaving Bay City for the north, in what I designate as my trip through the straits of Mackinac, after a ride of about 40 miles I came to Standish, a town of 300 souls, the principal business of which is selling whiskey and tobacco, mixed occasionally with a little business in lumber. Went to the "best hotel." Here I found a bar room, about 20 feet square, containing from 15 to 20 of the first citizens engaged in drinking whisky, smoking pipes and cigars and playing cards.—I was informed that this place constituted both office and sitting room, and this was to be my home during my stay in the city. Preferring heaven's pure air to that of the "office" I took my stand out on the platform and waited in a storm 30 minutes for my dinner, after which I soon finished my business and got my baggage checked for West Branch. Arriving at that place found that the gentlemanly and attentive baggageman had left my grip on the platform at Standish. Stayed in the city until the next day, during which time I found that the character of the hotel at Standish was fully sustained here. My baggage was duly forwarded on next train. Desiring to make Grayling the next point I arranged to have baggage sent on without being taken from the train. Arrived at Grayling and found that one piece of baggage had been left at West Branch. By this time you can easily imagine that my usually quiet temper was somewhat agitated, and in a mild yet forcible manner I offered a criticism on the official management of the M. C. R. R. Co.'s northern division. But after waiting several hours at Grayling I got my baggage all together, and had it once more checked for Otsego Lake. Here I found my old friend Kellogg and family well as usual, and the "Deacon" as usual working for the good gentlemen's soles. Here I witnessed a scene that I hope never to see again. An otherwise beautiful young woman came staggering into the depot, so thoroughly intoxicated that she was not capable of caring for herself, and asked for a ticket to Cheboygan. I cannot tell you how my old hatred came to me of that traffic which knows neither male or female, youth or old age, but is alike merciless to both, snatching the husband from the arms of a loving wife, the son and the daughter too from a mother's and father's love, and consigning them to a vile and miserable life, and a worse death.—And, Mr. Editor, I just made another vow then to strike the demon when ever or wherever I found him.

Took the train Saturday eve. for Cheboygan, where I spent the sabbath. On my trip to this place I noticed a man on the train whom I took for a Canadian lumberman going up into the north woods to look after his lumber business. I noticed that he left the train at Cheboygan. Now judge of my surprise when upon going into the M. E. church on Sabbath morn I found my lumberman dressed in his broadcloth with his snow-white collar and necktie and occupying the pulpit. The pastor introduced him as Rev. Mr. Barlow, who he said had come to C. to assist in a series of meetings. His sermon was upon the subject of the "Exellency of the knowledge of Christ, as compared with all other knowledge" and a very fine sermon it was.

Mackinaw City was the next point reached; here I had intended to cross over the Straits on the ice to Point St. Ignace, but a terrible storm of snow was coming from the north, and as we had to go in an open sleigh I gave up the trip and turned my face towards home. The determination was strengthened by the fact that a day or two before a team was returning from the Point when the swift current beneath had parted the ice in places and stepping his team upon a block of ice of a flatiron shape it began to sink with him, and it was with some difficulty that he got on to solid ice by whipping up his team sharply. It was not on my program to take a bath, with the mercury way down in the tens below zero, and so I changed the route.

The lumber interest in this country has been exceedingly quiet although the jobbers are making more money than they have for years before. Their contracts were taken in anticipation of a bare winter, and at good prices, expecting to be obliged to truck in their logs and as there has been just enough snow for them they have been very prosperous. I go from here to Cadillac, Ludington, Manistee, Pentwater, Grand Haven, and home on Saturday by the M. & O. railroad. J. H. O.

A card from E. Brownell says he has been spending a few days at Northeast, Pa., meeting old-time friends. He goes from there to Clymer, N. Y., and thence after a two weeks' visit to Vineland.

We are indebted to state oil inspector Smith for a copy of his annual report. Bro. Smith does not deal in castor oil, nor in sweet oil, nor in linseed oil, but in good old fashioned, fire-test kerosene. The report is a very oily document.

The Fort Scott, Kansas, Monitor quotes an item which lately appeared in the HERALD about Dr. H. B. Baker and adds:

The doctor is among us and the Monitor extends to him a hearty welcome. He and Dr. Ardrie, late of Muncie, Indiana, also a graduate of Michigan University, have associated themselves together to practice their profession and have opened an office in Opera House Block, over Prager's jewelry store, and a Monitor reporter has had the pleasure of forming the acquaintance of both and finds them cultured and pleasant gentlemen.

The Survival of the Fittest.

Boston culture is proverbial. Its repute is world-wide. Travel where you may, on this continent or any other, from Pike's Peak to Borrioboolah Gha, from the Andes to the Apennines, if you meet a young woman who speaks English and is thoroughly up in the "ologies" you know at once that she comes from Boston. And if you are fortunate enough to be in Boston itself you find that this culture is as all-persuasive at home as it is notorious elsewhere. It is not confined to one Boston girl, or a few, but to all Boston girls; and finding this fact one wonders how it happens that there are no exceptions, and wonders, most of all, how all the young women of so large a city as Boston can possibly stand the processes of culture and live through them.

The explanation does not lie on the surface, but it is comparatively easy. It is a clear case of survival of the fittest. The result is reached in the same way as the healthful robustness of the children of the very poor is. It used to be regarded as wonderful that these children, exposed to all manner of privations and hardships, were rugged and stout and hearty, with a heartiness that shamed the well-nurtured children of the well-to-do. Social philosophers used to moralize about it, and attribute it to the exposure and privation, and they used to recommend that the children who had warm houses and beds should be subjected to cold and hunger to "toughen" them. There is an occasional philosopher—a good deal behind the age, who does this now. But the majority of intelligent people have come to the conclusion that the reason why the children of want and hardship are stout and healthy is that the weaklings have all died off. They are rugged and strong, not because of hardship, but in spite of it, because they were by nature and inheritance so tough that privation could not kill them in infancy, as it did their weaker brethren. And this is the true explanation, without doubt, of the fact that all living young women in Boston have become cultured and still live. The system pursued in making them so is so exacting that the weaklings have all been killed off and only the strongest and toughest, the ones who can stand the entire strain, survive.

Whether the people of Boston realize this we do not know. The physicians do. In the death certificate given a few days since in the case of a little Boston girl aged fourteen, the doctor wrote: "Due to the Boston school system of cramming—too much study and brain work." He knew why it was that the mature representatives of Boston culture showed no signs of injury in the process. It was because they were tough enough to stand it; while those who were not tough enough had given up the struggle and been laid away in the churchyard.

Commenting on this case the Boston Globe gives a pretty definite notion of the process to which this particular young girl succumbed, as hundreds more have done, no doubt. The list of studies in the school she attended included mathematics, language, geography, history, drawing on paper and in books, and music; and each of the studies was divided into two or more branches of special work. The mathematical department embraced powers of numbers; square root and its applications; mensuration of the triangle, parallelogram, trapezoid, circle, prism, pyramid, cylinder, cone and sphere; cube root and its applications; book-keeping; and oral exercises and arithmetic at sight. What the historical study called for the Globe shows in the following composition, found among the examination papers of the poor victim:

a composition written in school upon demand as one of a number of historical essays which pupils were expected to be prepared with.

"Foreign War: Flodden Field. Henry VIII. wished to play a great part in Europe and he soon became mixed up in the continental wars. Having been joined by the Emperor-elect, Maximilian, he routed the French at Guines, near Calais, and this was called the Battle of the Spurs, on account of the flight of the enemy's cavalry. While these things were going on in France, the Scots took advantage and invaded England, but were met by Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey, at Flodden Field, in 1513, and a severe battle took place, in which the King of Scotland, James VI., and the rose of the Nation died together on the field. The next year peace was made with France, Mary, sister of Henry VIII., marrying Louis XII., of France; but he died soon after, and she married Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk."

It is not remarkable that the poor child, in the delirium which preceded her final release from the cramming system, went over her studies in history and mathematics, reciting page after page from her text-books in heart-breaking repetition. But it is remarkable that with such evidence before them of the fatality of their system, the people of Boston do not come to the rescue of their suffering children. Detroit Free Press.

The Imitative Mania in Japan.

Yokohama was reached at last, and after some difficulty we landed. Here I was in our duty and delight first to make the acquaintance of the Japanese civilization in use, about which more hereafter. A worthy brother of a missionary, Mr. Justice Hannon, was a passenger in the same ship I travelled on, coming, as he was, to live in Japan as Judge of the Supreme Court. It was necessary hard-headed work for my packages of luggage. Happily we succeeded in not opening all. Imagine a long, long, long inside of the ship, including the kitchen boiler, and [illegible] a large foresail. All [illegible] "Stop!" said the [illegible] "No," was the reply. [illegible] "Ah, but it is a very [illegible] the Japanese. He knew [illegible] horses body [illegible] and he felt that [illegible] character, as a [illegible] to describe a thing [illegible] be satisfactorily treated as an [illegible] the mantle of imitation. The Japan [illegible] to England, small, dapper little men in European clothing, give a somewhat incorrect impression to the English mind. The Japanese at home is the person to see. He has come to the conclusion that European clothing may be advantageously worn, and he adopts it, not in its entirety, but as a sort of blend, so you may see a gentleman in a not-hat with a rag round his waist and nothing more; or you will be met by a person in a swallow-tailed coat and no trousers. We encountered a noble in a crush hat, a brown velvet en shooting jacket and a pair of light green pants. His feet were mounted on Japanese clogs. Probably he will buy a pair of French boots some day. At present he is in the transition state.

My friend took as a guide a descendant of the old nobility of the country, who wore a stovepipe hat, a Japanese waistcloth, and a pair of straw sandals. He was just as affable as though he had been incumbered with a suit from a London West-end tailor's, and this shows that the Japanese are not a conceited people. They know how to imitate what is good. You land some luggage. They come up to you in the guise of Custom-house officers. You ask which package they would like opened. They say, "All," and they laugh like so many monkeys. They have heard that this is the proper way to do it. But when you have opened the bags at infinite trouble they do not properly search them. It would be rude in their opinion to haul your things over, and so they ejaculate, "A' right," and chalk or stamp the sides of the bags. You ask them why they had opened them at all, and they grin again. They do not know. It is useless to question them; they would be unable to give an answer. And so it is with all their imitation. They wear, as I have said, many of our clothes, yet would be infinitely more comfortable if they wore their old costumes. But they have been told that the pot-hat and the tailed coat and the tight sleeve are the right things to wear, and so they put them on. The reason is always manifest; it is a curious readiness to imitate. In one particular they imitate Robinson Crusoe. When they have nothing else to put on they clothe themselves in straw, which gives them the absurd appearance of a walking wheat-stack. The straw is threaded and hung round their necks. It is useful, in so far that it throws off the rain and snow just like the thatch on an English farm-laborer's cottage, but it can scarcely be said to be ornamental in our sense of the word. Yet the Japanese think it all right, and it doubtless accords with their ideas of beauty. Surmounting this shoulder-thatch of straw is usually a straw hat made in the form of an inverted saucer. This, at any rate, is the most sensible head-dress for the country ever invented. It keeps off sun and rain alike, is light and not altogether unpicturesque. The more civilized Japanese—those who would despise a straw shoulder-thatch—have discarded it in favor of the European pot-hat. But here is simply the result of the imitative mania which afflicts them. They will probably return to the saucer-shaped hat some day, when they have learned that neither the stove-pipe head-gear nor the deer-stalker forms the chief embodiment of human happiness. Already even they are finding out that the good old Japanese flowing robes are more comfortable for home wear, at any rate, than the straight unyielding garb of western civilization. My American friend burst in upon a Japanese of rank at Nagasaki, one morning, and was surprised to find him in the original clothing of the land of the Rising Sun. "Hallo!" said he, "you've taken too much old rye last night, and got into the wrong togs, eh?" "No," was the reply. "Now, I have found out that in my house my old clothes are more better than Europe fashion. When I go out I wear Europe coat, but not in house," a remark that showed the worthy Japanese to be an intelligent person and a frank one. There was at any rate no attempt to disguise the fact that he only wore clothes in "Europe fashion" because he wished to appear civilized to the outside world.—Cor. London Telegraph.

A Shocking Scene.

The Transvaal Advertiser contains an account of the execution of the Kaffir Chief Mampoer for murder and rebellion. The Executive Council decided that sentence of death should be carried out within the precincts of the jail; but for some reason or other it was resolved to vary the practice in the case of Mampoer, and the gallows were erected on the western side of the jail, within the inclosure.

Shortly after six o'clock in the morning Mampoer was marched from his cell to the inclosure, and, after some delay consequent upon a defect in the arrangements, he mounted the platform with a firm step and without any outward sign of fear. He was then pinioned, and his legs bound, and the halter adjusted about his neck, and then only a nervous twitching of the fingers was visible. Shortly afterward a bolt was drawn and the drop fell. A horrible scene ensued. The rope broke, and the unfortunate wretch fell into the pit which had been dug to give the requisite fall. The hangman, Booth, was for a short time unnerved by this incident, and did not know what to do but the sheriff and another official went to his assistance, and the body was once more hoisted on to the platform, and the rope knotted, and the body left hanging for the prescribed time. It is stated that one rock of the chief was dislocated by the fall, and if so, probably life was already extinct before the body was suspended for the stated time. The Government engineer, the sheriff, Mr. Kathe, [illegible] were concerned that the Government [illegible] consider [illegible] and [illegible] at he will proceed to Natal [illegible]

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left me before I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

BAD, BAD, BAD BLOOD.

Some blood is bad because it is poor and weak. Some is bad because it contains impurities. Some men have such bad blood that the wonder is it does not poison the mosquitoes who come to bite them.

The rich red color of good blood is owing to the iron which is present. Blood which has not enough iron in it is always unsatisfactory. The person in whose veins it circulates cannot be said to enjoy good health.

The efforts of expert chemists to produce a preparation of iron which can be assimilated with the blood have resulted in that perfect preparation which is an important part of Brown's Iron Bitters. It is the only one which freely enters into the blood. It is the only one which accomplishes the desired good.

Weak, poor, thin blood may be made rich and strong, and impure blood may be purified by the use of that Great Iron Medicine, Brown's Iron Bitters. 8

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE, Feb. 4.—The following bills were reported favorably, with amendments, and placed in the calendar: A bill providing for the suppression and extirpation of pleuro-pneumonia and other contagious diseases of domestic animals; to provide for the execution of treaty stipulations relating to the Chinese; to increase the efficiency of the army; to provide for an indemnity to the State of Iowa, due under various acts relating to swamp and overflowed lands. The chair laid before the Senate the resolution offered by Mr. Butler requesting the President to transmit to the Senate a record of the proceedings of the Proteus inquiry; agreed to. The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE.—The following bills were referred: Authorizing the purchase of smug harbors for disabled seamen; for the establishment of a branch home for disabled volunteers in one of the Western States. Mr. Clements reported a resolution calling upon the Secretary of State for information of how many and when foreign ministers, consuls or agents of the United States to any foreign country have been sent from their posts of duty since the 1st of January, 1882, the length of such absence, and also whether the salary had been paid during that time; adopted. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Pleuro-pneumonia bill, and after a lengthy discussion the committee rose without coming to any conclusion and the House adjourned.

SENATE, Feb. 5.—Mr. Call offered a resolution requesting the President of the United States to prevent the delivery of Senator Carlos Aguero, the Cuban patriot now in prison at Key West, Fla., on demand of the Spanish Government upon the charge of highway robbery; referred to the committee on Federal Relations. A number of bills were reported favorably from the committees and placed on the calendar. Mr. Hill's bill relating to the lands occupied by certain settlers, and formerly believed to form a part of the Reservation, was taken up, and after an amendment providing that the lands referred to be returned to the public domain was passed. The Senate resumed consideration of the Mexican land grant titles bill, which was being debated when adjournment was agreed to.

HOUSE.—Mr. Hammond introduced a bill to withdraw from a distillery warehouse, without tax, alcohol or other spirits to be used in the manufacture of drugs, medicines and other chemicals; referred. A bill was passed making provision for removing the remains of the late Captain Walter Clifford from Wyoming to Michigan. James P. Malone, 253 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., says: "In comparing your paper with others I receive, I must say yours, the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS, is good, better, best. I would sooner miss a meal than a number of the NEWS. It is the newspaper of the day. It is true to its name."

W. W. Rhodes, Adrian, Mich., says: "I don't want to miss a number. It is the best paper for news I have ever seen."

Peter Lansing, Katonia, Saunders County, Neb., says: "I like THE WEEKLY NEWS. It is full of readable and valuable news, and, although I am in receipt of nine weekly journals, I am constrained to adopt THE WEEKLY NEWS as No. 10, because of its non-partisan attitude in politics, giving me the ungarbled truth concerning the actions of all political parties."

M. E. Davenport, Palmyra, N. Y., says: "It is the cheapest and best paper I ever read."

Mrs. L. Schonan, Hannibal, Mo., says: "I like your paper very much. I get six other papers, but do not like them as well as THE WEEKLY NEWS."

W. R. Law, Mansfield, Tex., says: "I am highly pleased with the NEWS, for I get politics presented in it in such a way that I get both sides of a question fairly set forth, which is utterly impossible to get in a strictly party journal of either side."

Abe Harrington has bought the Darling farm, joining the one he sold on the east, of 149 acres, for $9,500, and is preparing to build a large frame house the coming season.

The Grange social brought out a full house. The program consisted of an essay by Dr. Howell, extempore remarks by Rev. Borden, recitations, songs, refreshments, &c., altogether a very enjoyable time.

There will be a church social at Anson Harmon's Feb. 22nd, afternoon and evening.

Fred Davenport, son of Frank Davenport, has been quite indisposed for some time. He was taken worse Sunday evening and is in a very critical condition.

Robert John Gregg broke his leg above the ankle while working in the woods Saturday.

The HERALD wants to know when there will be five Fridays in February again. Let's see. Leap year comes every four years, and Friday comes every seven days. 4 times 7 are 28. 28 plus 1884 equals 1912. How's that? Now some one tell when there will be five Saturdays in February. We can remember when statesmen and clergymen used to flatter the people on the great wisdom of our forefathers in selecting the 4th day of March as inauguration day, claiming that it did not occur on Sunday only once in about 200 years. Will some one tell when inauguration day will occur again on Sunday, and whether the 4th of March does not come on Sunday as often as any other day?

MACON MOLECULES.

It looks as though Macon would need an ark. It is, however, rather short of gopher wood and hickory bark.

Both old and young people, to the number of 125, made Mr. Frank Davidson a very pleasant surprise last Saturday evening. All passed a very pleasant evening, and each strove to excel the others in acts of merriment. During the evening, the younger members of the company enlivened the proceedings by pricking one another with brass pins. Mr. G. W. Jackson earned the medal by jumping the greatest distance from the business end of a large shawl pin. About eleven o'clock the party dispersed, feeling joyful and full of cheerful reminiscences of a very pleasant surprise.

The Literary Society rendered a very fine programme at the M. E. Church last Friday evening. All the actors did well, especially Mr. Frank Temple who read an original poem. No part of the entertainment was slighted. Friday evening, Feb. 29th, the Literary Society and Ladies Mite Social Committee unite for a grand entertainment, consisting of a literary program and refreshments. The literary program will be rendered in the audience room of the church, after which the company will sojourn to the lecture-room and refresh themselves with coffee, cheese, pickles, cold meats, cakes, &c. THE TARANTULA'S BITE.

Among all my acquaintance, no one seemed happier than Eugene F—. I named him Fortune's Favorite. He had a beautiful and highly accomplished wife; his children were the prettiest and the best mannered I have ever met. All the women considered Mrs. F— as near perfection as mortals can achieve; all the men voted Eugene F— as clever a man as one could desire to claim fellowship with. He was rich in association, in the integrity of a name that commanded the respect of four generations. How few aspiring Americans can say as much? He possessed the advantages of a liberal education; his place was assured as well as it is possible to assure anything in a country where the wheel of fortune obliterates the accumulations and reputations of generations, and lifts men and women out of obscurity in a day. That is to say, the company that employed him was the oldest, most reliable, and the richest organization of its kind in the country. Finally, in addition to a salary of three thousand a year, Eugene had good reason to count upon an inner place in the near future that would render him independent.

The noteworthy trait of this favored party, Eugene F— revealed was a cheerful spirits. form as the result of contentment. He was satisfied with his place, his surroundings and circumstances. No man had more to make him happy, he said. No man enjoyed life more philosophically, or fretted himself less over the jog of little annoyances in control. It was this temperament, doubtless, the memories of the trials and bitter experiences of less favored people, that rendered Eugene F— so different when the misfortunes and temptations of the poor were in question. Generous to a fault, he was unable to comprehend the dire necessities that drive the unfortunate to desperation and death. He was serene-minded with difficulty [illegible] strong enough to express the contempt of the average suicide.

A poor man who sought employment and failed to find it, weary with fruitless effort, despairing under the world's rebuffs, plunged recklessly into the unknown. The means employed emphasized the poverty of the wretched creature. The newspapers made much of it; it was the item of the day and crowded a base for columns. I dropped in on Eugene one day when his hour's work was done. He had a newspaper in his hand. He threw it down impatiently, angrily, as he handed me a cigar and pushed me into a seat, saying:

"I am disgusted with good newspaper men. Why do you [illegible] me by [illegible] incence and [illegible] suicide. By an [illegible] all that was left to do. If he had only displayed common sense, whatever was stolen [illegible] If a man must kill himself, why does he disfigure himself, or impose unnecessary and horrible [illegible] upon him? Pity the poor wretch inflicted upon him."

Aside from the fact that I have no patience with the specimen and [illegible] try that cuts ground from under every Christian's feet, I was tired. Eugene worked an hour every day. I worked on an average twelve at least, and did more in one hour than Eugene did in three. Since it was our home that he received at least ten times more for his mental toil than I did. I could not permit him to indulge himself in a prolonged discussion of the "survival of the fittest." It pressed him, and I insisted.

"Now," he said, at the end of a chapter, "tell me why a man who chooses to kill himself, let me say with no reason, should be regarded as more than a rat. Here is another specimen in this morning's paper, of a woman who held her head in a tub of water until she drowned. Tell me a woman who does that is entitled to the benefits of the nineteenth century! Why, if such people were fairly taken off on the round Heaven, they would hang with their heads downward, of choice. Human tadpoles, all of them."

Eugene had a horror of death; cemeteries were his special aversion. He was never known to attend a funeral. He could not bring himself to witness the ceremonies in the house or at the grave. He had a prejudice against burial.

"Why can't everybody have vaults, with nice, pleasing colors on the walls—have the interior as well as the exterior ornamented, and made so attractive that people going into them would feel as they do when they enter an attractive chamber with a bed in it?"

"Do you mean the dead?"

"You know well enough I refer to [illegible]

"I am afraid [illegible] very [illegible] that [illegible] the earning and all [illegible] the world [illegible] death, [illegible]

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

SARAH C. WHITTIER.

But the King is not a subject, sir."

—In July and August last year a United States Senator consumed a ton and a half of ice. Altogether 200,000 pounds were used up. When the next polar expedition is organized, the crew should be drafted from the United States Senate. It would not only save the country a handsome sum of money, but we should very soon have an open polar sea.—Boston Transcript.

—A Modest Little Girl.—"Mamma," asked a little girl, "does the sun go to bed when it sets in the evening?" "I suppose so," absent-mindedly replied the mother. "What makes everything so red? Does it blush because it has to go to bed right out where everybody can see it?" "I shouldn't be surprised, my dear." "Well," continued the little girl, thoughtfully, "if I were in the sun's place I would cover myself up with the clouds."—Detroit Post.

A Misunderstanding.

"I thought I would take a run up and see if you didn't want to buy a sewing machine," said the agent to Farmer Grings.

"I don't know as I do," replied the farmer; "I've got most of my sprung sowing done."

"But won't you need it for sewing in the summer?"

"Look here, young feller, we don't sow in the summer. We cuts, an' gothers, an' binds."

"Oh, well, this machine gathers and binds."

"Mebbe you'll be telling me next that your machine will haul in the crap an' put it in the barn. Don't come around here with any of your big stories."

"Don't be ruffled, my dear sir. I think you do not understand me. I mean a machine to sew cloth, not grain."

"Ahem! you do, do you? Then you'd better go talk to the wimmin. It's a good thing you didn't mean the other kind, for if you'd kept on telling me about your wonderful machine for plantin' an' reapin, you'd got me a rippin' and tearin' 'till I'd basted you."—Texas Siftings.

The Model Farm.

The Keota (Iowa) Eagle has at last found a western man who is satisfied with a fifty acre farm. His name is Artemus Fisher, and he lives one mile and a half south of Keota. The Eagle tells the story of his management and of his success as follows:

He keeps one team of horses, three first class cows, and a nice little drove of the best hogs. He milks his cows for the creamery, and they made him nearly $200 last year; will perhaps do better this year. He will sell $500 worth of hogs this year, and have thirty stockers to keep over. He has $200 worth of flax-seed to sell; has an abundance of hay and grain to keep his stock in first-class condition during the winter. He keeps everything in apple-pie order about his farm; his cows revel in clover up to their eyes; he attends to feeding, watering and milking as regularly as the clock strikes, hence he gets the best results with the least possible feed. He keeps his stock under cover, and never allows any animal to shiver in the fence corners. He has a barn that is a model of convenience and economy. It is snow-proof, and as warm as the old kitchen. He has a first-class selection of fruit—not a large orchard, but a choice selection of the varieties that thrive and bear the best in this locality. Everything about the farm bears marks of intelligence, thrift and economy. Besides making a living for himself and the "old lady," he will sell at least $800 worth of stuff off his fifty acres this year, and not be exceeding former years either. There is no rush or hurry about this model farm. Everything goes off quietly and regularly. The expenses are very small and the gains sure.

Cleanliness.

The surface of the human body, and even the delicate membrane covering the eye, as well as the mucous lining of the internal passages of the animal body, may and often do become diseased in such a manner, by neglect of purity and careful cleanliness, that they will give off contagious matter. The contagious disorders of the skin, the eyes and the mouth are results of neglect of cleanliness, and are justly esteemed very disgusting. Decaying matters, whether vegetable or animal, and not unfrequently the still living but unhealthy and unclean surfaces and tissues of both animal and vegetable bodies, are apt to become infected with parasites which prey upon and injure or destroy the tissues. Even the tenderest parts and juices of vegetable substances and the skin, the muscles and blood of the animal, may be harmed in this way. It was a little invisible parasite which destroyed the potatoes at harvest time throughout the country many years ago, and there are some foul waters and infected kinds of meat which will breed disease in persons who partake of them. Therefore, it is a duty to be cleanly in food and drink, as well as in our breathing and personal habits. It is doubtful if persons who become filthy in their habits and neglect to provide for the purification of their bodies, clothing and premises, will ever be found pure and sweet in their thoughts, language and influence.

Magnetic Storms

Remembering the influence which the sun has been found to exercise upon the magnetic needle, the question will naturally arise, has the sun anything to do with magnetic storms? We have clear evidence that he has. On the 1st of September, 1869, Messrs. Carrington and Hodgson were observing the sun, one at Oxford and the other in London. Their scrutiny was directed to certain large spots which at that time marked the sun's face. Suddenly a bright light was seen by each observer to break out on the sun's surface and to travel, slowly in appearance, but in reality at the rate of about 7,000 miles in a minute, across a part of the solar disk. Now it was found afterward that the self-registering magnetic instruments at Kew had made at that instant a strongly-marked jerk. It was learned at that moment a magnetic storm prevailed at the West Indies, in South America, and in Australia. The signal-men in the telegraph stations at Washington and Philadelphia received strong electric shocks; the pen of Bain's telegraph was followed by a flame of fire; and in Norway the telegraphic machinery was set on fire. At night great auroras were seen in both hemispheres. It is impossible not to connect these startling magnetic indications with the remarkable appearance observed on the sun's disk.—Prof Proctor.

Observe the Birthday.

Let the birthday of each member of the family be always remembered. When it comes. Let there be something a little out of the ordinary routine in the arrangement of the table; cookies fashioned as Johnny likes them best: one of Frank's favorite plum puddings, or Julia's special liking, a loaf of ginger cake; or a wonderful lemon pie, such as only mamma can make.

Then there must be presents. Sometimes people may think they cannot be afforded; but reflect. The little one needs shoes, dresses, aprons and many other things. Purchase one or more for the birthday. It will seem just as much present to the recipients as though they were not obliged to have it.

Next come school-books and story-books, a set of furs or a pair of skates, (should the birthday occur in the winter,) a pretty little dinner-basket, or, if the parents can afford it, a little gold band for one of the white fingers, a necklace, a watch with a shining chain, or the pony that has been wished for so long.

Encourage the little ones in giving to each other, and also remember father and mother's birthday; believe me, it will be bread cast on the waters; the days will only be a few ere some returns, and there will be a never-failing supply of pleasure as long as you and your children live.

THE MODEST FATHER.—"Father," began a young Detroiter the other evening, "were you in the war?"

"Yes, my son."

"Was it awful?"

"Yes."

"Lots of dead and wounded men?"

"Yes."

"Did you kill many?"

"Well, I shouldn't like to answer that question."

"Are you very modest, pa?"

"I hope I am too modest to brag."

"That was what Mr. Smith meant, then, when he was telling the men down at the drug store that you hadn't any war record to brag of."

"He did, eh? Smith is a liar!"

"That's what I thought. He told the men that you run so fast he couldn't catch you on horseback, and any boy knows that a horse can catch a man with a stiff knee."

To cure an ordinary cough or cold take one dose of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry before going to bed at night. It will cause a suspension of nervous excitability, allow you sweet repose; and by morning the cough will be none. It is the best and therefore cheapest cure for coughs, colds and consumption; is sold by druggists generally, and ought to be found in every intelligent household.

POOR GIRLS.—The poorest girls in the world are those who have never been taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them; they have been taught to despise labor, and depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. If misfortune comes upon their friends, as it often does, their case is hopeless. The most forlorn and miserable women upon earth belong to this class. It belongs to parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them a great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter should be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require this training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly around; the rich are very likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Skill to labor is no disadvantage to the rich, and as indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do parents must educate their daughters to work; no reform is more imperative than this.

Quack doctors, electric belt and other swindlers who live by frightening our young men and young women by nasty circulars, will find their occupation gone when it becomes generally known that Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is a certain cure for all weakness of the urinary organs, nervousness, etc. Obey the laws of health, take a few bottles of this simple remedy, and you will soon be restored to perfect manhood and womanhood, free from all worriment of mind and distress of body.

The breakfast taken in winter will determine our efficiency for work in the day, and will so influence our whole being for that period of time that no after-meal can correct. The breakfast in winter must contain more nitrogenous food than in summer; it is absolutely needed. You must store heat to furnish material for absorption and for maintaining vitality; add to this nitrogenous food something that will disengage heat from the blood and keep up temperature and you may defy the coldest day. Your face may feel it, your hands may feel it, but your body will be impervious to it and go on disengaging that inward heat which can alone stand against the lowest temperature without. If this first meal has been properly attended to we may presume that vital action can be maintained in full force for five hours at least before it needs replenishing.

Remember a complete cure for aches and pains, sores, pimples, urinary sediments, disturbing dreams, nervousness, despondency, indigestion and general weakness of mind and body, brought on by improper habits or otherwise, is found in two or three bottles of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, as has been proven by the experience of many who long suffered, but now feel well and strong in all parts of the body.

A hotel in Boston built of stone and brick 96 and 69 feet frontage with basement and seven stories above the sidewalk, was moved nearly 100 feet in order to make a change in the street. One side was supported by eight granite columns twelve feet high, the whole building weighing 5,000 tons beside the furniture. The occupants of the stores and the hotel were not disturbed in the removal.

When Prince Bismarck sits down on the American hog our people take it as an insult, but pocket it with becoming dignity. But when the burly premier presumes to sit down upon a resolution of the National Congress the American eagle will know the reason why.

The Kansas City Times says: "Mr. Hayes has been interviewed again.—"Go back," said he, "to those who sent you, and tell them you saw an old man, sitting like Keno, waiting to be called." At last accounts he had not been called, but it is a cold day when Roscoe Conkling can get away with Rutherford on the classics."

The Chicago Daily News editorially nominates Gen. Hancock as Democratic candidate for the presidency, declaring that he is stronger in New York than Tilden, that he would unite all the factions of the party and that his assertion, ridiculed in 1880, that the tariff was a local issue, has now become an acknowledged and established fact.

The Adrian Record asks: "What is the meaning of the expression "chock full"? Perhaps some of our brethren of the quill, better posted, can tell the meaning of the words as they appear coupled together." Take a tour of the saloons some Saturday night about 12 o'clock, when the fashionable young men are just getting ready to be carried home, and you can see a practical illustration with the naked eye, of the meaning of "chock full."

An Indiana man lately made an application for the place of official stenographer of the House offering to work for much less salary than the present efficient incumbent, McElhone. Speaker Carlisle examined his recommendations and then proceeded to examine the man. He called the applicant into his private room and handed him writing materials. Then he proceeded in an ordinary tone of voice, to read off a page of the congressional record. The Indianian filled several sheets of foolscap paper with curves and circles which he said was a stenographic copy of the paper just read by the speaker. Mr. Carlisle told him to write it out. In a couple of hours he returned. The applicant had about a stickfull written out, the perspiration was pouring from his forehead, and he wore the air of dejection. The speaker said not a word. The Indiana stenographer did not wait for anything further, and his application has not been pressed. The Speaker has evidently got at the true theory of civil service reform.

Secretary Lincoln is a chip of the old block. He has less red tape but more practical common sense than most public officials. The Chicago News says: "Robert Lincoln has cut the red tape of the war department which so often delays official action in emergencies and came to the rescue of the flood sufferers in a way to gain their gratitude and the applause of the whole country. The promptness and energy with which he began the work of relief even before he received the official sanction of congress is characteristic of the good sense with which he has conducted the affairs of his office ever since his appointment as secretary of war. Among the first amounts received by the relief committee was $1,000 sent by the secretary on his own responsibility, and he followed this up with such prompt action that hardly had the first appropriation bill been signed before steamboats were plying up and down the Ohio searching out the homeless, distressed, and hungry sufferers and supplying their wants."

THE FLOOD RECEDING.

The Suffering Along the Ohio River Unabated, but the Work of Relief Steamers Still Going On.

Devastation on Every Hand—Houses Swept Away and Thousands Left Homeless—The Mississippi River Rising.

BUILDINGS FALLING.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 18.—The river is falling at an average of an inch and a half an hour. It reached sixty-three feet. Weather cloudy and foggy. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton trains began arriving at their depot yesterday. The New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio enters the same depot. The road-bed has not been injured. The Pan Handle depot and tracks are out of the water. The passenger schedules resumed this morning.

The Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis road has given up its canal connections and comes to the stock yards. The Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore will enter by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton to-day. The Ohio & Mississippi can again make direct landings at Storrs farm by the Anderson bank. The Louisville & Nashville can now enter its depot. A decided improvement in business is already apparent.

The News-Journal's correspondent on board the relief steamer Granite State says the receding water reveals greater damage than was thought possible. Dover, Ky., wore a desolate look, but a few people in boats came out and received supplies. Ripley received but little food, their chief need being money to repair houses. Maysville suffered terribly, a strong current sweeping through the town and washing away many houses. Concord, Ky., was helpless. They had received no aid from the State. Vanceburg, Ky., received rations for 400 people. At this point people gave three cheers for the Government and three groans for the Kentucky Legislature.

The Ohio River continues to fall steadily an inch and a half an hour, and is now nearly nine feet below the highest stage. Nearly all the street cars will be running by to-morrow, and in a very short time all railroad connections will be resumed. The question of raising the city bottoms above high-water mark is still receiving attention, and the City Engineer has been called on to make an estimate.

After midnight two four-story brick buildings on the northwest corner of Second Street and Central Avenue fell from the effect of the water at the foundation. They were unoccupied and adjoined the Longsworth barracks, the building that fell a few days ago. They belonged to the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago road.

Three upper flats are a mass of wreckage, and nearly the entire stock is hopelessly ruined. The stock was valued at $60,000; insurance, $70,000. The damage to the adjoining buildings is covered by insurance.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Feb. 19.—The river is two inches higher than last February and is now forty-seven feet eleven and one-half inches on the gauge. It still lacks five feet of going into the cellars on Water street but is still rising two inches in twenty-four hours. The Mattie Hays from Louisville, distributing supplies, has arrived and is waiting orders which way to go. She distributed twenty-five thousand rations between Louisville and this point and reports not much want yet, but will be more when the river falls.

At Rome the swell from the boat swept three houses from their foundations. There was much suffering there, and 5,000 rations were left. Topiasport, on the opposite side of the river, was a total wreck and the people were all gone. Three-fourths of Hawesville was under water and 500 persons were in distress and needed supplies. Maxville was entirely swept away, and most of the people are now at Tell City. The situation at Grand View was serious, and great suffering was reported in the interior. Eight thousand rations were left there and at Rockport for use in the county. Enterprise was entirely submerged and nearly all the inhabitants have gone to places of safety. The wants of those remaining were attended to. Rations for 1,000 people were left at Garrison's Landing.

At Shawneetown at six p. m. the river is within six inches of last year's highest point, and is rising a fourth of an inch an hour. It is now believed that last year's flood will be exceeded here by over a foot.

The river has risen one and one-quarter inches in the twenty-four hours ending at midnight, when the marks showed forty-eight feet. This is two and one-half inches higher than the highest point last year, when the marks showed forty-seven feet nine and one-half inches. It is still rising slowly, but it is confidently expected that it will come to a stand to-day.

CAIRO, Ill., Feb. 19.—The river is fifty-one feet and rising slowly. Weather cloudy and mild. The Wabash Railroad has been shut out from Cairo since Saturday.

TOLEDO, Feb. 19.—Ice gorges in the Maumee River are still intact, notwithstanding steady rain has prevailed the past twenty-four hours and still continues. No very great fears are entertained of a flood here.

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 19.—River falling one inch per hour. It is now forty-three feet eight inches by canal marks, a fall of three feet two inches. Weather cloudy and damp, threatening rain. The City of Frankfort, with supplies from the Governor of Indiana and Indianapolis Mayor and Council, passed down.

A Fatal Fire.

BIRMINGHAM, A. T., Feb. 18.—A fire yesterday morning burned an entire block, comprising several stores, saloons and law offices. S. N. Holmes, proprietor of the Daily Miner, attempted to save some valuable papers and was burned to death. Katy Purcell, a sporting woman, rescued a child from the flames at the risk of her life. It is the most dangerous fire that ever occurred here. The buildings were blown up to save the town. The loss is not stated.

Roasted to Death.

CROCKETT, Tex., Feb. 19.—Rheuber Hart and wife (colored), residing three miles in the country, went to church Sunday and left six children at home asleep. Hart locked the door and took the key with him. At ten o'clock the house was discovered to be on fire, and was burned so quickly that it was impossible to save it or the children, every one of whom was roasted to death. The eldest was a boy thirteen years old.

The Greeley Relief Steamer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The steamer Bear, purchased for the Greeley Relief Expedition, is now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Bear was built for the seal trade, and can carry 300 men. The Bear and the Thetis will both leave the yard in May for the Arctic region. The expedition will be under the command of Captain Kirkland.

THE COPYRIGHT BILL.

Mr. Henry Watterson Gives a Detailed Explanation of Its Workings.

He Wishes "News" Reorganized as a Legitimate and Valuable Property, and Explains How It Will Operate.

THE COPYRIGHT LAW.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The following interview has been had with Henry Watterson touching the proposed measure for a newspaper copyright which Watterson has in charge and is about to lay before Congress:

"Considerable misinformation," said Watterson, "seems to exist as to the character of the legislation which will be asked of Congress. It can certainly not be described as an act entitled an act for the relief of the Associated Press. All honest newspapers and all honest news associations are interested in its passage. It simply operates to protect the property in news from piratical concurrent publication."

Q.—"And how can this be done?"

A.—"By a clause in the copyright laws making the news the property of those who have gathered it by skilled labor and outlay, exclusive to those who pay for it for twenty-four hours."

"Do you mean news exclusively of the Associated Press?"

"I mean all news, and news of every description and every association. As matters are, news is not recognized as property at all. Everything about a newspaper office, from the perfecting press to the newsman's pot of paste, is property, and he who steals it falls within the reach and compass of law. But that which constitutes the real value of a newspaper property is its news franchises, costing vast sums of money and years of special enterprise, training and labor. That has no legal status whatever. It is practically outlawed. Anybody can steal it with impunity. The proposed measure protects it from pirated use and concurrent publication for twenty-four hours. It creates indeed a new property, that is property in news. No one can oppose it except those who want to rob others of their labor and money.

"How will it act upon the custom of copying from one paper by another?"

"It will not affect that in the least. The twenty-four hours' limitation gives all the latitude needful to honest and legitimate transcriptions from one newspaper into another. The country press is in nowise touched, and I can see no other interest on its part than to approve a measure calculated to elevate and dignify the profession of journalism by giving a certain legal validity and responsibility to collection and distribution of news.

"What are the prospects of the passing of such a bill?"

"I have consulted the best constitutional authorities during my sojourn in Washington, and there is a general agreement that there is no constitutional objection to the measure. I have also seen and talked with a number of eminent members of both Houses of Congress. I have been surprised to find some hazy prejudices against the Associated Press, the offspring of misadvisement in the main, and of some confusion as to the relations between the Associated Press and the Western Union Telegraph Company. There are, of course, no relations except those of customer and common carrier. Barring these immaterial objections, which discussion will clear up, there is an interested and friendly feeling in Congress. The question is a novel one and embraces the whole principle of modern journalism. The railway and telegraph, which have within the last half century wrought such changes throughout the world, have completely revolutionized the newspaper. That which we call "news" is a modern invention, as much as gutta-percha or the reaping machine. It demands the very best and the rarest of skilled labor. It involves forecast, organization and outlay. It is an intellectual and material product. Why has it not the same right to legal recognition and protection as other classes of property? Let us take an example. Suppose a newspaper, published in the City of New York and sold at three cents, obtains at great cost and pains a column or five columns of interesting and important matter. Should a newspaper issued right alongside and sold at one cent be allowed to get an early copy and issue concurrently this very same matter, without paying a nickel for it? There is no present law to forbid this. Take another example: The difference in time between points relatively east and west in this country enables a publisher who chooses to do so to make use of the enterprise of others. Should a thief at a distant point be enabled, by use of the telegraph, to steal the property of those men who have gone to great care and cost to obtain it? Under existing laws I can make a compilation of telegraph news matter, and, issuing this in a book, may copyright it. But if I write and wire the Courier-Journal a page of valuable matter, anybody who sees fit to steal and publish it may do so for the cost of the type-setting."

"How do you propose to define or describe the news to be copyrighted?"

"I should include all original, special and general matter exceeding one hundred words, sent by post or by wire, and embracing original communications of information of any and every description. Such an act cannot operate in favor of one newspaper and against another, or one news association over another. It is simply a bar to rogues, and fixes the same penalty upon stealing news which the law visits upon stealing other forms of property. How can an honest journalist object to that?"

"Can you formulate such a measure so that it will stand Congressional tests?"

"I think I have done so. I have drafted a bill and prepared an argument to go with it, which, though by no means perfect, I believe will give practical application and bearing to the question. You will understand that I have no personal interest at stake, and am not acting for myself at all. At the last annual meeting of the Associated Press I was made chairman of the committee which was raised to present the case to Congress. Thus commissioned I came here and I have proceeded with great deliberation and care, because I was fully conscious of the vagueness and newness of the question and the practical difficulties in the way. In the beginning I was not at all clear in my own mind. But the more I have considered and discussed it the more convinced have I become that the time is at hand when the law should recognize and protect a new species of property which other recognized and protected modern inventions have created, that is collected news against concurrent piratical publication.

The Fence Burners.

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 18.—Three of the ranger companies have been ordered into the fence cutting districts. The officers express the opinion that they will be able to put a stop to the trouble, but think they will be compelled to kill some of the more desperate of the cutters.

A MYSTERY OF THE SEA.

The Fate Which Overtook the "City of Boston"—Captain Murray's Idea and Experience.

A few years ago, the City of Boston sailed from harbor, crowded with an expectant throng of passengers bound for a foreign shore.

She never entered port.

The mystery of her untimely end grows deeper as the years increase, and the Atlantic voyager, when the fierce winds howl around and danger is eminent on every hand, shudders as the name and mysterious fate of that magnificent vessel are alluded to.

Our reporter, on a recent visit to New York, took lunch with Captain George Siddons Murray, on board the Alaska, of the Guion line. Captain Murray is a man of stalwart build, well-knit frame, and cherry, genial disposition. He has been a constant voyager for a quarter of a century, over half that time having been in the trans-Atlantic service. In the course of the conversation over the well-spread table, the mystery of the City of Boston was alluded to.

"Yes," returned the Captain, "I shall never forget the last night we saw that ill-fated vessel. I was chief officer of the City of Antwerp. On the day we sighted the City of Boston a furious south-east hurricane set in. Both vessels labored hard. The sea seemed determined to sweep away every vestige of life. When day ended the gale did not abate, and everything was lashed for a night of unusual fury. Our good ship was turned toward the south to avoid the possibility of ice-bergs. The City of Boston, however, undoubtedly went to the north. Her boats, life-preservers and rafts were securely lashed: and when she went down, everything went with her, never to re-appear until the sea gives up its dead."

"What, in your opinion, Captain, was the cause of the loss of the City of Boston?"

"The City of Limerick, in almost precisely the same latitude, a few days later, found the sea full of floating ice; and I have no doubt the City of Boston collided with the ice, and sunk immediately."

Captain Murray has been in command of the Alaska ever since she was put in commission and feels justly proud of his noble ship. She carries thousands of passengers every year, and has greatly popularized the Williams & Guion line. Remarking upon the bronzed and healthy appearance of the captain, the reporter said that sea life did not seem to be a very great physical trial.

"No? But a person's appearance is not always a trustworthy indication of his physical condition. For seven years I have been in many respects very much out of sorts with myself. At certain times I was so lame that it was difficult for me to move around. I could scarcely straighten up. I did not know what the trouble was, and though I performed all my duties regularly and satisfactorily, yet I felt that I might some day be overtaken with some serious prostrating disorder. Those troubles increased. I felt dull and then, again, shooting pains through my arms and limbs. Possibly the next day I would feel flushed and unaccountably uneasy and the day following chilly and despondent. This continued until last December, when I was prostrated soon after leaving Queenstown, and for the remainder of the voyage was a helpless! pitiful sufferer. In January last, a friend who made that trip with me, wrote me a letter urging me to try a new course of treatment. I gladly accepted his counsel, and for the last seven months have given thorough and business-like attention to the recovery of my natural health: and to-day, I have the proud satisfaction of saying to you that the lame back, the strange feelings, the sciatic rheumatism which have so long pursued me, have entirely disappeared through the blood-purifying influence of Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure which entirely eradicated all rheumatic poison from my system. Indeed, to me, it seems that it has worked wonders, and I therefore most cordially commend it."

"And you have no trouble now in exposing yourself to the winds of the Atlantic?"

"Not the least. I am as sound as a bullet and I feel specially thankful over the fact because I believe rheumatic and kidney disease is in the blood of my family. I was dreadfully shocked on my last arrival in Liverpool to learn that my brother, who is a wealthy China tea merchant, had suddenly died of Bright's disease of the kidneys, and consider myself extremely fortunate in having taken my trouble in time and before any more serious effects were possible."

The conversation drifted to other topics, and as the writer watched the face before him, so strong in all its outlines and yet so genial, and thought of the innumerable exposures and hardships to which its owner had been exposed, he instinctively wished all who are suffering from the terrible rheumatic troubles now so common might know of Captain Murray's experience and the means by which he had been restored. Pain is a common thing in this world, but far too many endure it when they might just as well avoid it. Its a false philosophy which teaches us to endure when we can just as readily avoid. So thought the hearty captain of the Alaska; so thinks the writer, and so should all others think who desire happiness and a long life.

Mr. Temple is now getting out a large order for Lucas county, Ohio, and numerous other smaller orders. His sales one day last week amounted to over two hundred dollars.

Among the personals in last Monday's Adrian Times was the following: "Mrs. S. D. Nesmith, of Addison, died at the Lawrence to-day." The news went through town Tuesday morning like wild fire, and upon telephoning to the Lawrence house to verify the report we received the reply that Mr. S. D. Nesmith dined at the Lawrence on Monday. The intelligent compositor had put an s to Mr. and left an n out of dined. That explained the whole mystery.

A new passenger train was put on the M. & O. last Tuesday to run between Battle Creek and Toledo. It will go East in the morning passing at 8:27 and return early in the evening, arriving here at 6:41 P. M. It will make close connections with the Wabash road at Britton. People on the line of the M. & O. between Battle Creek and Britton can take this train, go to either Detroit or Toledo, have 5 hours for business and return in good season the same night. This train will be a very popular one.

B. J. Bidwell has made the following sales from his herd of Shorthorns:

To John D. Shull, Tecumseh, bull Breadalbane 11th 45516, by Breadalbane 2nd 37792, dam Myrtle 2d by Mazurka's Oxford 12428.

To Marvin Cooley, Franklin, bull Breadalbane 14th 50235, by Breadalbane 2d 37792, dam Duchess 6th, by Noble Duke 2d 15005.

To same, cow Imogene, red and white, by Mazurka's Oxford, out of Snowball by Burlington 13574.

To J. M. Moore, Brooklyn, bull Breadalbane 12th 50233, by Breadalbane 2d 37792, dam Minnie 5th, by Mazurka's Oxford 12428.

To E. O. Weinett, Abilene, Texas, bull Breadalbane 18th, by Breadalbane 2d 37792, dam Oxford Cherry 2d, by Mazurka's Oxford 12428.

Mr. Bidwell reports his stock wintering well. He has eight yearling bulls on sale, as well as cows and young heifers.

THE BIG FLOOD.

Bert Temple has furnished us with a copy of the Portsmouth Blade giving a full account of the great flood in the Ohio valley at that point. It is filled with thrilling incidents connected with the high water at Portsmouth. Among a large number of interesting items we find these:

At 12 o'clock of Feb. 12th, 1883, the water reached its highest limit, and strange as it may seem, at precisely the same time, 12 o'clock of Feb. 12th, '84, the highest point was again reached in this city. This is a coincidence as is a coincidence

Monday, Bill Alt, of Chillicothe street, was monarch of the entire tonsorial profession, he being the only barber in the city, whose shop was not submerged. It lasted only a few hours, however, and Bill was reduced to the level of his competitors.

The only train that can reach Cincinnati is the Cincinnati Northern, and some half dozen others connect with this one at Norwood, seven miles north-east of the city. All mail is brought out on this little narrow gauge.

At the least calculation one hundred pianos have been destroyed or damaged almost beyond repair, entailing a loss of many thousand dollars. This will be a good field for an experienced piano-tuner after the waters subside.

"DRIVEN FROM HOME."

The entertainment given under the auspices of the G. A. R. last week at the Opera House was given to good houses on both evenings, and it is no flattery to say that it was the best amateur theatrical put on the boards in this village for several years. Harry C. Chapman carried the leading role of the miserly Dutchman to perfection, and the home talent was very wisely distributed. Judge Stanley carried his part admirably, as did the attorneys and officers. Jivers was capitally rendered, and in fact nothing else could be expected of Perry Hosmer. The ladies did well, and Joe Biggs, though a new man on a Tecumseh stage showed a superior talent for acting that surprised his friends. The whole caste was arranged in a way to best bring out the talents of the actors. Not only was the play itself well put on the stage, but the business management of the affair was well conducted in a financial point of view. The expenses were quite heavy, owing to the bonus paid Mr. Chapman, but the Quartermaster after paying all bills reported to the Post $95.15 as the net proceeds of the entertainment. The G. A. R. have reason to congratulate themselves on the successful issue of their first theatrical venture.

Blissfield Advance: Palmyra is now agitating the matter of compelling the Lake Shore people to run a passenger train daily each way over the old track through the village. It will be a cold day when they do.

A Toledo note in the Adrian Times says the ice gorge above the city remains firm, and a return of freezing weather has checked the volume of water flowing into the Maumee from the smaller tributaries, and there is no imminent danger of an overflow.—Yet the merchants hardly dare to place goods in their cellars again, and so in suspense, much inconvenience is experienced. The railroads suffer the most, as they dare not receive freight into their houses except in limited quantity, and for the briefest time. Amidst a bewilderment of prophecy, the prevailing opinion seems to be, if the ice and waters move without rain, and gradually, Toledo will not suffer the dreaded deluge.

MORE SURPRISE PARTIES.

Surprise parties have become an epidemic in this latitude. Last Saturday evening a company of about 80 visited "Met and Jule" Conklin at their commodious home northwest of the village, and a most jolly evening was passed by all. The party was arranged by "Uncle Billy" Brezee, and was a success of course, as everything is which he puts his hand to. On the same evening a large number of Frank Davidson's Ridgeway and Tecumseh friends came down upon him and gave him an old fashioned housewarming. It is needless to say that both Frank and his genial wife proved themselves fully equal to the occasion and entertained their guests in fine style. If there had been good sleighing the Conklin party would have gone down to Davidson's about ten o'clock in the evening, and then,—well we are afraid the walls of Frank's house would have been strained or the Sabbath would have been broken.

THE HIGH SCHOOL PIANO.

Prof. Hanimond has closed a purchase of a new piano for the High School. When he began to look about for a piano last fall he talked with both Mr. Sparks and the agent of Whitney's music house of Detroit.—Whitney's agent promised to put in a good piano at wholesale rates of the Hallet, Davis & Co.'s make, underbidding Mr. Sparks, who was Whitney's local agent here. Sparks shortly after obtained the control of the Briggs' piano from Currier & McChesney, of Detroit, and made better figures, as they had several of those instruments on hand to be closed out by an assignee. Meanwhile Prof. Hammond corresponded with Prof. Pease, of Ypsilanti, who recommended the Briggs' piano as a fine toned and durable instrument. Prof. Hammond then closed a trade with Mr. Sparks for a Briggs at less than the wholesale price. It is an extra bargain. Only $75 remain to be raised to pay for it which can be done before the close of the present school year.

EN ROUTE TO CALIFORNIA.

James B. Colvin was at Ogden on the 14th inst. From a private letter we take a few extracts which will be of interest to our readers:

I am waiting for the train going west; its behind this morning six hours. Have just come up from Salt Lake City. Thermometer 17 below here this morning, 24 yesterday morning, but they don't mind it here. If I was at home I would not dare to be out, but it is quite pleasant here. Will be in Oakland to-morrow night if all goes well. The cars are comfortable to ride in but they have to keep up a good fire. No snow to hinder as yet and we understand there is no more ahead although the ground is covered here. Saw thousands of cattle shifting for themselves as we came thro' Wyoming territory and they have done well so far, but this snap will kill them by droves; the snow is from six to ten inches deep all over the territory, and is not quite so deep in Nebraska, but the ground is covered all the way to Chicago. The cattle have drifted down from the north from one to two hundred miles, with no one to look after them till next summer when they expect to find those not frozen to death, and that will be about one quarter of the whole, and if this cold weather continues ten days more it will ruin one-half the herds. I had a very faint idea of the size of this country until I saw it. Salt Lake City is a splendid place for a city, but the Mormons are keeping emigration from coming in and it is growing very slowly. There is a continual fight going on between the gentiles and mormons, and the mormons comprise four-fifths of the population Was it not that the Governor and U. S. Marshal are both appointed by the President no gentile would live there three days. I was all over the city. The temple, the Synagogue and all the other places of worship, and at the Hot Springs I saw most of the leading mormons and had a big time generally, of which I will tell you when I get home. This I write standing in the depot with a perfect babel going on around me.

THE LAND OF FLOWERS.

SORRENTO, FLA., Feb. 11, 1884.

EDITOR HERALD:

We have been living between hope and fear since the heavy freeze, but our fears have subsided since learning that orange trees are coming out all right. I have examined several groves and find that those on high pine lands are uninjured. I was through F. D. Raymond's grove yesterday and found many trees with fruit buds just ready to blossom, although the freeze caused many leaves to fall, yet it only proves a benefit to the trees, from the fact that it removes the scale insect, and as the new growth comes forth no harm will come to them from the insect on old leaves. On some of the trees that we have transplanted from J. B. Swan's grove are new buds ¾ of an inch in length, with trees looking fresh and thrifty. In some groves on low land trees were frozen to such an extent as to cause the bark to split from top to bottom, yet on the whole nine-tenths of the orange trees in Orange Co. are uninjured, especially those that are over three years old.—A few young nursery trees are killed, causing a large demand for trees at high prices, but since fresh leaves are put forth the excitement is abating and from present prospects the supply will more than equal the demand at present, at least while the drouth continues. Having water handy by we have set our grove, watering the trees well down, with 2½ pails of water to each tree, and mulching with pine straw, and if the rain holds off three months more we will give them more water from the spring brook.—This severe cold wave has settled the one question in many minds, that the orange will withstand more freezing than was supposed it could, as was the case on the 6th of January last when the thermometer registered 24° above zero; the day following it stood at 72° at noon. Then again on the 22nd day of January it was 25° above zero; the day following it was 73°.—Since which time the temperature has been from 48° to 62° at 6 A. M., and 65° to 85° at noon, and 53° to 74° at 6 P. M. To-day it was 84° at noon. The heavy dews help out very much during this very long dry spell, ¾ of an inch of rain fall since Oct. 28th last. This, in Michigan, would equal a drouth. It proves so here for early gardening, where water is not handy for irrigation, but for orchards and pineapples the refreshing dews and cool nights sustain and perpetuate their growth. While the many new settlers here have fine weather for their building, which is going on at a surprising rate, and nearly every day brings fresh arrivals to this land of sunshine.

We have a new neighbor, Frank Steger, of Tecumseh, who has purchased a ten acre lot just across the away, and is vigorously persuading the lofty pines to "come down" and step out, to give room for a grove of orange, which he proposes to plant out this season. I am told by old Floridians that we must expect a dry season every seven years, as it always has been so from the earliest history of Florida, and a cold winter accompanying it, and to be succeeded by much rain fall during the spring and summer.

We hope to attend the State Fair at Jacksonville on the 12th inst., and take a look over the fruits, vegetables, flowers, plants, cotton, honey and poultry. I see on the list of premiums offered for best display of strawberries, $25. Am sorry to have none in bearing this season, but have heard of those who have, which is rather early for us from Michigan to look for strawberries and cream.

The outlook for Florida as a prosperous State is very good. Towns and villages are filling up fast. New cottages and slight frame dwellings meets the eye of the traveller in al most every direction over the State. Thousands of acres of land have been sold this season, and in many localities prices are double over last year. Land owners are dividing and subdividing, selling off five and ten acre lots, giving all a chance to have a grove who shall choose to come to the State for a winter home, as thousands will yet be driven from the rigid north and west to seek shelter from the cold, beneath this genial sunny sky, where as a health resort for those with lung trouble may have rest from that exhausting cough, and enjoy breezes from ocean and gulf, gather wild flowers every day in the year, and "listen to the mocking bird."

From a short call at Mumford's store in Adrian the other day we are satisfied that he must control the best book trade in the city. His store is completely crammed with goods in the book, stationery and notion line.

Chester W. Brownson, of Clinton, on Monday last sold out his lease to David Service, whose farm he had leased, and Service will take possession again on the first day of April.—The parties have had considerable litigation of late, but they now "agree to disagree", and Chet says if Service will be a man he is ready to bury the hatchet. Chet is ready to go in peace and let Service run his own farm.

Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zon-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zon-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zon-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

The Preservation of Georgia Forests.

The preservation of the forests is now a prominent topic of discussion in several States. It should not be necessary to urge the importance of this subject in any country, but the wasteful habits of the American people in regard to the destruction of timber are hard to eradicate. In Georgia the supply of timber, until a few years ago, has been considered practically inexhaustible. Now, however, in many sections of the State its scarcity is beginning to be appreciated and felt, and there is not sufficient timber left either for fencing or fuel.

The old-time destructive process of clearing land, the multiplication of turpentine farms, the work of hundreds of saw-mills, have been denuding the land of timber for many years, and now, if the present rate of destruction is continued, it will not be long before the celebrated pine forests of Georgia will be among the things of the past.

Comparatively little of the forest area of Georgia is now a part of the public domain. Nearly all the land is in the hands of private individuals or corporations, and it would be all but impossible to enact and enforce laws for the effective preservation of timbered lands except where the title remains in the State. The appeal should be made not only to the good sense, but to the self interest of land-owners, to adopt some system for the preservation of their timber and for its replacement when already destroyed.

It has been demonstrated by at least one company in Georgia that the timber of a tract of land can be utilized and put on the market, and at the same time the forests preserved in their integrity, and the supply of lumber taken rendered all but inexhaustible. It has a rule for the cutting and milling of timber by which only the very largest trees are cut, while the balance are left to grow, and thus by the time the cutters get over the land one time, say in ten years, the process of selection can be repeated, and so on indefinitely. There is every reason why all substantial lumbermen should adopt this systematic manner of utilizing and at the same time preserving their timber. No doubt it can be so modified as to be adapted to turpentine farms, and regulations about fire adopted that will render the turpentine business a permanent and growing industry, instead of a fight against time and nature, which must of necessity end from exhaustion or destruction of the timber in a very few years.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

The Peril of Winter Fishing.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin pronounces the great loss of fishing-vessels during the past season "a horror of the sea even greater than the wreck of the City of Columbus," and says there is "no need of the annual sacrifice of life and property which is now made." It furthermore declares that "it is more hazardous to engage in Georges Banks fishing than to work in a powder-mill." The high rank of the Bulletin as a commercial newspaper gives much weight to its words on "a subject, and the remedy it proposes deserves earnest consideration. It is better to "abolish winter fishing on Georges" than to have a yearly loss of more than one hundred lives, but it suggests that the use of deeper vessels with an improved outfit would remove much of the peril of the industry. The city of Gloucester is chiefly interested in the winter-fishing, and of its fleet sent out in 1883 seventeen vessels and two hundred and nine fishermen never came back. The record for 1881 may be still more terrible, for already two vessels are known to be lost and seven more are supposed to be.

The Newfoundland seal industry is said to be the greatest and most profitable ocean fishery in the world, but the introduction of steam-vessels for fishing gives especial interest to the inquiry whether winter-fishing is necessarily so perilous that it ought to be prohibited, for it is thought that steam-fishing smacks will be extensively used to take cod in the winter months. Steam smacks can also be advantageously used for mackerel-fishing, catching more fish and taking them to market much more rapidly than sail-vessels. At present much of the fish taken in winter is taken from the water in the fall and kept on ice until it passes from the market. The demand for fish fresh from the sea is increasing so fast that general interest attaches to the discussion of the methods by which the perils of winter fishing can be reduced.—*N. Y. Embroidered Muslin.

Muslins of a solid color are imported in robe patterns that have a deep ounce and narrow garniture of embroidery, done in many colors in cross stitches and in tapestry designs. These come in ecrit, cream, rose pink and pale blue, and will make gay and youthful summer dresses. For white dresses there are French nainsooks wrought all over with sprigs, daisies, rose-buds or lilies, to be used as over-dresses or as the skirt fronts of plain muslins. These are in thick designs like those of needle-work, but there are also many of the open worked Hamburg goods that are to be used for yokes, sleeves and front breadths of the white India linens.

Bands of insertion and scalloped embroideries for trimming are in new designs that have the effect of applique work, as they are made to stand out in relief from the surface, and represent dragons, lizards, flowers, animals, birds and insects. Netted meshes, like those of lace, are placed inside outlines of these figures and enhance the appearance of applied-work. The Fayal designs are in durable open work for piqué and for satteens, and other patterns have small eyelets that look like perforated card board, in preference to the more showy large wheels, stars and latticed figures of Hamburg designs. The Irish point patterns are again imported in fine sheer white nainsooks, and will be used as transparents over dark satin or velvet for trimming cashmere dresses and the Louisines and India silks. Mosaic embroideries in designs of many leaves, like tatting, will be used for trimming children's white dresses of muslins, and also their light colored cashmere dresses.—Harper's Bazar.

The crops in Ireland have fallen off because of the emigration of laborers.

Pluck vs. Luck.

In an address delivered before the students of the Spencerian business college, Washington, D. C., June 29, 1869, among other things, Gen. James A. Garfield said:

"Now, young gentlemen, let me address you touching your success in life; and I hope the very brevity of my remarks will increase the chance of their making a lodgment in your minds. Let me beg you in the outset of your career, to dismiss from your minds all ideas of succeeding by luck. There is no more silly thought among young people than the foolish one that by and by something will turn up by which they will suddenly achieve fame or fortune. No, young gentlemen, things don't turn up in this world unless somebody turns them up. Inertia is one of the indispensable laws of matter, and things lie flat where they are until by some intelligent spirit (for nothing but spirit makes motion in this world) they are endowed with activity and life. Do not dream that some good luck is going to happen to you and give you a fortune. Luck is an ignis fatuus—you may follow it to ruin, but not to success. The great Napoleon, who believed in his destiny, followed it until he saw his star go down in blackest night, when the Old Guard perished around him, and Waterloo was lost. A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck.

Young men talk of trusting to the spur of the occasion. That trust is vain. Occasions cannot make spurs young gentlemen. If you expect to wear spurs you must win them. If you wish to use them you must buckle them to your own heels before you go into the fight. The prize you may achieve is not worth the having unless you fight for it. Whatever you win in life you must conquer by your own efforts, and then it is yours—a part of yourself."

Good Advice for Everybody.

1. Never, under any circumstances assume a responsibility that you can avoid, consistently with your duty to yourself and others.

2. Base all your actions upon a principle of right; preserve your integrity of character, and in doing this never reckon on the cost.

3. Remember that self-interest is much more likely to warp your judgment than all other circumstances combined; therefore look well to your duty when your interest is concerned.

4. Never make money at the expense of your reputation.

5. Be neither lavish or niggardly. Of the two, avoid the latter. A mean man is universally despised, but public favor is a stepping stone to preferment; therefore generous feelings should be cultivated.

6. Say but little; think much and do more.

7. Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket. Ready money is a friend in need.

8. Avoid borrowing and lending.

9. Wine drinking and cigar smoking are bad habits; they impair the health and pocket, and lead to a waste of time.

10. Never relate your misfortunes, and never grieve over what you cannot prevent.

11. Cultivate promptness in deciding upon matters that come before you; there are few objects more disagreeable than an undecided, vacillating man. Consider thoughtfully, but decide promptly.

12. Never break a business engagement of any kind, if it be possible to meet it. Let nothing cause you to become careless of business etiquette, integrity and promptitude.

13. Let truth and an unwavering faith in God underlie all your motives and actions.

The Curfew Bell

It will be remembered that the curfew is commonly said to have been introduced into England by William the Conqueror. By that monarch it was ordained, under severe penalties, that when the curfew bell rang at 8 o'clock in the evening all lights and fires should be extinguished. There are those who hold that this was merely the enforcing of an existing and very common police regulation to that effect. The absolute prohibition of lights after the ringing of the curfew bell was abolished by Henry I. in the year 1100, but the practice of tolling a bell at a fixed hour in the evening was continued, and this, which is still extant in some places, is a survival of the curfew of medieval times. At first the common hour was 7 o'clock, then it was gradually advanced to 8, and in some places to 9 o'clock; indeed, in Scotland, 10 o'clock was not an unusual hour. The curfew was a regulation most useful in those early days, when it was the custom to place the fire in a hole in the middle of the floor under an opening in the roof, to allow the escape of the smoke. When the family retired for the night, the fire was extinguished by covering it up; hence the term couvre-feu, or curfew. The regulation was also serviceable in obliging the people to keep in their houses, and thus preventing night brawls in the streets. It is believed that there is no historical authority for the popular tradition that the severity exhibited by the Conqueror in enforcing obedience to the curfew was more particularly designed to prevent the English from assembling in secret to plan schemes of rebellion against their Norman lords.

Feathered Slaves.

No people are more ingenious than the Chinese in the minor arts of life. That they have succeeded in training birds to fish is a striking example of their ingenuity and patience. Instead of carrying nets, the fishermen provide themselves with a large number of cormorants which perch on the edge of the boats. It is a curious spectacle to see these creatures engaged in fishing, diving into the water and always coming up with a fish in their beaks. As the Chinese fear the vigorous appetites of their feathered servants, they fasten around their necks an iron ring, large enough to allow their breathing but too small to admit of the entrance of the fish they seize; to prevent their straying about in the water and wasting the time desired for their work, a cord is attached to the ring and to one claw of the cormorant by which he is pulled up when inclined to stay too long under water. When tired he is permitted to rest for a while; but if he abuse the indulgence and waste his time, a few strokes of the bamboo recalls him to duty, and the poor diver resumes his laborious occupation. In passing from one fishing ground to another, the cormorants perch side by side, so as not to disturb the equilibrium of the frail vessel.

A boy came home from school much excited, and told his father that the teacher said all human beings were descended from apes, which made the old man so mad that he replied angily: "That may be the case with you, but it ain't with me. I can tell you that, now."

Neuralgic Rheumatism is the hardest kind to treat. The only way to get at it is to go right for the cause of it. The quicker you get your blood in good condition the less you will suffer in body and mind. Athlophoros moves directly on the enemy in the blood. It purges the vital fluid of the poisons and acids which give rise to neuralgic and rheumatic pains and inflammations. As soon as the work of cleansing begins you feel the pain departing, and by the time that work is done the disease has fled.

Fashion Notes.

Changeable silks are gaining favor.

The Medicis collar is very popular this year.

Two toned brocades are specially handsome.

Few bows are seen on modern shoes, and those are quite flat, of the style called cravat bows.

Bright colored silk embroidery is largely used for garnishing white opera cloaks.

Strings for bonnets are somewhat broader, and mostly preferred in velvet or ottoman ribbon.

Dresses of plain cloth are frequently trimmed.

Loops of narrow ribbons, gilt braid, or velvet, are laid against the frills of ruching for the neck.

Bright red and bottle green combined are in good taste.

Some of the latest bridal dresses have a broad band of white fur bordering the train.

Caps are of plaited lace, puffs of tulle, and gauze.

The most beautiful clasps, which fasten like an ordinary hook and eye, are now used to take the place of buttons, both for dresses and cloaks.

Bands of black velvet are worn around the throat and wrists at afternoon "at homes." They are always ornamented with diamond or pearl pins.

Ladies' white cloth dolmans are considered stylish opera cloaks when bordered with white fox fur and lined with plush.

Small-headed diamond pins, pearl, gold and silver pins are thrust about in the laces of jabots and frills on dressy corsages.

Shell hair pins, with glittering Rhine stones in the curved end, are worn as ornaments, thrust through the coils of the back hair.

Neck chains are altogether out of fashion, and women who have handsome ones are converting them into bracelets.

A novel apron drapery for a costume of silk and velvet is composed of velvet and ribbons woven together, over and under, in checker board pattern.

The straight, high dog collar is affected by women with long, slender throats. It is generally made of dark velvet, stiff, with gold, silver, steel or pearl embroidery.

Cravats and bows for the neck are quite gone out of fashion. A tiny brooch is used to fasten the small officer collar with which all dress bodices are now finished.

Plush is coming steadily back into favor. Worth has just made a dress for the Princess of Wales and another for the Queen of Portugal, both trimmed with plush.

Bonnets in the Princess shape, made of shirred black velvet, with pompoms of gray and black on the left side, and strings of ribbon velvet of both shades, are now worn by young ladies.

Walking boots of black or bronze kid are made with from seventeen to twenty-four very small buttons for dressy toilets; of patent leather, with cloth gaiters buttoned half way up the leg, for more neglige dress and for traveling.

The most fashionable fur capes are those made of monkey skin and black fox. Some of the former have little chenille ball borders. These capes make an effective addition to toilets of black silk, satin and velvet.

The sheer linen cambric handkerchiefs have taken the first rank—scalloped edges, with a vine inside; a hem with several rows of raised dots inside, and elaborate needlework all round trimming them. Others have an applique of pompadour lace in each corner.

All walking dresses are still cut with round skirts, as also dresses for small evening or dinner parties; but the train seems to obtain more success than last year for ball or grand reception toilets. For such occasions the short dress is only adopted by young girls or young married ladies who dance a great deal.

Pretty ball toilets are made of milky white English crape draped over moire or satin, with light clusters of flowers. Others are of colored silk tulle plaited over silk, with draperies of figured tulle to match, or tulle spangled with gold or silver, which looks pretty and effective. This tulle is draped over moire previously veiled over with plain tulle, which produces a most lustrous and beautiful effect.

Large metal clasps, more or less rich, artistic and beautiful, are worn with all elegant costumes at the neck of mantle or jacket, at the waist, in the folds of drapery or puffing. Metal brooches are worn upon hats and bonnets, bows and cravats; brooches have also come into favor again since large cravat bows have been given up.

Tea gowns are now made principally in Watteau style, and have very long trains. One recently seen was made of the palest gray cashmere brightened with a long Watteau back and train of vivid scarlet satin. Down the front were innumerable bows and ends of narrow pale gray and red satin ribbon.

Dark Russian furs are the most fashionable this winter. Long cloaks lined with quilted fur are edged all around with fur. Siberian fox and wild cat are also considered stylish. Plain black velvet paletots trimmed with bear skin are one of the most stylish out-door garments of the season. Fur is universally worn, as trimming this winter, and is both stylish and elegant.

Great refinement in the details of the toilet is a sure sign of good taste. Stockings should always be colored, unless they are worn with entirely white evening toilets. For the daytime they are of cashmere, wool or silk lourette, matched to the dress or its trimmings, and either plain or striped, to wear with the semi low shoe or the high boot, sixteen to twenty small buttons, patent leather-pointed tip and low heel. For the evening the stocking is of colored silk, open worked or embroidered on the instep, and worn with the low satin or bronze kid shoe, plain or embroidered with beads.

All plaid tissues, chess board patterns and checks of all dimensions are lighted up with fine streaks of brilliant coloring, stripes wide or narrow, of two colors, or two shades of one color, cloth trimmed with velvet or plush. Auvergnant velvet, or ribbed velveteen, are the materials principally employed for children's winter dresses. Upon ribbed velveteen are applied bands of unbleached embroidery, or better still, deep lace borders, worked in crochet, with unbleached cotton pockets, sleeve revers, and deep collar matched to the embroidery or lace—such are the only trimmings becoming a young child's dress.

Fashions are more varied than ever this winter. Evening dresses are made of either light or dark shades, with a train as often as not, but quite a plain one, without any sort of trimming, especially when the material is a rich one. The train, as has been already hinted, can be made top net on and off at pleasure. Bodices are cut low in a round, square, or oval shape, seldom in the shape of a heart, and generally peaked in front. Sleeves to the elbow of light lace, if lace forms part of the toilet, gloves very long, of unglazed kid, pale gray, or black with black dresses; straw colored, white, pearl gray, or gilded crust, with light evening or ball toilets; bracelets, as beautiful as possible, are worn over the gloves.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Grand Opera.

"Father," asked a young man of his cynical parent, "what is grand opera?"

"I don't know."

"Why are some operas called grand, while others are not so designated?" "It seems to me that if a composer could write grand opera he would never write any other kind."

"Well, you see it's only by experiment that a composer can determine whether or not an opera is grand. If, upon first production, the music is beyond the abilities of the singers and bores the audience, it is grand. The weary yawn of a man does more, my son, to determine the value of an opera than the highest recommendation from a professional critic of music. If, though, the singer can climb to the summit of emergency, and if the audience is pleased, the opera is not grand and the composer goes away dissatisfied, disappointed and disconsolate. Sometimes the composer can correct the mistake brought to light on the proof-sheet of first production. On one occasion a great composer produced an opera which he hoped would be grand, but there was so much music in it, the singers did so well, and the audience went into such fits of rapture and spasms of enjoyment, that the composer saw his work doomed to a wayward life of inferior appreciation. After the performance he took the opera and sat up all night crossing out the music and marking in rasp flats and guinea-hen sharps. He went with high hope the next night to get a revise. The audience became restless. Men began to talk business. A harness and buggy dealer from a neighboring town sold three buggies, two sets of harness, and figured extensively on an omnibus trade. Women drew their cloaks around their shoulders and shivered. The voices on the stage broke and fell in shattered fragments. The composer went away happy. His opera was grand.

"Did the people continue their patronage after the music was marked out and the opera pronounced grand?"

"Bless your ignorance, yes. Why the increase in attendance was wonderful. Previous to an opera's advent as grand that is, before the music is crossed out—only people who really loved the 'concord of sweet sounds' went to see it, but afterwards it was like to all. The man with the dullest ear enjoyed it quite as much, or pretended to, which is all the same, as the person whose spirit was stirred by the gentle touch of soul-born harmony."

"But, father, if there is really nothing sweet in the grand operas why do you take mother to see them?"

"Because I am a fool, son."

"Yes, but why does mother—."

"Because she is a fool, my boy."

"Are all people thus actuated?"

"Yes: that is, all who are honest enough to confess it."

"Don't you believe there are people who enjoy grand operas?"

"Oh yes."

"They are highly cultivated, are they not?"

"No, not necessarily."

"What kind of people are they?"

"Deaf people, young man."—Arkansaw Traveller.

Our Little World.

Some physical results of the Java disturbance help us to understand how small the world is. Take a bowl of water, agitate the fluid in the center, and the undulations you excite propagate themselves in smooth swelling concentric rings till they lap against the side of the bowl. There they break, and slop up in mimic tidal waves. This is an exact illustration—magna componere parvis—of the oscillations of the sea reported from both hemispheres this week. The tidal irregularities, as might be expected, were most violent on the northwestern seaboard of Australia, which lies right opposite the scene of the Java disturbances. On that coast the sea retreated and advanced a hundred yards. A day or two later oscillations appeared on the Atlantic seaboard of America. The particular undulation which, on the fifth day out, slopped up on the east coast of New Zealand must have come by way of Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn, and had nearly completed the circle of the globe. Australia lies as a breakwater between us and Java by the direct route. It gives one a new conception of the littleness of what Henry Ward Beecher calls "this ha'penny-ha'penny world" when a man can stand on the ocean Beach at Dunedin and watch the ripples from a splash made in the straits of Sunda.—Chicago Times.

The death of a noted native of Roelbridge County, Va., is thus related in a Texas paper: "Big Foot Wallace, the celebrated pioneer, veteran and Indian fighter, is dead." The old man has been leading a hermit life for years past in the brushiest part of Atascosa County, Tex., and was found in bed a corpse. It is thought that he had been dead two or three days when found. There is no heir to the few cattle he owned, and the contents of the cabin, his rifle, knife, saddle and various Indian trophies and souvenirs will probably go to the State."

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left me before I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt."

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation."

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for scumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption.
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he died was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

DOMESTIC.

A CALL for a mass convention of American Inventors, to be in March of this year, in the great Music Hall and Exposition Building in Cincinnati, has been issued. The call recites that the great monopolies of the country have made strong efforts to destroy the present wise and beneficent Patent laws, and there have been none to antagonize the representations thus made. To this end the inventors of this country have determined to form a permanent organization, wholly and solely for the purpose of being able by combined efforts to show Congress and the people that it will be detrimental to the interests of the country to accede to the demands of the monopolists." The convention to be held will seek to adopt some united form of action, or form State associations. All inventors and patentees who can attend, and desire to do so, are invited to address at once the Chairman of the Executive Committee, J. S. Zerbe, editor of the American Inventor, 158 West Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, who will forward each applicant the badge to entitle the holder to admission on the floor as a delegate. NEWBURG NIBBLINGS.

Is this a specimen of Michigan's open winter?

The mill-yard is being well filled with logs of a good quality, and Mr. Querrisy is correspondingly happily.

A large number of our inhabitants are suffering with severe colds.

Mrs. Maria Sheldon and son, of Tecumseh, spent last Sunday with her brother S. P. Sheldon.

The Friday evening meetings at the school house are well attended. Come out next Friday evening.

Mr and Mrs Coryell are visiting friends at St. Johns, Clinton Co.

The Sunday School at the school house is in a prosperous condition, and is well attended.

Miss Hattie McNeil is spending a few days in Tecumseh.

The Newberg skating rink is situated in the midst of one Mr. Coryell's fields, and a very jolly place it is sometimes of an evening, especially to those who are learning the art, and also to the older part of the population.

Washington's Birthday was observed by a goodly number of our people in the shape of skating.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Dove were away last week attending the wedding of Mr. Dove's sister Emma. Congratulations to the happy young couple.

Some people may think that Newburg is a dead city; but could those persons have been here to attend our skating circles from night to night; or could they have been here last Saturday evening and attended the surprise party of which Will Harding, who is keeping bachelor's hall, was made the victim, they would have been compelled to leave changed in their opinion. At an early hour they began to gather and to take possession of the house and the scene beggars description. After a time, the leaders took possession of the kitchen and dining room; and soon the table was groaning under the weight of the goodies which these women know how to prepare. The company broke up at a late hour pronouncing it a grand success.

RIDGEWAY RATTLINGS.

Mr. Wm. Riggs has purchased the Blacksmith shop of Geo. S. Bose and a village lot of G. P. Waring, on which he is making preparation to build as soon as the weather will permit.

The Michigan and Ohio Rail-Road Company have commenced putting in cattle yards, and when they make this place a telegraph station it will be a very desirable shipping-point. Several carloads of stock are waiting facilities for sending off from this place.

Surprise parties are getting to be almost too numerous to make mention. The last one at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Underwood, on Saturday evening last, friends to the number of 175 came in, had a very pleasant time, and made the occasion for presenting Miss Velena Underwood a handsome present as a token of their regards for her faithful and efficient services as organist at the M. E. church. A reward truly earned and doubtless fully appreciated.

About four o'clock this morning a fire broke out in Britton's Store at Britton station and the building with the entire stock was consumed. Nothing saved. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The property was insured but we have not learned the amount.

FLASHES BY C. T. LINE.

L. J. Esslinger formerly of the Newburg mills, goes to Ypsilanti to live.

Mrs. P. Mills is very low with heart disease and her friends are alarmed as to her recovery.

Last Saturday night A. Welch had a horse badly kicked while in the stable; C. A. Waldron, V.S., was called and gave the necessary patching up that the animal needed.

Messrs. Garlinghouse and Benedict have connected their residences by a local telegraph line. It is about one mile in length with three instruments working. Manager Bowen of C. T. line furnished them with the material to build and equip it.

James Updyke, Sr., lies in a critical condition from a severe hurt which he received while leading a horse out of the barn. It seems he undertook to lead the horse out and while doing so the horse stepped on his foot throwing him violently to the ground, and it is supposed the horse stepped on him as his hip is fractured and the spine injured. At this writing his death is looked for hourly.

Mothers, Where Are Your Daughters?

The scripture says, "Cast not your pearls before swine." Mothers, your daughters are your pearls; where do you keep them? Are they out night after night, when they ought to be at home. Are they away from you until far into the night, again and again, without your knowing where they are? Is this wise on your part? If you had precious gems would you use them so? Beware, lest you cast your pearls before swine. Some girls are out night after night walking the streets with young men whom their mothers cannot respect, often with young men whom they have met on the streets and of whom they know absolutely nothing. Your daughters may not do such things; for your sake let us hope that they do not. But if you do not know where they are evening after evening, how can you know what they are doing? It is your place to know where your daughters are. Your duty requires that you take pains to know where they are, and what they are doing. You may think that they go to your neighbor's to visit with her daughter, or to the religious meeting, but thinking does not excuse you. You ought to know.

Now far be it from us to awaken one suspicion against your daughter. We wish you to have unbounded confidence in her. But we do mean to insinuate just as forcibly as we can that it is your duty to know every evening your daughter is out just where she is and what she is doing.—To do this you need not employ spies; you need not shadow her evening after evening. Do your work in a straight forward open way. Talk with her freely before she goes and after she returns. Be frank with her and she will be frank with you. If you pursue this course she will not object to telling you all she does. In this way she will be led to feel that she is not at liberty to keep company with any one without consulting her mother. If you manifest the proper interest in her affairs and exercise the proper care over her always, she will have no desire to conceal any of these things from you. You will thus keep your daughter out of the temptations which result from clandestine friendships. You will teach her carefulness in all her conduct. But if you let her run off to your neighbors without your knowledge, if you seem not to care where she is not with whom she is associated, whether she walks the streets or stays in the house, your carelessness will beget a careless spirit in her, and she will conclude that it makes no great difference whether she is careful of her conduct or not. The result will be that she will shame you in the eyes of the world, by her follies, or worse still, pierce you heart through with many sorrows.

We wish to impress another truth upon your minds mothers. It may not always be convenient for you to receive your daughter's friends into your homes. It may put you out greatly at times. But do not on this account send her to mingle with them elsewhere. Better for her and for you that you suffer the inconvenience than that they should have to feel that they are driven from home. There is no place so sacred to your daughter as her home. It is so sacred to her that it will hallow all the friendships begun and continued within its sacred precincts. Never forget this, and never if you can help it, drive her from under the roof of her mother to meet any of her friends.—Social Reformer

Every sidewalk required to be constructed by ordinance or resolution of the Common Council of said village, along the side of any of the streets of said village shall be laid, constructed and completed within two feet of the line of the street designated in such ordinance or resolution requiring the construction thereof.

Wallace E. Gray having made a proposition to sell his velocipede to the village, which is accepted by Council, the Recorder is instructed to draw an order on the treasurer for $5 in payment of the same.

S. S. Scovill, in behalf of the M. & O. Railway Co., comes before Council and states that said railway has completed the grading of Cummins street as agreed to and wishes that this Council would accept the same as such, as convenient.

Mr. Heesen, as chairman of the committee on streets, states to Council what had been done in the way of opening and grading Cummins street by said Railway Co., and it appearing that said street is not opened and graded from the Adrian road eastward to Division street, the Council informs Mr. Scovill that when Cummins street is opened and graded by said Railway Co., suitable for travel as a wagon road from Adrian road eastward to Division street and the same dedicated as a public street then the Council is prepared to accept the same and make payment according to agreement.

James Glasgow comes before the Council and complains of a nuisance. On motion this matter is referred to Messrs. Brezee and Heesen as a special committee to investigate, and if necessary remove the same.

The Recorder is instructed to prepare and present at next session of Council an amendment to the ordinance which regulates the furnishing of water from the mains to private persons.

Council then adjourned.

P. S. McKINNON, Recorder.

It has always seemed strange to us why people should be so careful in regard to farming and merchandising and yet so careless in regard to that upon which the success of life depends. Why should people plant their fields with care and look carefully about the investment of their money, and yet marry with perfect recklessness? If reason should govern in business, how much more in the step upon which life-long happiness depends!

AT THE GATE.

"And where were you last night, Mabel,
Where have you been so long?
The moon's up and all the birds
Have sung their evening song.
I saw you loitering down the path,
So lonely and so late;
Beyond the wood what did you hear
And tarrying at the gate."

"I love to hear the birds, mother,
And see the young moon;
And oh, the summer air is sweet
Beneath the skies of June;
My cows is milked, my hens are cooped,
And washed are cup and plate,
So I just wandered out awhile
To hang upon the gate."

"The gate is by the road, Mabel,
And all that has go by,
Not sound a maiden brook the glance
Of every stranger eye;
Besides, I thought I saw a cap—
I'm sure you had a mate,
So tell me who was with you, my child,
Was hanging at the gate."

"Now, you know just as well, mother,
He spoke such words to me to-night,
I knew not what to say;
And, mother, oh, for your dear sake,
I only made him wait—
And might I run and tell him now?
He's hanging at the gate."

THE CIRCLE OF DEATH.

Take your stand here on this hill and you can look down upon a spectacle as exciting as anything offered in the days of blood-thirsty Roman sports. Stretching away to the west is dip and hollow and broken ground for a mile. Then comes the grand prairie, sweeping clear to the north fork of the Republican before it surrenders to the hills.

Did ever human King have a grander throne? He stands on a knoll covered with rich, sweet grass, and even with the naked eye you can see the violets and blue-bells and forget-me-nots peeping between the blades. It is a throne of wild flowers.

Ten miles away are a dozen moving black specks. They are buffaloes. Nothing else with life in it is nearer. The King's domains are rich in food and drink, and the herd lies down upon peace and harmony.

He stands with head elevated, and as he slowly turns in his tracks he sniffs the air for scent of danger. Who is our King? A buffalo bull. Nature's monarch of Nature's grand pasturage.

How came he here, alone and deprived of companionship? Men become cynics and world-haters and shake off all attempts at friendliness. So with animals. This monarch is here to pout and sulk and feel aggrieved and plan for revenge.

Ah! High above him, with every foot of ground under your eyes, you could see no danger. His keen scent warned him of peril, and a wolf breaks cover not one hundred feet away. He seemed to rise from the very earth—not with a bound and a yell, but with a quiet coolness that belies evil.

The bull lowers his head, and his eyes flash at the sight of the enemy who has come to disturb his reveries. Compare their size and strength, and you laugh at the idea of a wolf bringing harm to a buffalo. One blow from a hoof—one toss from the horns—and the wolf would lie crushed and dead.

Pooh! 'Tis an enemy not worth a second glance! The wolf may look with longing eyes, and lick his chops for taste of blood, but he is wasting time. In that grove to the left a party of Indians camped last night. He had been shamble across the broken ground and hunt for bones and scraps.

What! another! As the quiet rises from cover, so that second wolf suddenly shows himself above the grass. You can not say that the beasts even suspect each other's presence. They are fifty feet apart, and both sit and stare straight at the monarch of the plains. The bull gives his head a toss as he sights the second arrival. Wolves hunt in pairs. Here is the pair. Nothing strange in that.

Yes, rub your eyes to see if they are clear, and you will find they haven't deceived you. Up pops a third, fourth, fifth and sixth wolfish head, followed by a body which is ever gaunt and lean—ever the synonym of hunger. One wolf created nothing beyond momentary surprise; the pair bred a feeling of contempt; the six of them may bring peril.

And so the monarch evidently reasons. He paws the ground, shakes his head, and that low bellow expresses anxiety as well as defiance. He could wheel and rush away, and in an hour he could be feeding with the herd. But there are pride and obstinacy and jealousy to be consulted. No deputation has come from the herd to coax and reason with him, and he will do battle for his life rather than give in. It is both man-like and brute-like.

What! Have the six multiplied so fast? Just a moment ago we saw only the half dozen; now there are ten—twelve—sixteen—they are rising from the earth all around him! The bull turns as if on a pivot. Wolves to the north—the east—the south—the west. The circle is complete. Watch him!

When a man must die in the presence of his enemies let him die like a warrior. The monarch knows what this gathering means. He sees the lolling tongues, and he hears the gnashing of teeth. There is no help for him. He must die like a craven or prove his courage.

See the head go up! Hear the roar of defiance! Is there anything craven in that attitude?

The wolves have been sitting as quiet as so many blocks of stone placed on the grass. That roar of defiance puts life into them, and they move nearer.

Curious pantomime! A grand old buffalo turning slowly 'round and 'round in his tracks to eye each separate wolf and watch every motion. A score and a half of calm, grim, waiting beasts—every eye fixed upon a common center—every fang sharpened for a feast.

Swish—swirl—rush!

The circle closes in at the signal, and for fifteen seconds the eye is confused. It appears as if some one hidden in the grass was tossing and waving strips of gray and white cloth. The roars of the bull are almost drowned in the yelps and growls and howls of the assailants.

Good! There is game there! The monarch has used his horns and hoofs to such good purpose that the circle has opened away from him. Legs and flanks and shoulders have been bitten, and teeth have drawn blood where a bullet would hardly penetrate, but he is not disarmed. Under his feet are two dead wolves, two more limp around outside the circle.

Um-mm-m! Paw! Toss! Come again if you dare!

There is the rush, the swirl, the strange spectacle of gray-white bundles jumping over each other, and the circle falls back again to breathe.

Ho, ho! There are long tufts of hair on the grass, more dead wolves, spots of blood! The bull shakes his head and seems weak on his legs. A spy-glass would show you blood trickling down from a score of savage bites, while he barely touches the grass with one hind foot. There is a low bellow, and something in it smacks of fear. Bah! If you must die why not prove——

That's good! That is a roar of defiance, grandly loud and deep, and the monarch gathers himself and makes a rush. He has turned assailant. With lowered head and blazing eyes he rushes as one spot in the circle, and a gray-white body rises high in the air to come down without life.

There is such a circling and swirling now that you can see nothing but the mass—now and then breaking away for a second, to reveal the bull fighting for his life.

It is over! He is down, and his blood is smearing the grim jaws of the wolves as they tear at the hot flesh. Ah, well! but there was game and nerve and true grit, and his bones deserve burial at the hands of men.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bogus Butter.

It was only in last July that the bureau of statistics began to publish the figures showing the exports of oleomargarine. The latest revised statement gives the movement of "imitation butter" and "oil" for the month of October and for the ten months ended October 31 in each of the years 1882 and 1883. This statement indicates that the trade in oleomargarine, butterine and the like is growing rapidly, and has already [illegible]

It may be that our friends abroad are not aware that they are building up our oleo manufacturing interests, but if they buy the patent product believing that it is dairy butter, they probably find that it smells and tastes just as sweet as it would under any other name, especially its own.

In October there were 222,741 pounds of so-called "imitation butter" and 3,908,054 pounds of oil exported, a total of 4,130,795 pounds, valued at $416,655. The exports of butter for the same month amounted to only 2,367,733 pounds, valued at $572,446, so that the bogus-butter manufacturers are getting a pretty large share of the foreign trade whatever they may be doing for the domestic market.

For the ten months ended October 31 the exports of imitation butter amounted to 1,698,712 pounds, valued at $198,920, and of oil to 31,601,926 pounds, valued at $4,104,105, making a total of over 33,000,000 pounds, valued at $4,300,000. The total exports of butter for the same time were only 18,884,346 pounds, having a value of $3,114,299, being over 10 per cent. less in quantity and 20 per cent. less in value than the exports of oleomargarine.

The cause for the great excess in shipments of the imitation article will probably be found in its relative cheapness, the average price of the artificial butter exported during the ten months having been 11½ cents and of the oil a little less than 13 cents a pound, while genuine butter averaged over 18 cents per pound. [illegible] reaching the other side the manufactured product can be sold as real butter, a considerable margin of profit is allowed the dealer. The fact that nearly twenty times as much oil as imitation butter is sold for export also indicates that the business of manufacturing the stuff is becoming an established industry abroad.—*N. Y. A Dangerous Quarter of London.

On the third of last month, at about six o'clock, as I was returning home from my office at Whitehall, and had just passed a small alley in High street, St. Giles', half-way between St. Giles' Church and Tottenham Court Road, a fellow, coming toward me, snatched my watch-chain (an Albert) and ran down the alley. I instantly turned round, and followed him down the alley, calling out 'Stop thief.' Two young fellows were coming down the alley toward the thief and myself, and might have stopped him at once, but they made room for him to pass, and then spread themselves out, arm in arm, to hinder me, but did not attempt any violence. I upset one of them and got past, but it gave the thief time to increase his lead, and, after keeping him in sight for two or three turnings, I finally lost him in the maze of small alleys behind St. Giles' Church. I found a policeman, after some trouble, near the Seven Dials, and then gave information at Bow Street Station. Of course, I have not heard anything of my chain. There is a comic side to almost all misfortunes. I have said that I only lost my chain, but I was so firmly convinced that my watch was gone, also, that I did not investigate the contents of my watch-pocket after the affair, but racked my brains to give an accurate description at the police station of the old-fashioned gold watch which I thought I had lost forever. My joy may be imagined when, on nearing home, from pure habit I put my hand to my watch-pocket to ascertain how near it was to dinner time, and found there, safe and sound, my dear old friend and companion. The tug had been so violent that the ring attaching the chain to the watch had given way, leaving the watch behind. The moral of all this is, not to walk about London with your coat not buttoned up.—Cor. London Times.

Hunting the Whippoorwill.

One of the pleasantest facts about the study of bird life is that there is almost never a time when something of interest is not going on. If it rains so violently that one does not care to venture out of doors, he may yet look from his window and see the birds busy in the trees or upon the grass. Even at night I have gone out to discover what it was that set the black-billed cuckoo a-complaining to the darkness, and caused the homely hair-bird or chipping sparrow to utter his plain, yet musical, trill under the silent stars. On the sides of the mountains hereabouts, on warm, moonlight summer nights, one who will take the trouble to tramp through some very uncomfortable territory, encumbered by rocks and overgrown with young but vigorous bushes, may find himself in the midst of a very lively community. Here those weird and ghostly birds, the whippoorwills, swarm in great numbers, hugging all day the leaf-strewn ground, which their plumage so closely imitates that they seem a part of the earth itself, and at night waking into a nervous activity for which their sluggish apathy during the hours of sunshine hardly prepares the mind of the student of their habits. In shooting by day over the mountains, I have often come upon the drowsy congregations of these night birds, almost stepping upon them before they would fly, and then seeing them rise at my feet and flutter away as noiselessly as owls, or as if they were dry leaves urged onward by the wind.

But for the silence of their flight they might be mistaken for woodcocks, and are quite as fleet; yet they are reluctant to fly far, and soon alight upon some branch, which they always strike upon at right angles, like other birds, but immediately turn and rest upon it lengthwise. This peculiarity they share with their cousins, the night-hawks. The two varieties are often considered identical by rustic observers hereabouts, although differing from each other in appearance and habits, the cause of their manner of resting on tree branches evidently being the weakness of their feet, which are almost rudimentary, and an inheritance from many generations of earth-squatting ancestors. The proper place of the whippoorwill and the night-hawk is upon the ground, a rock, or some other broad, flat surface. They are not fond of trees, and seldom rest in them, and when they do so, they are partly dependent for support upon the resting of their breasts upon the branch. A whippoorwill's eye is quite expressionless. It shows no noticeable distinction between pupil and iris, and, like that of all purely nocturnal birds, it is constructed for the admission of all the light that can possibly be obtained.

There is something very impressive in this stolid and unvarying stare of the night birds. I have seen nearly every emotion in the eyes of my feathered friends of the day, but those of the night invariably hold a mask before any feelings they may experience. But to return to the whippoorwills. At night the dusky thickets in which they swarm become singularly animated. The strange song resounds on every side, and those who have heard it only at a distance can have no idea of the tremendous volume of it when it is uttered close at hand. It seems impossible that one bird could make such a racket, and when twenty are at it at once the resultant uproar strangely affects the nerves with its eerie and almost diabolical quality. During the utterance of the song the birds are at rest, either upon some rock or low bush, and at its conclusion they dart rapidly about, seizing upon the insects, chiefly the night-flying coleopteræ and lepidopteræ, which form their food.

They are astonishingly swift in their movements, and their flight, half seen in the moonlight as it sifts through the trees, is exceedingly graceful, picturesqueness being lent to it by rapid openings and shuttings of the fan-like tails, the broad white patches on each side of which become at such times very conspicuous objects. I have sometimes shot these birds simply upon the disclosure of their whereabouts that was made by this quick display of white feathers, but should not like to mention the quantity of ammunition that was wasted before this result was accomplished. The night-hawk is not so purely a nocturnal bird as the whippoorwill, although all night long may be heard above the town his monotonous squeak and the dull sound of his swoop as he falls through the air to capture an insect far below him. It is like the noise produced by blowing into the bunghole of a barrel. On cloudy days, however, he hawks about from sunrise until dark, and it has been my observation that when he does so he rests during the night.

Occasionally the night-hawk comes out in broad sunlight, and thus further confuses the searcher into his habits. I remember on one occasion, when hunting in the meadows late in the summer with a friend, seeing a cloud of these birds rise from the side of Mount Holyoke, as if at a prearranged signal, and cross the river toward us. We had never seen night-hawks in flock before, and stood and watched them with great interest. There must have been a couple of thousand in the company, and on reaching the meadows they spread out and quartered over the ground at a height of about ten feet, catching up the insects that rose from the clover. The van was led by the older birds, as we discovered by observing on their tails the white band which marks the adult of the species, and the younger members, which were evidently birds of the year, came behind. They manifested complete indifference to our presence, and we, perceiving an unexampled opportunity to secure some fine specimens of this not very easily-obtained variety for our cabinets, began picking off the best of them. We shot none except those in whose tails we could see the white band, yet we secured more than twenty before the van of the flock passed by and the immature members came up, and as they were passing very rapidly, this fact may indicate the size of the swarm. Such an incident I am inclined to regard as unusual. I had before, and have since, observed a dozen or twenty birds quartering about the meadows at the same time, but neither my experience nor that of other collectors in the town includes any other such large flock as that mentioned above.—*Northampton (Mass.) How the Chinese Marry.

On the wedding day the guests assemble at the bridegroom's house. Then a procession is formed, consisting of friends, bands of music, and sedan chairs decorated in red and gold, with bearers in red coats and dressed in a sort of livery, sometimes wearing red caps. The procession starts from the house with a courier at the head. He bears a large piece of pork on a tray, to keep off malicious demons who may be lurking on the street corners and in the alleys. These demons are supposed to tackle the pork and while they are thus busied the procession passes on without being affected by their evil influence. All this time the bride is in her own house, arraying herself in her best dress and richest jewels. Her hair is bound up and arranged in due form and style by a skilled matron. After this her headdress is donned. It usually consists of some rich material sprinkled with ornaments. A large mantle is then thrown over her. It completely covers her. Last of all an enormous hat, as large as an umbrella, is placed on her head. It comes down to her shoulders, completely hiding her face. Thus rigged, she takes her seat in the red gilt marriage chair, called kwa kiau. When concealed in this chair she is carried to her husband by four men.

When the bride is seated in the chair her mother or some other relative locks the door and the key is given to the best man. I suppose he turns it over to the bridegroom on reaching his house. The procession returns with more care and more style. I saw one during a ramble in a Chinese town. As the bride was born past us we gave her three cheers. I dare say that all her children will be either knock-kneed or bow-legged, because of the cheer of the barbarians. Good luck to the poor bottled-up one. She had the best wishes of all our party, as we followed the procession for some squares, to the great astonishment of all the Chinamen on the street.

As the procession approached the bridegroom's door a band stationed there struck up a tune and firecrackers were let off by the box until the bride was carried within the gate. The go-between then got the key from the bridegroom and opened the door of the sedan-chair. As the bride alighted she was saluted by a small child at the side of the old man. The groom was closeted within the house, and she went in to seek him. She still wore the enormous hat and mantle. When she found the groom he greeted her with great gravity. They both approached the ancestral tablet and bowed their heads three times. They next took seats at a small table bearing two goblets, tied together with thread and containing wine. The go-between severed the thread, but the bride failed to quench her thirst owing to the enormous hat and mantle.

The two were now man and wife. The husband took the hat and mantle from the bride, and for the first time in his life had a look at her. After he had looked at her for some minutes he called in his friends and guests. They scrutinized her and made no bones of expressing their opinions concerning her charms. The females gave their tongues full scope, and had no mercy upon the poor bride. She took it all without making any disagreeable answer, for fear the match would be considered an unlucky one. These cruel criticisms ended, she was introduced to her husband's parents, after which she saluted her own father and mother. The wedding feast was then served, the sexes eating in different apartments. The males were served by the bridegroom and his male relatives, and the females by the bride and her mother-in-law, assisted by servants. The two sexes rarely sit down at the same table.

Marriage [illegible] among the Chinese [illegible] some a less age [illegible] down to some man. [illegible] a wife, [illegible] is [illegible] as he can support, their children being legitimate, but coming after the children of the wife. If the concubines live under the same roof they are mere servants of the wife. Some rich married men keep concubines in separate apartments. Such positions are eagerly sought by damsels of very fair parentage.

Women in the Water.

Fragile woman, so often considered as a mere plaything for a man, has more than once both astonished man and humiliated him by her exploits of endurance in the water. It is the fact, however, that woman can float more easily in the water than a man, because she has the advantage over him in having smaller bones in proportion to her total weight than a man has, and has also a larger proportionate amount in her body of adipose matter, which is lighter in water, than man has. But nevertheless, for a fragile vessel she has performed feats on the frisky wave more marvelous even than those accomplished by her male rival, and has done them far more gracefully, for it is an undeniable fact that though women can not walk as gracefully as men, she excels him in her grace of movement in the water, and becomes in its embrace as fair a nymph indeed as ever floated in the mystic waters of Greek mythology.

A Brooklyn maiden lady, whose antipathy to the sterner sex has never acknowledged the soothing influence of the hand of time, aroused the curiosity of her fellow boarders at a farm-house last summer by uniformly declining to eat chicken. One of them ventured to ask an explanation of the singular fact, and received the following answer: "Because I understand that the farmer who supplies our table keeps his hens for the sake of the eggs, and kills only the roosters."—Brooklyn Eagle.

"Hans, why don't you get married? You are too particular. Just go out, shut your eyes, and put your hands on the first girl you meet, and marry her." "Mein Gott, vot you dakes me for? If I shoots mine eyes dot way, I vould shoot as like as not fall ofer some tam ash-can fill in de shtreet, und den somepody vould cry owid I vas drunk! Well, I don't vant to marry some boliceman's mine frent."—The Judge.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 26, 1882.

"Gentlemen—My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases. The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

HAZLETON, PA., Oct. 24, 1882.

I sold two James Boss' Gold Watch Cases thirty years ago, when they first came out, and they are in good condition yet. One of them is carried by a carpenter, Mr. L. W. Drake, of Hazleton, and only shows the wear in one or two places; the other by Mr. Bowman, of Cunningham, Pa.; and I can produce one or both of these cases at any time.

I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,

A Fabulous Relic of De Soto.

The Tallahassee (Fla.) Floridian says: A few years ago, about two miles east of Tallahassee, was found a ponderous spur, of unique and curious workmanship, the like of which has not been seen in modern times. The burr was one and a half inches in diameter, and the bar proportionately heavy. On either side of the rowel dangled small pendant bells, that gave forth a tinkling sound in response to each step of the wearer—doubtless some steel-clad and bonneted warrior of the long ago. Not many days since, while parties were plowing near the identical spot, a solid and shapeless mass was turned up, which, upon close examination, proved to be an iron stirrup of ancient pattern; as heavy and as massive as the spur spoken of first, and firmly imbedded in a thick coating of clay and rust. When this was removed, the stirrup was found to be in a remarkable good state of preservation. The sides represent two Ethiopian figures standing upon the foot-rest, leaning forward facing each other, while they support with outstretched arms what forms the top of the stirrup, or that part connected with the leather. So unlike are both these relics to anything known to the generations of this day and time, and both being found so near the same place, it is not unreasonable to ascribe them to the same era and individual. Nor is the supposition at all improbable that one of the knightly followers of De Soto, lured on through into the unknown region and wilderness, like that dauntless son of Spain, by a thirst for the yellow heaps or gleaming gold that loomed up ahead of them in vain visions and heated fancies, here fell a victim to the tomahawk and scalping knife of the wronged and revengeful red; and no doubt, some one of the "Tallahassee Tribe," of which "Tiger Tail" claimed to be a descendant, boasted, as he displayed at his belt a yet bloody scalp, that he had "killed a pale-face."

Japanese Life.

The Japanese is the cleanest of mankind. Cleanliness is, so to speak, more than godliness with him. Though he has no soap, he washes all over at least once a day—he worships but once a week. His candles are made of vegetable wax. He uses a cotton coverlet, well stuffed and padded, for bed covering and mattress. A sort of stereoscope case—made of wood—makes his pillow. He resorts to that, and so does his wife and daughters, that their carefully arranged hair may not be disturbed during sleep. No head-covering is used by the Japanese. No nation dresses the hair so tastefully. Usually it is with the men shaved in sections. They are coming now to wear it in European fashion. They are adopting all European customs.

On levee day I saw the reception at the Mikado's palace in Yeddo. Every one presented had to come in full dress. That dress does not become the Japanese figure. He looks awkward in it. His legs are too short. The tails of his claw-hammer coat drag on the ground, and the black dress trousers wrinkle up and get bagey around their feet. His European-fashioned clothes have been sent out ready-made from America or England, and in no case did I notice anything approaching to a good fit. Yet he smiled and looked very happy, though he could not get his heels half way down his Wellington boots, and his hat was either too large or too small for his head. He always smiles and looks pleasant. Nothing can make him grumble, and he has not learned to swear. He is satisfied to be paid his due, and never asks for more. As a New York cabman he would be a veritable living curiosity.

Beauty.

Young man, don't marry a girl because she is pretty. Will beauty satisfy you through the life-long journey, to the exclusion of those moral qualities, mind and heart? Will Beauty alone cook your dinner, train your children and prove a true advisor in the hours of weary toil and trial which fall to the lot of every man on earth? The poet has said:

"Beauty is a doubtful good, a gloss, a flower,
Soon ruffled, broken, dead within an hour."

Would you not yourself to that which time will surely snatch from you, leaving the dull eye, withered cheek and vacant mind, compared with the character and capabilities of a sister? See to it that she possesses a mind capable of grasping the ordinary questions of the day; and that a portion of her time is spent in reading something besides fashion notes and novels. And above all, be assured that she is well versed in those virtues without which, home is wretched. Sweetness of temper is not incompatible with firmness or moral courage, and a woman possessing these attributes will not belong to the rapid, "wishy-washy" sort; but on the contrary, the class who develop into noble wives and mothers, faithful in friendship, and devout Christians, capable of exerting both at home and in society, the best of an influence for the right and for virtue.

If to these high and independent qualities is added beauty, then your choice is indeed blessed of God. Take such a one to your heart, and while loving and cherishing, fail not to prove yourself worthy to be the possessor of such a priceless gem.

I remarked to an old farmer friend in the country, whom I had not seen for several years, and whose farm, in the meantime, had improved wonderfully, that his place was so changed I hardly knew it. "Yes," said he, "I've been fixin' up a little. The old woman pestered me to death about the garden, and so I slicked it up a little, and fixed about the house, and it looked so nice I went at the farm fences and the brush, and saved more manure, and kept killing the weeds, and the crops got better, and so I kept going on, and things do look pretty good now. Wife takes a paper, and I take one, and I get time to read it too, and I used to think that I hadn't time for anything." And so he ran on, seemingly much pleased with what he had done, and his life and his home without doubt the happier for it. Examples of a like kind may be found all over the country.

HOW OUR FORESTS DISAPPEAR.—The manufacture and shipment of timber is the leading industry in Washington Territory, employing a great many workmen, and an immense number of large saw mills, operated by steam and water power. A large fleet of ships and some small exporting steamers convey the timber to San Francisco, East Indies, Europe, Australia, South America, Egypt, Japan, and China. The timber shipped from one district in western Washington Territory in 1876, by vessels, without reckoning the home consumption, equalled 40,000 railway carloads, or 2,000 railway trains of twenty cars each, and in 1878 amounted to 250,000,000 feet. Timbered lands well situated for logging purposes sell at from eight to twelve dollars per acre. Three miles from a river timber lands can be had from two to three dollars per acre.

How they Meet and Part.

A gentleman lately took down verbatim the conversation of two fashionable ladies during a morning call—viz: "How do you do, dear?" "Pretty well, thank you." (They kiss.) "How have you been this age?" "Pretty well. How have you been?" "Very well, thank you." "Pleasant to-day." "Yes, very bright, but had a shower yesterday." "All your family quite well?" "Quite well, thanks. How is yours?" "Oh, very well, thank you." "Have you seen Mary B. lately?" "No, but I have seen Susan C." "You don't say so! Is she quite well?" "Yes, very well, I believe." (Rising.) "Must you go?" "Yes, indeed; I have seven calls to make." "Do call again soon." "Thank you; but you don't come near me oftener than once in an age." "Oh, you shouldn't say so, dear; I'm sure I'm very good." "Good bye." "Good bye, dear."—Exchange.

"Gale Forest" gives the following pat reply to the above:

"Yes; and after writing that the gentleman discovered the steam upon his mental faculties had been so severe, he went out to "brace-up." Just as he reached his destination, met a friend from out of town, when the following conversation was overheard and taken down by the writer, as an example for women, of men's "wit and wisdom." "Hello! old fellow, how are you?" (They shake.) "First rate, how are you?" "Tip-top!" "When dy'e get in?" "Just now." "Have something?" (significantly.) "Well—yes, don't care-if do." (They step into a saloon, after cautiously looking around to make sure no outsiders are about to see they are breaking their pledge—curse—they emerge, innocently wiping their mouths, before putting into them their lighted cigars, and being "primed," resume.) "How's yer folks?" "All well; how's yours?" "All flourishing now; youngest boy had diphtheria, but all right now." "Crops good all your way?" "Well, yes, pretty fair." "How do politics look?" "Bad—very bad—all democrats up our way; big democratic majority. (Takes out his watch.) Thunder! ten minutes to 12.—must be off—got to see a man at 12." "Can't you come up to the house and take dinner?" "No, guess not to-day—got several pressing business engagements. Good-bye." "Good-bye." They again wring hands, and then rush away from each other as if fearing they might have to stand another treat.

The Art of Advertising.

The time has come when a knowledge of this art is an essential part of the education of every business man. To be successful in business they should understand how to advertise. It is only necessary, in order to illustrate the truth of this statement, to call attention to the most successful merchants and manufacturers of any large city or small village, in the United States. They know just what to say to the public, when to say it, how to say it, and the medium to employ in saying it. They have made the same careful study of this as of any other branch of their business. They don't insert a single beggarly little "ad" in an obscure corner of some paper, out of favor to the publisher, to support a party organ, and then endeavor to make the proprietor of the paper sensible of the value of their patronage, by growling when asked to pay for the advertisement, and vowing that it never did them any good, but was just put in out of charity. They are not content with an old stale advertisement that repeats the same old story at all seasons of the year, offering the same bargains, and the same full supply of goods "just received" at all times of the year—when their stocks have run so low that they are scarcely able to fill the orders of a single customer, as when their houses are filled with the most seasonable and attractive commodities. They never allow the public to remain in ignorance of the fact that they have a good thing to sell. They know how to make their constant appeals in a manner that will prove attractive. They are always devising new and striking methods for presenting their wares to the public notice, by the use of printer's ink. They are always careful to advertise what they have—not what they had last winter, nor what some one else has now. They advertise honestly as well as liberally, and their customers learn to believe the promises publicly made through the newspapers. Their advertisements are studied with interest by every one who expects to become a purchaser. It is as important that a man about to engage in mercantile pursuits should know how to advertise, as to know how to buy judiciously, or to sell at a living profit.

What Has It Done for You?

The sceptical Mr. Bradlaugh was once lecturing in a village in the north of England, and at the close challenged discussion. Who should accept the challange but an old bent woman, in the most antiquated attire, who went up to the lecturer and said: "Sir, I have a question to put to you." "Well, my good woman, what is it?" "Ten years ago," she said, "I was left a widow, with eight children unprovided for, and nothing to call my own but this Bible. By its direction, and looking up to God for strength, I have been enabled to feed myself and family. I am now tottering to the grave; but I am perfectly happy, because I look forward to a life of immortality with Jesus in heaven. That's what my religion has done for me. What has your way of thinking done for you?" "Well, my good lady," rejoined the lecturer, "I don't want to disturb your comfort; but"—"Oh! that's not the question," interposed the woman; "keep to the point, sir. What has your way of thinking done for you?" The infidel endeavored to shirk the matter again, the feeling of the meeting gave vent in uproarious applause, and Mr. Bradlaugh had to go away discomfitted by an old woman.—The Lutheran.

Poison Ivy.

The poison ivy is very poisonous to some persons; they are poisoned by not touching it at all, or even, it is said, passing near it, while others may handle it without being afflicted by the contact in the least. The poisonous property of the plant is owing to a volatile acid; its effect is an acute inflammation of the skin, often accompanied by a great swelling. The effects remain sometimes for months before the poison is completely removed from the system. The usual remedies are cooling purgatives and an external application of lead water. An application of a solution of hops has been known to prove an effectual remedy when all other remedies failed. The plant has sometimes been mistaken for Virginia creeper, to which it bears no slight resemblance. The distinguishing feature is that the poison ivy has three leaflets, whereas the Virginia creeper's leaves have five leaflets. Persons have been poisoned by mistaking the poisonous for the harmless species. This plant is of the genus rhus or sumac. There is also an upright plant that is poisonous.

To cure an ordinary cough or cold take one dose of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry before going to bed at night. It will cause a suspension of nervous excitability, allow you sweet repose; and by morning the cough will be none. It is the best and therefore cheapest cure for coughs, colds and consumption; is sold by druggists generally, and ought to be found in every intelligent household.

Pedigree of Maud S.

The remarkable trotting speed of a mile in 2:10¾, made by Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt's six-year old mare Maud S., at the Chicago Trotting Park, leads one naturally to look into the character of her ancestors, in order to account for her wonderful performance. Her sire was Harold (son of Eysdik's Hambletonian and Enchantress by Old Abdallah. Her dam was Hulda (sister to Patrol, sire of Pacing Pilot; her third dam was Maggie Russel, by Thornton's Rattler.) It will thus be seen that Maud S. is from fast stock and a good record might be expected of her. Her legs and feet are faultless in form, and apparently of quality that will stand up under any amount of use; and judging from her actions on the track, she is as faultless in disposition as in conformation. This simply shows that breeding will tell, and that there is a great deal in pedigree, if made with some definite end in view. Like produces like.

Quack doctors, electric belt and other swindlers who live by frightening our young men and young women by nasty circulars, will find their occupation gone which it becomes generally known that Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is a certain cure for all weakness of the urinary organs, nervousness, etc. Obey the laws of health, take a few bottles of this simple remedy and you will soon be restored to perfect manhood and womanhood, free from all worriment of mind and distress of body.

SWISS MOUNTAIN GIRLS.—In these beautiful health-giving mountains one would expect to find the most beautiful and healthy-looking of all girls. Where only pure air is to be breathed, inspiring scenes to be witnessed, women should be as fair as daughters of the gods. But not so. The women in Switzerland have a prematurely worn and aged look; if at twenty they were robust and possessed of that attraction which good health bestows—at thirty they are faded and seem to take pleasure only in going through their dull and never-ending round of duty. For they do the greater share of the work in the field and in the house, and in addition rear large families. In fact they make up in useful ness what they lack in beauty.

Remember a complete cure for aches and pains, sores, pimples, urinary sediments, disturbing dreams, nervousness, despondency, indigestion and general weakness of mind and body, brought on by improper habits or otherwise, is found in two or three bottles of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, as has been proven by the experience of many who long suffered, but now feel well and strong in all parts of the body.

The town of Duleigno lies on the Turkish side of the Adriatic sea, at a point opposite Rome and Naples, midway between each. It is called in that quarter of the earth Dool-cheen-yo. About 8,000 people live there, and are the effete descendants of the most formidable band of pirates that ever existed. It is a very old town. One hundred and sixty-seven years before Christ the city surrendered to the Romans, and received exemption from taxation, and its freedom. From 1500 to 1600 the pirates held full sway, and in 1718 a great battle was lost there by the [illegible]

THE PRESENT EPIDEMIC OF CRIME.

We would not be of those who live only in the past. We hear from many to say that "the former days were better than these." In fact we would join direct issue with those who contend that the world is growing worse and worse. But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that we are now passing through an awful period of crime and wrong doing. It is manifest to every candid observer that crime is on the increase in our country. Murder follows murder and robbery follows robbery with startling rapidity. How many times during the past year have we been called upon to read of wholesale murders, and of the murder of men and women one at a time, shot down in cold blood in their homes or on the streets. Burglaries have become every day affairs, and robberies have been committed with a boldness which has thrown into the shade the most daring deeds of the past. A feeling of insecurity pervades all our communities. The best citizens do not feel secure from the bullets and daggers of unseen assailants. Men and women are actually afraid to let it be known that they carry a few hundred dollars in their pockets.—Much less will they risk keeping a few hundreds in their houses over night for fear of robbery and perhaps murder before morning. Well may we ask, to what are we coming in this country?

We are certainly on the retrograde now. Yet we should not conclude that we are all going to destruction. We have only to remember that the path of this world's progress is not that of the straight line, but rather that of the spiral so that at times there is an actual retrograde. When the tide of the Atlantic is coming in the waters do not march up the shore with even tread, but wave follows wave. One wave will dash far up the shore; then the waters seem to recede, and some moments will elapse before another ripple will come near the highest pebbles wet by that wave.—One who had never stood there before might think that the tide was going out. But by and by another wave rolls in and dashes far up above the line of the preceding wave, then the most unsophisticated observer would understand that it is time to move out of the way of the advancing waters. So it is with moral and religious progress. At times the waters seem to be receding. But the tide is rising nevertheless. Crime seems to gain the ascendency for a time and the timid say, "The world is surely growing worse." But by and by the moral forces gather strength, the people awake to the danger and a wave of moral influence rolls up over the pebbles of sin far in advance of anything of the past.

But while we console ourselves with this thought we should realize that the present hour demands action if we are to check the backward flow of the waters of moral progress.

Many conjectures have been made as to the causes for the present reign of wrong doing in our country. Some lay it to our dime novels and Police Gazettes, and the like. Well, the influence of such literature is evil and only evil. We told that it would be a good thing if strong, sturdy citizens should band together in every city and village kindle a bonfire on some public square and take all the evil stuff from our news depots and periodical stores and burn it up, and see to it that henceforth the minds as well as the bodies of our children are fed only on wholesome food. We have wondered as we have looked into our periodical and news depots how conscientious men and women good citizens, can keep such literature on sale. It is thought also that the character of many of the entertainments billed for our theatres and opera houses have much to do with this matter. These, too, are pernicious. The bills posted so conspicuously are representations of crime in many instances, robbery, violence and even murder. Upon these the school children as well as those who are older, look as they pass along the streets. And many go to witness the plays. Such things are educators of the worst elements of human nature. Many of them ought to be suppressed by the strong hand of the law.

But neither these plays nor our pernicious literature will account for the rage of crime. The great crimes which are startling whole communities and entire states, yea the entire country, are not the deeds of madcap youths who have been feeding on blood-and-thunder stories, or looking on the tricks of Peck's Bad Boy. They are the work of old, hardened sinners, who evidently have had experience at the business. We submit that it has been the slip-shod way in which we have been dealing with crime for the past twenty years. Conviction for crime has been the exception. Criminals have been indicted on all sorts of grounds. A sickly sentimentality seems to have clogged all the channels of justice. And this reigns to-day. Juries are impannelled and sworn to listen to and weigh evidence. The wretch, whose hands are reeking with human gore, stands before them. The crime is a most atrocious, unprovoked murder. But the counsel for the defence sets up the "insanity plea." He pictures out the case eloquently before the jury. He dwells on the fact that the prisoner had no motive for committing the crime; that it was without premeditation and without provocation. Then he says: "Gentlemen of the jury, could a sane man do such a deed. He must have been insane; he was insane. He is not guilty of murder though he shed the blood. If you hang him you will hang an insane man. He did not realize at the time the criminal character of the act he was doing." Then he sheds a few tears, and the prisoner, tender-hearted fellow, he sheds a few tears, and the jurymen get out their handkerchiefs and wipe their weeping eyes. "Poor soul" they say one to another, "how tender-hearted he is. It is evident that he was insane; for how could a sane man with such a tender heart commit such a crime?" And they lay their heads together and say "Not guilty."

And this is a sample of the justice which our so-called courts of justice have been meting out for twenty years and over. It is a burlesque on justice. Away with it from the face of the earth!

And still we wonder that crime has become so common! Why we have been fostering crime by thus sparing our criminals, until we have in the bosom of our American society an element which is defying all law, creating a reign of terror.

But the foundation of the evil lies a little deeper than this. For years men have been preaching from so called christian pulpits a false liberalism. They have tried to throw discredit upon the teachings of God's word. They have compassed heaven and earth to explain away its penalties against sin. They have been constantly proclaiming to the sinner against moral rectitude, "Thou shall not surely die." The result is that sin is no longer sin. It has become popular to sympathize with criminals. Capital punishment has been denounced. In some states it has been abolished; in most others it has become a dead letter because of public sentiment against it. Other laws against crime have not been enforced. And so the criminal classes have had it all their own way.

Unless we put a stop to this thing there will be an end of law and order. Something must be done. The fact is that in human society there is always a criminal element which must be held in subjection by rigid laws, rigidly enforced. They must be governed through fear if at all. If the laws are not made a terror to them they revel in crime and become more and more daring. And unless regularly weeded out they increase with fearful rapidity. The public sentiment for twenty years has fostered this element until now they are sheathing their daggers in our bosoms. It is time to act. Sympathy is thrown away upon them. The only sympathy which can do them any good is that administered as decently as possible through a noose of hemp around their necks, with the other end made fast to a gallows. In other words we believe the hangman is the only remedy for our present monstrous state.—Monstrous evils require monstrous remedies.

We know that this sounds severe. But has not the time come for severity? Shall we sit longer idle, while red-handed murder stalks abroad? To be kind and forbearing with these butchers is to be unkind to the poor, innocent victims of their atrocities. In this case severity is the greatest kindness. In the name of our murdered fellow-citizens; in the name of the robbed and outraged of our land, in the name of our common humanity, yea in the name of God,—the God of justice and judgment—let us arise and not stay our hand until crime is made odious and red-handed murderers rid out of our land.

But as christian pulpits, so-called, inaugurated the evil, christian pulpits now ought not to remain silent. God's prophets of old denounced the sins and short-comings of the people.—God's prophets of to-day, in the persons of the Gospel Ministry, should not be silent. They have a work to do. They need to agitate this subject until public sentiment is rid of sickly sentimentality, until the people are ready to enforce our present laws and enact others for the more effectual maintenance of justice.—Social Reformer.

CHINESE MUST GO.

Stringent Measures Passed by the Columbian Parliament to Prevent Chinese Immigration.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 26.—Mr. Shakespeare, of British Columbia, will move for copies of all correspondence between the Columbian and Federal Governments relating to the immigration of Chinese into that province. The two bills recently passed by the Legislature of Columbia and which were reserved for the sanction of the Governor General have reached Ottawa. The first bill is called "The Chinese Regulation act of 1884." It imposes a tax of ten dollars on every native-born Chinaman above fourteen years, coming into the province and a yearly tax of ten dollars, so long as they remain in the country. Collectors are to be appointed and to receive a percentage on the moneys they collect. Any Chinaman found in the province without a license shall be fined a sum not exceeding forty dollars. Any collector or servant of the Government disobeying the provisions of the act is to forfeit $100. Every employer of Chinese laborers is to furnish a list of those in his employ to the collector when required. Failing to do this or making false returns he is liable to a penalty of $100 or two months' imprisonment. Every toll-gate keeper in the province is to demand the production of the license before allowing any Chinese to pass through the toll-gate. Any person employing Chinese who have not the necessary license shall pay a fine of fifty dollars. Chinese are to pay fifteen dollars per annum for a free miner's certificate instead of five dollars as provided for the white population. Chinese found mining without this certificate shall be fined thirty dollars. It shall be unlawful to exhume the dead body of any Chinaman, and any person found doing so shall pay a fine of $100. The use of opium is prohibited except for medical purposes, and any person using or having it in his possession contrary to law shall pay a fine of $100. Any debt may be sued for summarily before any Justice of the Peace, and failing immediate payment to receive three months' imprisonment. There are also strict regulations dealing with sanitary arrangements of Chinese dwellings.

A second bill passed by the Legislature is an act to prevent Chinese immigration, and makes it unlawful for any Chinese to come into the province. Any Chinese who shall come into British Columbia after the passage of the act shall pay a sum of fifty dollars, to be recovered summarily before a Justice of the Peace, and in default imprisonment for six months.

Death of Ex-Governor Price, of Virginia.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 26.—Ex-Governor Samuel Price, of Lewisburg, W. Va., died yesterday morning at his home after three days' illness of congestion of the brain. Before the rebellion he was an old line Whig, but since the war he has been a Democrat. He several times represented Virginia before the formation of West Virginia in the General Assembly of the old Commonwealth. He was Lieutenant Governor of Virginia during the Rebellion, was president of the Constitutional Convention of 1872, which framed the present Constitution of West Virginia, and was a member of the Constitutional Convention of Virginia which passed the ordinance of secession, but refused to vote for the ordinance or sign it when passed. He was a lawyer of much ability, and was appointed United States Senator by Governor Matthews to fill the unexpired portion of the term of United States Senator Allen T. Caperton, who died shortly after his election. Governor Price was in his eightieth year at the time of his death.

Two Men Fatally and Two Others Seriously Crushed at Powhattan.

BELLAIRE, O., Feb. 23.—Some men engaged in replacing buildings that had been swept from their foundations at Powhattan, in this county, met with a serious accident yesterday. The ropes parted when a large building was almost up, and the structure fell, crushing four men beneath it, only two of whom are supposed to be fatally hurt. Tell Can had half a dozen ribs on his right side broken loose from his backbone, and his body is so injured that he cannot recover. Thomas Hornbrook received a deep cut in the back of the head and neck, and is in a precarious condition. The others are not so badly hurt. James Bumgardner, of this city, also had his back broken while engaged in replacing his own house, but it is believed he will recover.

Striking Miners Remain Firm.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 26.—The end of the strike of the railroad miners in the Youghiogheny Valley seems to be as far off as ever. Yesterday, at a mass meeting held in Buena Vista, Alpeville, Shaner Station, Scott Haven, Yough Slope and the Southwestern mines were represented. An address was made by George Harris, President of the Amalgamated Association of Miners, and resolutions were adopted to continue the strike until the demands of the men were conceded. The men are apparently as firm as on the first day of the strike, though the struggle has now lasted eleven weeks. President Harris regards the outlook as hopeful.

A Large Wheat Shipment.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 26.—Three hundred and fifteen thousand bushels of No. 2 red wheat were withdrawn from the Union Depot Elevator yesterday afternoon, and will be shipped out as fast as cars can be obtained to move it. This will leave less than 600,000 bushels of No. 2 red wheat in this city.

Frozen to Death.

VALLEY CITY, D. T., Feb. 26.—The bodies of Fred Nilson and Thorwald Gunderson were found yesterday. They were en route to Clark City when both were overtaken by a blizzard and frozen to death. Both were men of wealth, and owned large claims near here.

A Minister and Daughter Drowned.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 26.—Rev. T. G. Thurston and daughter, aged sixteen, were drowned at Oxford Saturday. Thurston was a Presbyterian minister of Hickory, and was on his way to Taylorsville to preach Sunday.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 26.—The Knights of Proteus appeared in the grand procession last night, illustrating in gorgeous tableaux Virgil's Æneid. The streets were thronged with spectators.

A Crevasse on the Mississippi.

VICKSBURG, Feb. 26.—The crevasse below the Delta is 1,500 feet wide and five feet deep, and is steadily increasing.

Advocating Lynch Law.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 26.—The funeral at Avondale Town Hall at three o'clock yesterday afternoon of Beverly Taylor and Elizabeth Taylor, man and wife, and Eliza Jane Lambert, their grand daughter, lasted over two hours. Over a thousand people were present, one-fourth of whom were the best citizens of Avondale. Several clergymen spoke, all colored except Rev. Joseph Emory, city missionary. Emory spoke first, and said that these criminals, by law of God, deserved no mercy. Theirs was a crime which deserved summary punishment without resort to courts by the citizens taking the law into their own hands. These remarks were greeted with shouts, in which white and black joined.

Elder W. Scott was the next speaker, colored, and said the plea of insanity might be used for these criminals but he thought the best treatment for these men was for each one a stout rope and the nearest lamp-post. Then he went on, asking, Do they deserve mercy? Did they show any? Did they show mercy when they knocked out Elizabeth Taylor's brains? Did they show mercy when they beat down that helpless little girl, or when they knocked old Beverly Taylor in the head, pleading for mercy? To each of these questions the audience responded with a thunderous "No."

Resolutions were passed thanking the officers and denouncing the crime, and a resolution was read as follows:

"Resolved, That a searching and untiring investigation be continued, to develop, if there be any, complicity with the man who bought the bodies."

The bodies were viewed when the funeral services ended. They were taken to the colored people's cemetery west of the city and locked in a vault. Allen Ingalls and Ben Johnson, prisoners in the jail, contradict each other's stories. Johnson is sullen. Ingalls talks freely. Johnson has said Ingalls did the clubbing.

Lieutenant Harber at Home.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 25.—Lieutenant Giles B. Harber returned to his home in this city from New York City, after an absence of more than two years in Siberia under orders from the Navy Department, yesterday. He was met at the depot by a committee and from 2,000 to 3,000 citizens for his public reception, and was at once driven to the home of his parents in the suburbs of the city. Lieutenant Harber, of the United States Navy, who has just achieved a world-wide reputation for his daring trip into the heart of the Siberia wilds in the interests of science and humanity, was born in this city September 24, 1849, and is therefore in his thirty-fourth year. His parents, Joseph and Eliza Harber are well known to the old residents of the city. In the evening a public reception was tendered him in the Opera House.

The Validity of Slave Marriages.

TOLEDO, Feb. 25.—A peculiar case has been decided in the Common Pleas Court involving the validity of slave marriages. A colored man named Anderson married here in 1883, but was arrested for bigamy, it being charged that he was married while a slave to a slave woman in Belford County, Va., in 1861. The case hinged on the validity of a slave marriage. The judge instructed the jury that slaves, being property, could not make a legal contract, but that the courts have decided that a slave marriage became valid by cohabitation as man and wife after the emancipation proclamation went into effect in 1864. The case thus turned on the question of fact as to whether the pair had so cohabited or not, as shown by the evidence. The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty.

The Free Ship Question.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Shipping Committee yesterday morning took up the bill to admit foreign built ships to the American registry free of duty and voted three to six to report it adversely. Those voting in favor of the bill were Slocum, Throckmorton and Deuster; negative, Dingley, Long, Hunt, George, O'Neill and Lore. Dibble did not vote. Findley was absent. It was agreed that Dingley should prepare a report embodying the views of the majority, and Slocum one embodying the views of the minority. The report will go on the calendar for the consideration of the House.

A Jewelry Store in Troy Burglarized of $40,000.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Early yesterday morning burglars effected an entrance into E. Marks & Son's jewelry store, first gaining an entrance to the insurance office, next door. The safe door was forced from its hinges, and its contents taken, including diamonds, gold watches, cash, jewelry, etc., the estimated value of which is between $40,000 and $50,000. This is said to be the most expert job performed by burglars in this city in eighteen years. There are no clues.

A Bridge Goes Down.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 25.—The iron bridge over Beur Grass Creek, on the Cincinnati Short Line, in the eastern part of the city gave way yesterday, falling through just after a train of cars had passed over. The accident was caused by the giving away of the stone abutments, injured by the flood. The bridge was regarded as one of the best on the road, and was 150 feet long and sixty feet high. It is almost a total wreck.

BROADVIEW, N. W. T., Feb. 25.—Contrary to expectations, Yellow Calf, the rebellious Indian chief, gave himself up to the police yesterday afternoon, and together with four of his braves started for Regina in the evening, to be tried by the courts. Everything is quiet, and the trouble is probably over for the present.

The Washburn Will Case.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 25.—The District Court Saturday reversed Judge Welland's decision in the Washburn will case, which granted the widow one third of the property. This coincides with the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin on the same case, relative to Governor Washburn's property in that State.

A Dry Goods House Scorched.

R., known as the "Premium Mills power"; which mills (both grist and paper) were destroyed by fire a few years since. It is considered to be one of the best powers in the State, being supplied with a never failing body of water. There is connected with the power about four acres of land. Manchester is situated in one of the best wheat growing sections in Michigan thereby supplying material for either a grist or paper mill. Terms, easy. For particulars address

It is with pleasure that we note the starting of a new paper, the Union Light, at the City of Adrian. And we congratulate our brother editor and minister, Rev. J. L. Hudson, of Morenci, on the call to come up higher. The Union Light is to be the county organ of the Union party, recently launched at Jackson, and will undoubtedly prove an able exponent of the principles of constitutional prohibition. All hail the new movement.

AN OLD TECUMSEH BOY FOUND.

Having occasion to make a business trip to Toledo one day last week we took the afternoon train on the M. & O. arriving there at 3 o'clock. After transacting our business we made E. C. Smith a call at his office in the Produce Exchange building and found him as happy as usual raking in freight traffic for the Canada Southern. We then went out to hunt up J. A. H. Bell and soon found him in his new quarters on St. Clair street, below the Merchants' Hotel. He is now engaged in selling a patent washing machine, and has evidently struck a good thing. We found Jim head and ears in business, as he always is. In his office sat a stranger who quietly listened to the conversation a few moments and then suggested that we had met before. We scratched our head, thought of everybody we ever knew, and gave it up, and he then revealed his identity. His name was Charles Blanchard, son of the late Judge Blanchard of Tecumseh. Since leaving Tecumseh, about twenty years ago, he has travelled about the planet considerably, having been in all the Northern and Pacific states, and having spent about three years in Europe. He is now located in Cleveland and has an editorial position on the Marine Record. His business occasionally takes him to Toledo, and while there he spends his leisure time in looking up old Tecumseh acquaintances. The hour before train time was most pleasantly passed recalling to mind and rehearsing old school-day incidents in which we had both participated in days gone by. We got a promise from Blanchard before leaving to visit Tecumseh at an early day, and stop over Sunday.

Hudson Gazette: A. O. Abbott has invented, and Art Carter has manufactured, a daisy road cart, which promises to lead the world. The particular advantage of their cart is that it is free from the uncomfortable jerking peculiar to other carts, which is a very desirable improvement. Besides this the new vehicle has other superior merits, and if Mr. Abbott secures a patent for it, as he contemplates, it will supply a long felt want, and prove a bonanza to the inventor.

Last week Wednesday night a break occured in Wm. Hayden's Mill dam near the wastegate, which drained the pond. Repairs were began at once, and on Monday the mill was again running, and turned out 150 barrels of flour that day. On Tuesday morning the high water broke thro' the place which had been repaired and again drained the pond. The mill had just begun that morning the work on forty car loads of flour to be shipped to Sligo, Ireland, and the last break will delay the order somewhat. A large force of men is employed mending the breach, and by to-morrow the rollers and bolts of the old mill will be on duty again.

Jackson had a big blaze last Sunday. The Union hotel and block and a row of frame buildings adjoining the same on the east were entirely cleaned out, entailing a loss of over $200,000 and several lives. It is impossible to tell as yet the number of lives lost. Of the seven Polacks who are said to have been in a room in Craik's lodging house, not one has since been seen and it is believed that all perished. The fire department is greatly censured for their tardiness in getting to the scene of action, and the Patriot says that the Holly system, as operated in Jackson at least, is wholly inadequate to the demands of a great fire. Mr. Barnes, in whose store the fire is said to have started, denies the charge, and says that he is positive the fire in his stove was out before he closed. The total loss, as near as can be ascertained at present, is not far from a quarter of a million of dollars.

The roller skating mania continues unabated here.

Boos & Church's Jackson Orchestra furnished the music for the Clinton leap year party on Monday evening.

Joe Stitt, who owns a splendid farm east of Evans lake drops down to Tecumseh occasionally. He gave us a call yesterday.

The Right Reverend S. S. Harris, D.D., of Michigan, will officiate in St. Peter's church, Tecumseh, next Sunday morning.

The Ridgeway contested election case has been decided in favor of Jay Sunting, the present incumbent of the town clerk's office.

We are indebted to the Social Reformer for several interesting articles in this week's HERALD. They will be read with interest.

Our "Flashes over the C. T. line," are collected by W. B. Keyser and transmitted to Abner Wilson, who prepares the notes for the printer.

H. T. Dunn, of Tecumseh, and Bert Hause, of Sorrento, Fla., are building up quite an extensive trade in high bred Langshans and White Leghorns.

The owner of a small farm near Tecumseh wishes to rent it on shares for a term of years to a good farmer with small family. An excellent chance.—Enquire at the HERALD office.

S. Erskine of Clinton, has sold his hotel privilege to Henry Lancaster. Lancaster has an auction on his farm to-day, and will soon move to Clinton, and Erskine will move back to Tecumseh.

The young Peoples' Social Club of District No. 5, Clinton Township, will hold a "Jumbo" Pie social Friday evening, March 7th, at the residence of R. B. Gillespie. All are cordially invited to attend.

It is generally acknowledged at Blisfield that Seth Pease can tip over with a large load of hay, and come out with less hay seed in his hair, and more equanimity of temper, than any other man in town.

Abner Wilson has a hot bed already started, and is making twelve new sashes which will double the number of glasses he had last year.—He already has cabbage plants peeping out of the ground.

Adrian Record: A Tecumseh girl so mesmerized a young man recently, that she drew him three feet inside the church door, and compelled him to accompany her home. Tecumseh girls are powerful mesmerists.

A Deerfield man, the other day while on the train, saw a "sure opportunity" to win on three card monte, invested $10 and as usual lost. It is said that the loser then sailed in on his muscle and compelled the operators to refund.

Dell Wood, the foreman of Slayton & Kinney's cabinet shop, has accepted a position on the Atlantic and Great Western Railway. He will soon take up his residence at Kent, Ohio. We regret to have him leave town, but he evidently betters himself in business and this is his only reason for going.

The boy who spends his evenings reading newspapers, the local news of his own county, and the general news of the day, will certainly make a better man than the one who spends his evenings on the streets, or loafing at places where the town gossip is dished out in the most obscene and vulgar language.

We have received a specimen copy of A. M. Purdy's Seed, Plant and Tree Catalogue. It is a beauty. The colored plates of his new seedling Raspberry the Crimson Beauty and his "Latest of all" strawberry, the Jumbo, are very fine indeed and should be seen by every lover of fruits. The information given on growing strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, grapes, &c., is very valuable, while his prices for plants, trees, &c., are as low as any reliable grower or dealer. The Catalogue, or a specimen copy of his valuable monthly paper, the Fruit Recorder, can be seen at our office, or by dropping a postal card to A. M. Purdy, Palmyra, N. Y., a copy of either or both will be sent to you free.

The Methodist society here is experiencing a healthy growth which has been going on for several years. Some are being converted each year. Some are coming in and settling down in our pleasant village to spend their closing days. This year it has been hard to furnish all with sittings in our church. If we continue to grow we shall have to enlarge our house of worship in some way in order to accommodate our people. Although this year is one of the hardest financially which our people have had for some time, they are going forward with needed improvements. A debt of $300, of some three years standing has been taken in hand, new furnaces have been procured, changes have been or are to be made in some of the rooms below, a basement has been made for one furnace and for wood. The new improvements will cost when completed, about $400. Books costing $135 have been purchased for the Sunday school library. All these expenses and the debt will be fully met by April 1st., making a total of $835. This proves that the church in Tecumseh is not only alive but a power in the cause of Christ.

W. T. Eccles has a new brand of cigars called the "Whips-'em-all," a clear Havana, long filler, which retails for only five cents. We have sampled some of them and can pronounce them prime.

The second number of the Social Reformer, published by Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, is issued from the HERALD Job Rooms this week. It is filled with excellent reading matter of current interest. The edition this week is 2,000 copies, and it will be sent to any person free upon addressing the publisher.

The recent floods in the Ohio valley [illegible] without a parallel in the history of that valley. These things, coupled with the other calamities which have come upon different parts of the earth within a year, remind us that destructive powers are standing ready at all times to hurry mortals into eternity. They remind us too that there is some power above the laws of nature which holds all laws in subjection. They remind the people of an age which is adoring law that they should look up through natural law to God and adore him. They are reminding us that God's ways are not our ways. At the same time they are calling upon christians to let their benevolence flow out to conquer the evils which sin has brought, by healing the stricken and relieving the distressed.

It is now some months since the wholesale slaughter of the Crouch family in Jackson county. But for some reason the officers of the law seem unable to get any clue to the perpetrators. Other shocking murders have been committed in other parts of the state, and their perpetrators are nearly all at large. It does seem that our officers are making poor work of ferreting out crime. In some instances they seem to shut their eyes to clues because they point in certain directions. Is it because they are afraid to execute the laws? They will seize the poor wretch who has neither money nor influence and incarcerate him in prison, but they utterly neglect to lay hands on influential persons who seem to be guilty. Shame on such work! It is a burlesque on justice. Until we have officers who will do their duty fearlessly we may expect that crime will go on increasing.

BY ORDER OF COM.

The Prohibition Convention.

The largest Prohibition Convention ever held in the county, assembled at Dean's opera house yesterday. The meeting was called to order at one o'clock and Thomas F. Moore was elected to the chair, and after a prayer by the Rev. Hudson, Prof. C. R. Evans was elected secretary. There was considerable discussion on the new temperance paper, and much interest was manifested in the move, and several shares were subscribed for. A committee on the order of business for the afternoon session was then appointed. Mr. B. Moore of Palmyra, and Mrs. Laura Haviland then spoke on the subject of temperance, after some further business the convention adjourned to one o'clock.

The meeting was called to order at one o'clock by the chair, after which the Rev. Spahr offered prayer. The chair then called for the address, but as a number of the members had not yet arrived it was suggested the address be postponed until two o'clock, and some miscellaneous business transacted meanwhile. The chair then proceded to fill vacancies in the township, and ward delegations, and appoint chairmen of the various wards and townships. A bureau consisting of the Rev. Spahr, Mr. Chas. Mitchell, and Mr. Geo. Young were then appointed to select and send out speakers for the campaign. It was moved and carried that the above bureau be authorized to cooperate with the various township committees in the appointment of speakers, and that meetings be held in each school district. Dr. Atkinson then addressed the meeting, and in an eloquent manner upheld the cause of temperance, for which the convention is laboring.

The meeting was a large and enthusiastic one, and a great many shares of stock for the new paper was taken, in fact, more than the amount required, so that the new paper is an assured fact. The temperance party in Lenawee county seems to have a boom.—Adrian Record.

Beginning with the week of prayer meetings were held in all the evangelical churches with more or less of success. At the Baptist church Rev. Mr. Conley was assisted by Messrs. Kirtly and Hatch, and a considerable number professed conversion. At the Presbyterian church there was also help from abroad and several rose for prayers. At the Methodist church the Pastor was assisted by Rev. Mr. Price of the Christian church. Several were converted and a number of backsliders reclaimed. But there was no general "breaking up" in the community such as had been desired.

DIED.

CLARK—In Ridgeway, Feb. 16, 1884, Edith, youngest daughter of Mr. Henry Clark, aged 7 years, 10 months and 9 days.

The funeral services were held at the residence on the 18th, conducted by Rev. Mr. Cambell, of the M. E. church, Ridgeway.

The light of the house and its music,
The joy of its morrow and noon;
The fragrance and balm of its evening,
The dear and unspeakable boon.

I long for sweet lips on my forehead,
Alas, 'tis the fever instead:
I call the pet name that I gave her,
And know I am calling the dead.

The light of the house and its music,
Oh, God, when the birds first awake
In the gray and chill of the morning,
I wonder my heart does not break.

Remembering all I have suffered,
Remembering all I have known,
And crying the angels to witness,
I loved her, my lost one, my own.

Quick Relief!

When a man has suffered from Rheumatism only a little while, and is relieved from his pain, he is happy and delighted. But suppose he has Suffered for more than a third of a century.

Alvin Grim, of Vale, Iowa, writes: "A [illegible] has helped me much. The pain in my hands is all gone, but some lameness is left yet, and will there might be, for I have been troubled for fifty-five years with Rheumatism."

Mrs. A. R. Baker, of Chicago,

Had rheumatic pains in her back for fifteen years, and she thought she could not live. She says: "The 2d bottle of Athlophoros made me good as new. My words can never express my gratitude for what it has done for me. I am cured of all pain, and can recommend it to all who suffer as I did, to be free from pain and suffering as I have been since the use of the Athlophoros."

There are many people who think that because they have suffered so long, and have tried so many medicines in vain, they must "suffer on for three score years." But you see what Athlophoros has done.

However Old your Case:
However Severe your Pains:
However Great your Disappointments,

Try Athlophoros!

THINK OF IT NOW!

Though much is said about the impurity of blood during cold weather, it may be truthfully said that it has never been properly treated until the advent of Christmas.

When a very large number have some form of scrofulous humor in the system. When this develops in Scrofulous Sores, Ulcers, or Eruptions, in the form of Rheumatism, or Organic Diseases, the suffering that ensues is beyond the gratitude of those who, discouraged, as the thousands yearly do, that will thoroughly eradicate this evil from the system.

As well expect life without a full supply of pure blood. Cleanse the blood with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

We have spent over $100,000.00 in advertising our celebrated Durham Bull as our trademark, and probably be to-day the most valuable Bull in the world. Now it stands to reason that we would not allow a product bearing the roughly of BLACKWELL'S BULL DURHAM Tobacco, of which he is the representative, wasn't the BEST Smoking Tobacco ever made.

The sales of Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco far exceed the sales of any other brand in the world, simply because it has been, is, and will continue to be the best that can be made. All dealers have it. Look for the trade-mark of the Bull on every package.

DR. PIERCE'S [illegible]

Dear Sir: I feel more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did, her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am so happy you should use my letter for if can not help but tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,
MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.
N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. Joan Spitler.
No. 28 Wilt St, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Bunko and Bunkee.

"Wyoming may not occupy more nor three square yards on a goggerfy map of the United States," remarked Woodtick Williams at a recent session of the Forty Liars Club, after being called upon for a speech by the chair, "but she's got mighty good pickin'. What I mean is that her internal improvements contain some mighty smart men. With all due deference to the chair and the honorable company, I must say that for fast-color, pigeon-toed, copper-riveted, sense, the humble individual who now addresses you does not canter along at the rear of the procession. I may not ride on the seat with the driver, but if I do say it I follow up pretty nigh to the bereaved relatives. I am willing to admit that [illegible] than I am, likewise he must have been of the court records of Kenosha County, Wisconsin, pervert the truth to a marvellous degree. He was a bank cashier. He went up to Canada for his health—office work is so confining, you know, that it soon breaks a man down, especially bank cashiers. His great intellect gave way, however, a short time before he died—leastwise he was foolish enough to make his will—and so the family, of whom I am which, got nothing. Some cousin by-his-wife's-aunt put in a claim, and the lawyers promoted the case by gobbling up the estate themselves.

"But, as I said, I'm a shade or two above a natural-born fool, and to prove it I'll relate my experience with them Chicago last September. You know I took a lot of cattle in there to sell and after I'd disposed of them I took a spike-tail car and went up town. I bought me a bran new outfit at a clothing store, had the wrinkles pressed out, and dressing up in my new togs, I set out to take in the sights. Pretty soon I was tackled by a very decent looking party, who seemed tickled to death to see me. He called me Tompkins, from Titusville, Ind., and asked after the boys. I told him he was off his caboose, and just about that time, too, I began to smell something most awful rank, so when he asked me my name, I said it was John Taylor, of Tecumseh, Neb; that I was a director of the First National Bank there, and had just come to Chicago to see something of city life. Then I told him about the postmaster, Lou Davis, and the station agent whom I called Brooke, and so on, and made him thoroughly acquainted with everything and everybody in the place. I knew there was such a town in Nebraska, but of course didn't know a soul in it; but thinks I to myself, if there isn't anybody of that name there, why there ought to be, and as for myself, why the name of Taylor was good enough for me. Well, we chatted a long while, until my new friend said he had an engagement, but he'd call at the hotel in the evening and show me around. Well, its no use to prolong your agony. It was the same old story. The customary son of an old friend appeared in the regular order of things and made himself extremely agreeable, and 'Mr. Taylor' went with the young man to see him draw a prize in a lottery.

"The rules of the game, up to this point, had been strictly adhered to—apparently—but it gives me great pleasure to state that, in the subsequent proceedings, I introduced certain innovations that, if generally adopted, must tend to detract seriously from the interests of the noble game of bunko, and eventually bring it into disfavor among sportive gentlemen. I entered, apparently, into the spirit of the game with great enthusiasm and gratifying recklessness, and tucked in all my worth, when I told them that as I hadn't drawn any money since I struck the town, and only started with a little for fear of pickpockets in the cars, that broke me. As I appeared to be enjoying myself, however, the bunko men kindly kept the game going, and accepted my checks to the amount of $2,500 on the Tecumseh Bank aggregate. Finally I told them that I'd played enough for one day; that it was lots of fun but that, like all the other good things of life, it came high. If they'd just cash another check for $100, to give me a little ready cash to spend about town, I'd drop in the next day and give them another whirl. The generous bunko men cheerfully complied, and I quit the game just $8 ahead. I don't know what they did with those checks. In fact I haven't allowed myself to worry over it at all since. I suppose it's a little rough on the bunko man to discover suddenly that he is the bunkee; but then you know there's nothing certain in this world but death, and four aces backed up with a king."—The Boomerang.

Buying and Selling Names.

A pleasant, gray-bearded gentleman sat in a Sixth avenue elevated train, talking to a younger man. A reference to the occupation of the older man made him say:

"Mine is an unusual business. See here."

He pulled out a card. If his name had been Henry Jackson, the card would have read:

HENRY JACKSON,
Dealer in Names.

"Won't you explain?" said the younger man.

"I buy and sell the addresses of people in all parts of the United States and Canada. There are hundreds of business men who reach their customers by circulars, as well as by advertising in the newspapers. Thus a book publisher gets out a new book which he wants to sell through agents. He is anxious to learn the names and addresses of all the men and women in the United States who sell subscription books. He also wants the names of those who sell other goods in the same way, because they are very likely to drop the other article for the sake of the new book. Then he wants the addresses of the people who have never acted as agents, but who want to try to see what they can do. He advertises for agents in a variety of papers, at a pretty heavy expense. It costs him several cents for every letter of inquiry about his book that he receives. To that letter of inquiry he sends his elaborate circulars. I come to the relief of the publisher by selling him a very large number of agents' addresses at a small part of the cost of getting them by advertising."

"How do you get them?"

"You see, every publisher has a lot of agents whom he has employed at one time and another. Nearly every one will sell me a copy of his list for a consideration. The combined copies make a formidable pile of manuscript. Then there are the novelty men, who accumulate large lists of names of agents. Agents form one line of special names. Invalids form another."

"Do you mean sick people?"

"Not necessarily. Every community has a lot of people who are always buying medicine. They are the most valuable lot an advertiser can reach. The consumption remedy circular gives them a hacking cough, and a heavy rash. The blood purifier circular flushes them with eczema. So it goes through the list of chronic and acute ailments, from feet and back to a steam atomizer to doctor a sprained foot. All of these people at one time or another write to some advertising doctor or vendor of the elixir of life. I buy the names of the advertiser, classify them according to the number of times the names have been used by medical men and the last diseases that afflicted the writers, and sell them over and over again. Sometimes I sell the original letters outright. The careful advertiser sometimes varies the character of the circulars sent according to the characteristics of the letter-writer, even writing a personal letter in some cases."

"What other classes have you?"

"Two general classes. One for the sharpers and one for the general advertiser. The latter class is cosmopolitan. It includes all others, really, but it is made up mostly of farmers. For instance, in New York, Rochester and Detroit are several firms of dealers in garden and farm seeds. They get hundreds of thousands of letters every year. To those addresses circulars of all kinds of farm and household goods, books, jewelry, anything that a man or woman doesn't need but is sure to want, can be sent with great profit. The names for the use of sharpers are the most profitable of all, and yield the largest returns of all concerned, except the ones addressed. Once we get a name on that list we know it will pan out till the man dies. The addresses of all the people who buy tickets in lotteries, who write to dealers in fac-simile greenbacks, and who write to other advertisers that offer to give something for nothing, are very carefully arranged by themselves. They are usually very smart in their own conceit, but they nibble at a bare hook."

"What prices do these names bring?"

"I have got as high as twenty-five dollars a thousand for names for sharpers' use. Good lists of habitual invalids are worth all the way from ten dollars to twenty dollars a thousand. Agents are so easily obtained that ten dollars is a big price; from three dollars to five dollars is ordinary. General-use lists copied off the letters bring from three dollars to five dollars where they have not been mailed to more than twice. When mailed to oftener, and where a year or two old, they get down to one dollar a thousand.

"Are many in this business of yours?"

"Not continually. They drop in, make a good thing, and straightway begin mailing circulars on their own account. The number of actual addresses handled by me in one year has never exceeded one million, but it has crowded that figure closely."—N. Y. Sun.

The Future of Our Earth.

If the force at the back of all growth, all complexity and all change on earth is that which the sun has steadily supplied to it through countless ages, and still supplies, it is plain that when this force fails, as fail it one day must, there will be a steadily declining development and a rapidly increasing degeneration of things, an undoing by regressive decompositions of what has been done by progressive combinations through the succession of the ages. The disintegrating process may be expected to take effect first upon the highest products of evolution, and to reach in descending succession the lower and lowest organizations and organic compounds. The nations that have risen high in complexity of development will deteriorate, and be broken up, to have their places taken by less complex associations of inferior individuals; these in turn will yield place to simpler and feebler unions of still more degraded beings, species after species of animals and plants will first degenerate, and then become extinct as the worsening conditions of life render it impossible for them to continue the struggle for existence, a few scattered families of degraded human beings, living, perhaps, in snow huts near the equator very much as Esquimaux live now near the pole will represent the last wave of the receding tide of human existence before its final extinction; until at last a frozen earth, incapable of cultivation, is left without energy to produce a living particle of any sort, and so death itself is dead."—Body and Wit.

A Pension Romance.

The other day Representative Cassidy, of Nevada, received a request from Eli Johnson, one of his constituents, that he would help through a pension he had asked for a member of a California cavalry regiment in the late war. Cassidy forwarded the letter to the Pension Office, with a favorable indorsement. He was surprised to receive in a day or two a reply from the Commissioner of Pensions, stating that a pension had been granted years ago to the widow of this same Eli Johnson, and that she had surrendered the pension upon marrying, some time since, a man named Gill. An investigation was at once had. It has just been ascertained that Mrs. Johnson, having been informed by her friends that her husband was killed in one of the bloody battles of the war, mourned him as dead, obtained a pension as his widow, and subsequently married Gill, an Ohio man. On his part, Eli Johnson had been sorely wounded, had spent several months in a hospital, had been informed, upon emerging from it, that his wife was dead, had gone to their old home to find that she had left without leaving a trace of her whereabouts behind, and had sincerely mourned her ever since. The correspondence brings out the interesting fact that they love each other still. Unfortunately Gill still lives.—Washington Cor. Philadelphia Record.

Neuralgic Rheumatism is the hardest kind to treat. The only way to get at it is to go right for the cause of it. The quicker you get your blood in good condition the less you will suffer in body and mind. Athlophorus moves directly on the enemy in the blood. It purges the vital fluid of the poisons and acids which give rise to neuralgic and rheumatic pains and inflammations. As soon as the work of cleansing begins you feel the pain departing, and by the time that work is done the disease has fled.

Dresses for Young Ladies.

Simple and very pretty is a dress for a young lady. The short skirt is finished at the lower edge with a knife plaiting of cream silk. Above this plaiting is a very deep puff of cream cashmere headed by five tiny ruffles of silk, then comes another deep puff of the cashmere, over which falls the full, grace, fully-looped drapery from the waist line. The pointed corsage is of cashmere cut V shape in the neck and is trimmed on the short sleeves and the end of the throat opening, which is edged with lace, with loops of ribbon, pink rose buds and green leaves. Clusters of the roses and leaves are also used as ornaments [illegible] the skirt is secured.

Another useful and becoming dress for a young lady or a miss is of ivory crepe, the short skirt trimmed with two deep box plaits of the material, each edged with lace. Scarf tunic over the front and hips form drapery in the back. The waist has plastron front of lace, put in full, between shirrings of the crepe on either side. Lace finished elbow sleeves, lace frill at the throat and sash of satin ribbon tied about the waist and brought down in large loop ends at the side.

For a miss of ten or twelve years a new wrap is in pelisse shape; full effect in the skirt given by shirrings down the waist front, with the width left in the skirt of the stylish little garment, which is allowed to fall open far enough to show the plaitings in the front of dress skirt, worn beneath. The back is made in the same manner, only it is closed in the center and at the waist line; on either side of the front puff is a sash-belt of plaited satin, which forms deep loop bows in this center of the back. This garment is in navy blue satin, with felt hat in the same shade, trimmed with satin and feathers.

A suit to be worn in the early spring by a young girl the same age is in one of the mode tones. The skirt is of cloth, made plain in front, side plaited over the sides and full in the back, the lower edge being trimmed with wide bands of blue velvet. The apron over drapery is also bordered with the velvet, while the fullness in the back is not trimmed. The fitted corsage has a plaited front, crossed by bands of velvet with cluster of loops in the middle, velvet collar, cuffs and belt, loops of cloth serving as basque skirt to the bodice. The hat is covered with the modecloth, and is bound and trimmed with velvet, and two birds.—Philadelphia Times.

Too Much Cash.

In an alley off Griswold street, shortly after noon yesterday, several people saw a middle-aged man and woman sitting flat on the snow, while the lap of the latter was fairly covered with greenbacks which the pair were counting. The presence of spectators did not stop the count nor seem to annoy the counters, but after the pile had been handled over, bill by bill, the man called out:

"Darn my buttons, but we've missed it again?"

"What are you doing?" asked one of the spectators.

"Why, I've drawed $600 from the bank, and we are counting it over to see if it's all right."

"And isn't it?"

"No. I counted fust and made $610. Then the old woman counted and made $590. Then I counted and made $620, and now she's handled the pile and there's $585."

"And I'm right," said the woman.

"I don't believe it!" he replied. "You never went to skule a day in your life, and what do you know about counting?"

"And when did you go to skule?" she hotly demanded. "If thar's $600 in that pile I'll eat every dollar of it!"

"I'll count it for you," said one of the spectators, and in about five minutes he announced that the sum total was an even $600.

A second was asked to count it, and he made the total the same.

"That's all right," said the old man as he stuffed the "wad" into his overcoat pocket and rose up.

"I don't know about that!" added the wife. "S'posen we git home and find we are $50 short?"

"You come along!" he commanded. "Don't you see that we have both of us made a show of our ignorance? I'm a thinkin' of runnin' fur the Legislatur', and you are boss of two sewin' societies, and here we've went and let on that we don't know 'nuff to count up a drove o' hogs and make tails tally with the heads!"—Detroit Free Press.

How Headless Roosters Are Made.

A short, stout man, with a red face, stood before a Bowery museum thrashing himself with both arms violently. A cold wind whistled over the pavement, and the brass band in the windows above dolefully wheezed "Sweet Violets."

"Have you any of those headless roosters in the museum yet?" asked a reporter, pausing before the Dime Museum man.

"Hough!" said he, slacking the violence of his arms, but still keeping one hand going, the fingers of which looked numbed and blue.

"Has the museum got on exhibition any of those headless roosters the papers have been talking about?" repeated the reporter.

"See here, young feller, don't yer be so funny," said the museum man, and he put the cold fingers in his mouth, blew on them hard, and looked savagely at the interrogator. "Mebbe you don't know what them roosters is?" he continued, relaxing somewhat. "They're frauds, they are, regular snides, and we ain't a-playing such games on our patrons."

"What do you mean by saying they're frauds?" asked the reporter, interested.

"I mean just wot I say. They ain't no such thing as a headless rooster, no more than a headless horse or a headless man, and don't yer forget it. They are all fixed up. I'll tell you how they're fixed. A feller takes a sharp knife and slits off the rooster's bill. Then he loosens the skin around the top of the head and stretches it down like a hood. Mebbe he cuts away some of the flesh with the bill, but he's mighty careful how much he takes. Well, I say you may take fur gospel. That's the way them headless roosters is made. I've seen it done. They tie the skin tight over the top of the [illegible], it gets well in two weeks and [illegible] so's to look as if the head had been cut off. When you stick a kernel of corn down his windpipe he swallows it and pokes his head up for more. After he gets well the owners trot him out and say the head was cut right off when he was killin' some chickens for dinner, but this one didn't die. Right this way, gentlemen!" to passing sight-seers. "Step right in and see the fat woman and the double-headed boy!"

The red-faced man began to swing his arms once more and the band started up a fresh strain.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Scold.

In view of the fact that scolding is such an unenviable accomplishment, and one so easily acquired, it is odd that anybody should take credit to herself for a vocation in that direction, and yet we sometimes hear people boasting about their ability to give certain friends or foes a piece of their mind calculated to stagger them, as if one required a special genius for the task which any fish-wife is competent to perform to her infinite satisfaction. Who, indeed, has not met those who absolutely plume themselves upon their powers of scolding, and do not allow them to grow rusty for lack of use? There are mothers whose children live in constant dread of a prolonged reprimand if any little accident happens to their clothing, although we are warned by the sage that scolding tends to make a child sly and irritable, and prefer any place before home. It is a lamentable fact that when we think of the scold it is always as a feminine noun; whether it is that a man disciplines himself to make the best of inevitable annoyances rather than rail against them, or whether, owing to his more robust nature and his interest in larger pursuits, the trifles which irritate the sensitive feminine world have no effect upon his toughened cuticle, it is difficult to decide. We would naturally suppose that the scold would possess a strong physique; that one who was forever kicking against the pricks would need muscle and nerve for such energetic existence; but as we often find her an invalid, or one who has added that role to her other accomplishments, and who exhorts from her comfortable couch with the strength of ten. She is confined to no class of society, but may be met with in hovel or palace. Does she not sit down at every boarding-house table in the land, and did one ever travel without encountering her? She inveighs against the wind at the summit of Mount Washington, and at the lack of it in the valleys below. She is ingenious in finding a cause for exercising her "free speech;" her neighbors, her friends, her servants, enjoy the benefit of her liberality in that respect. Indeed, she would cease to be happy if there were nothing to rail against, as if such a state of things were owing to some neglect of duty on her part. Nothing is too high or too common to escape her oratory, and, although she may not be called a conversationalist, nor remind us of a Madame De Stael or Margaret Fuller, yet, when she warms to the occasion, it is doubtful if either of these could rival her.—Harper's Bazar.

The Muscles.

The chief function of the muscles is to contract, and thus to move a given part by drawing toward itself the tendon which connects the two—the part and the muscle. Some of the muscles are moved by a nerve-force sent from the brain by the will—others act independently of the will, as most of the internal muscles. Still others—as the muscles concerned in breathing—are in the main independent of the will, and yet can be controlled by it to some extent.

Again, even those whose ordinary movements are determined by the will, can be operated on independently of it by what is called "reflex" nervous action. In this case a sensation runs up to one of the brain-centers, and then, without going as high as the region of intelligence, runs down a nerve of motion to the supposed muscle.

This is so with the convulsive movements of hysteria, epilepsy, etc. Habitual acts become in time largely, if not wholly, reflex, thus relieving the mind from superintending them. A bird can fly and a fish can swim without a brain—through this reflex power.

No one knows what the moving force is which so wonderfully plays between the brain and the muscles. It is not electricity, although the muscles even of a dead man can be moved by this latter force. In every department of science we soon strike the limits of the knowable.

Sometimes, as in cholera (St. Vitus dance), there is a wild movement of the muscles, often fearfully violent and utterly uncontrollable. Sometimes, as in locomotor ataxia, so called, there is an irregular action of the voluntary muscles—the legs, arms and head moving grotesquely in walking. Sometimes, as in a trance, the limbs of a patient can be placed by another in the queerest postures, and the former will not have the slightest power to change them, although he may have the full possession of his senses.

The muscles retain more or less of their peculiarity for a time after death. The heart of some animals will beat for hours removed from the body. In some cases of death from cholera and yellow fever, a certain convulsive force may continue for awhile. One man, several hours after death from cholera, brought his hands together and lifted his arms into the air, repeating it for some time.—Youth's Companion.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—"Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain had left me before I had finished the first bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all—yes, more than you claim for it. I am yours truly,

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt."

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation."

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply;"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for gumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption,
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he did was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

CONGRESS.

The Senate, on the 20th, passed without debate the bill increasing the annual amount to provide arms and equipments for the militia from $200,000 to $400,000. A resolution was agreed to, that the Secretary of War inform the Senate when and how many acres of indemnity lands were certified and patented to railroad corporations in Iowa, to whom grants of public lands were donated. The bills fixing the time of holding the terms of the District and Circuit Courts of the United States in the Northern District of Iowa, and Mr. Sewell's bill appropriating $600,000 per annum for the militia were passed. After some time spent in discussing the bill to provide for the circulation of National banks the Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned. The House passed the joint resolution appropriating $150,000 to be expended among the Indians for educational purposes. The report of the committee calling on the Postmaster General to transmit to the House copies of reports made by the special agents of the Postoffice Department, having reference to the Star Route investigations, not heretofore made public, was agreed to. In the Senate on the 21st the bill providing for the punishment of persons falsely personating officers and employes of the United States was passed. In executive session the Senate took up the nomination of George F. Evans as Postmaster at Martinsburg, W. Va., and after an hour's discussion reached a vote, the result of which was a tie. Evans is charged with being present at the lynching of a negro, who had outraged and then murdered a white woman, he admitted his presence but declared that he was not a participant in the lynching. The bill giving the Secretary of War authority to compel the alteration of bridges spanning navigable waters which obstruct navigation, was passed. Debate on the bill to provide for the issue of circulation to National banking associations was resumed, but without action the Senate adjourned till the 25th. The House, in Committee of the Whole, discussed the Military Academy bill, and after rejection of several amendments the bill was reported back to the House and passed—yeas 250, nays 4. The Post Route bill was passed, and the Senate amendments to the House bill declaring all public roads post roads were concurred in. A message was received from the President transmitting the report of the Secretary of State in relation to the presentation to the United States by the British Government of the Arctic steamship Alert. On motion, the report was ordered on the House record. Adjourned until the 25th.

In the House Mr. Foran's bill to prohibit the importation and immigration of foreigners under contract to perform labor in the United States, was, on the 23d placed on the House calendar. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the pleuro-pneumonia bill, and after discussing it at some length without action, the Committee rose and the House adjourned. The Senate was not in session.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUZZINGS.

Mrs. Ed. Rabeh quite ill.

Walter Eveby and Jennie Gibson were married on Tuesday of last week.

John Beasley is putting up a building in the third ward to be used as a cabinet shop.

Mr. Babcock's dramatic club gave a very enjoyable performance at Britton's hall on Tuesday evening, Feb. 20th, and another at the Chas. Kniffin school house on Monday evening of this week.

The cry of fire brought the villagers old and young from their comfortable quarters about 4 o'clock Thursday A. M., Feb. 28, when it was discovered that the store of Britton & Son was on fire, and beyond control, in fact it was impossible to get into the building at all, the fire having got under such headway. A strong n. w. wind was blowing at the time, carrying showers of coals over Mr. Britton's two barns and adjacent straw stacks, which were only saved by the light snow and ice which covered them, and the most careful watching. The weather was intensely cold. Pails of water carried to extinguish sparks around the barns soon became frozen up. The store building contained, besides a large stock of goods, the post office and U. S. Express office. The second story was fitted up for a G. A. R. lodge room. Nothing was saved from the building. Loss about $4,000, insured about $1,800. This seems to be an off year for Mr. Britton he having lost several head of valuable stock within the year.

We understand another store will be built on the site lately occupied by that of Britton & Son. It will be larger, with a good-sized hall above. Correct, gentlemen, that's the talk.

There is no better location in Southern Michigan for a hotel than right here. Scores of travelers changing cars and waiting for trains with no place to get a meal. Why don't some good live man put up a hotel. We also want a shoemaker; one with capital enough to build and stock a shop. A meat market would be another good investment. We think we spoke of the opening for a good physician in our communication a short time ago. We understand there is one coming. Good. Now we can't all get sick at once, but when we do.—Well, when we do!

The stave mill is going up rapidly at this writing. The roof is on and the building nearly enclosed. This year will probably see a good side track over in the vicinity of the mills.

The Ridgeway correspondent of the Toledo Telegram says there are several cars of stock waiting better facilities for shipping at that point. If we are not mistaken these same cars of stock were there two years ago waiting for a railroad to be built, and at this time next year they will be waiting for the cows to come up. Boys, wait, and while you are waiting just cast an eye this way and see us scratch.

The donation at the Christian church on the 21st ult., was a success, both socially and financially. Cash received between sixty and seventy dollars. The supper was fine.

Preparations are being made for at least four dwelling houses to go up as soon as the weather will permit.—Boom!

MACON MOLECULES.

Chas. Slaight closed his school in the Darling district Feb. 29.

The "Corners" school closes Saturday, March 8th. There will be two weeks' vacation. The present teachers will be retained for the spring term.

Ezra Betser has just removed from our hamlet. Sorry to lose him.

Mrs. Jesse Coller is spending a few days at Milan.

It is rumored that the "Corners" is to have another store. "Let her boom!

Mrs. W. H. Smith and son were visiting relatives and looking over the remains of the Union Hotel block at Jackson last week.

One Mr. Oliver, a former neighbor of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Jessup from New York city was their guest over Sunday last.

Last Monday morning on going to his barn Wm. White found one of his best horses loose, with a broken leg, and [illegible] with a bad cut on the [illegible] both from the effects of their [illegible] one another. C. A. Waldron, [illegible], was sent for, but he being sick was unable to attend to it, and Drs. Breese and Smith were then called and dressed the wounds as best they could, and left the animal with but little hope of recovery. As they were about to depart Wm. inquired as to the main artery in case he should think best to relieve the unfortunate beast of his suffering.

The Good Templars pass-word last Saturday evening was one dime, that being the price of admission to the show that they had given up the hall to for that evening.

NEWBURG NIBBLINGS.

Severe March weather.

Mr. Quirk's team indulged in a lively little runaway one day last week. No serious damage done.

Don't use so much of the saw mill wood at the grist mill, boys.

The old lumber slide at the saw mill had become weak and unsafe, but it is being repaired with a new one.

Mrs. Frank Marshall is on the sick list, also Mr. S. P. Sheldon.

Mr. and Mrs. Coryell have returned from their northern trip very much pleased.

Mr. L. J. Esslinger, the former proprietor of the Newburg mills has obtained a position in a flouring mill at Ypsilanti, and will soon move his family there.

Our farmers are securing their help for the coming summer.

Del Goodrich and N. C. Arnold have an auction Friday, March 7.

Mr. Ed. Bowen is still confined to the house. Ed has had a hard time this winter.

Mr. Ed. Smith is gathering together the materials for his new house on the section farm.

Miss Genie Church is giving very good satisfaction as teacher of the district school. We understand that she has been engaged for another term.

The Rev. Mr. Payne, of Clinton, is expected to preach at the school house Friday evening.

FLASHES BY C. T. LINE.

Mrs. G. W. McCollum is visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. H. Herbison, of Newburg.

Last weeks' "Flashes" mentioned the severe illness of Mrs. P. Mills. It should read Mrs. B. J. Wells. This was a mistake of the printer.

Clinton Baptist Sabbath School has donated fifty volumes to the Newburg S. S. library.

B. C. Knapp and his son George started last Monday for a three weeks' tour in Kansas.

Manager Bowen went to Detroit over M. & O. and Wabash last Monday.

F. C. Rector has bought the Romeyn farm.

Surprise parties have been quite common lately, but Henry Wilson gave a little surprise to a party of invited guests last Thursday evening that was a little out of the usual line. After the guests had all arrived, including the minister, at an appointed time the door opened from the hall, and the Rev. Mr. Hudson, accompanied by Mr. Rollin Austin, of Blissfield, and Miss Mary Gall, of Manchester, stepped in the room and were united in marriage. The surprise was complete and all joined in wishing much joy.

W. E. Cook, of Michigan Centre, is shaking hands with his friends in his old home in Newburg.

Abner Wilson will clerk for Keyser and Bowen at their sale next Tuesday.

We are glad to be able to report Uncle James Updyke and Solomon Mangus improving.

RIDGEWAY RATTLINGS.

Harry Smith, the tinsmith, has become a citizen also a freeholder, he having purchased the house and lot of D. W. Loree, west of Jackson's wagon shop.

W. P. Cadmus has bought the C. Snedicor blacksmith shop lot and will remove his shoe shop thereon in the early spring.

The literary entertainment of last Friday evening called out a very fair attendance and proved a financial success. The next meeting of the society will be held on Friday evening, March 14th. An unusually good program will be presented. The retiring president, Mr. A. E. Kalder, by his quiet demeanor, pleasing address and executive ability takes away with him the kind regards and good wishes of all the members of the society, and to him should be given credit for a large share of the present prosperity of the society.

LEAP-YEAR.

JOHN:—
Come, Sally, dear, it's getting late, and mother's wide awake;
She knows you're here, and therefore your departure you must take;
I've got to lock the door and then put out the parlor light;
Promise me, dear Sal, and you can come again some other night.

SAL:—
Oh, pshaw! dear John, it's early yet, I'm sure I need n't hurry;
It's scarcely half-past ten o'clock, your mother need not worry;
But if you want to go to bed then I'll no longer stay,
So, love, give me another kiss, and I will go away.

JOHN:—
Oh, Sal, please don't! Well, take it then, now go, oh, please make haste!
If mother should come down and see your arm around my waist
I think I'd faint; come, dearest, don't delay a moment more,
Put on your hat and shawl and I will see you to the door.

SAL:—
I think it's just too bad that I have got to go so soon;
Well, never mind I'll see you, love, to-morrow afternoon;
Ush—hush! I hear your mother coming down with footsteps light;
I'm off—just one; oh, my, how sweet! Well, Johnny, dear, good-night.

THE BABIROUSSA.

The babiroussa is an Indian hog, not a very pleasant sort of animal to look at, and an exceedingly disagreeable one to meet when it is not in the best humor. It has two pairs of tusks, those in the lower jaw being somewhat like a wild-boar's, but the pair which spring from the top of the upper jaw are very long, and curve inward, almost touching the skin of the forehead. The upper tusks do not spring from between the lips, but cut their way through the skin, and have the appearance of growing out of the upper part of the snout.

The animal usually grows to the ordinary size of wild hogs, but some have been killed that were as large as a donkey. It can run very fast, and is a most dangerous enemy when brought to bay. It is of a gray color, the skin hanging in folds or wrinkles about the body, which is covered very thinly with short bristles. The tail is nearly without hair, save at the end, where it forms a sort of tassel.

The female has the merest apologies for tusks, the bone hardly showing through the skin, and in many cases she can not even boast of that much.

These animals hardly ever have a regular home; they wander from one part of the forest to the other, but always in the wet, marshy portions, feeding on leaves, grass and water plants. They are remarkably good swimmers, and often cross large lakes rather than walk around them, and they never hesitate to take to the water when in flight. Swimming appears to be as much an instinct with the young babiroussas as with ducks, for they plunge boldly into the water as soon as they can walk.

If suddenly roused in its lair, instead of seeking safety in flight, the babiroussa rushes out upon its assailant with the utmost fury, and although its tusks are curved so nearly to the flesh, it can inflict most dangerous wounds. By the natives its flesh is considered a great delicacy, and all the more so because they rarely succeed in killing one save at the expense of several lives.

These hogs usually are found in herds of six or eight, and the males as well as the females care for the young, petting them in their swinish way as human parents do their offspring. Savage as they are, there is no more dangerous time to approach them than when the young are small. The females will gather around the young ones, while the males will rush out to give battle without waiting for an attack.

Funk, the naturalist of Cologne, tells of an encounter with a babiroussa which was related to him by a sea-Captain. Two sailors and three natives came suddenly upon a herd of five full-grown hogs and two young ones. The two females of the party immediately covered the young with their bodies, while the males dashed forward with such fury that all the party save one of the sailors, were overturned, and at the mercy of the savage brutes.

One of the natives was instantly killed, the lower tusks of the hog being driven through his eye into his brain. Another was fatally wounded, and not one of the party escaped serious injury. During the affray, which did not last many minutes, the hunters had had an opportunity to fire among the herd but once, and that without inflicting any injury. It was almost impossible for the party even to drag their wounded companions out of the reach of the infuriated beasts, and they did not succeed in doing so until after several more severe wounds had been inflicted by the hogs, which pursued them quite half a mile.

The traveler Brun, writing of the fortunate chance which gave him an opportunity of carefully examining the babiroussa, was much more successful. He says:

"I was once in a low, damp forest on one of the Malaccan islands, when one of my guides drew my attention to a noise as of the grunting of hogs but a short distance away. It was more of a low, whistling sound than a grunt, although now and then could be heard the squeal peculiar to the common hog when angry or frightened."

The guides were familiar with the sound, and without stopping to explain their course, or even to give any advice to the traveler in their charge, they started off at full speed, leaving the explorer with no weapon save a light gun, and no ammunition save the two charges it contained.

Brun knew from the stories he had heard from the natives that his guides had been frightened by the hogs, and he was all the more anxious to capture one because of their rareness.

"The noise, which at first seemed near by, was farther away than I had thought, for it was not until I had walked quite a mile and a half through the thick underbrush that I could distinguish any living thing. Then the gray forms of several hogs could be indistinctly seen through the foilage, and I determined to risk everything for the sake of bagging the largest of the herd."

Whether the hogs were startled by something other than the hunter, or whether it was because they were in no mood for fighting that day, can not be told, but certain it is that, contrary to their usual habits, instead of rushing upon the intruder, they ran swiftly past him to a brook near by, leaping in as if in the greatest excitement and fear.

"They certainly swam under the water at least forty yards, for from the time they plunged in I could see no more of them until they scrambled out, squealing and whistling, on the other side. My gun was loaded with large shot, and since, owing to the absence of my ammunition carrier, I had no bullets, I gave the largest of the party my compliments in the form of a charge of shot."

The animal was hit just behind the fore-leg, and tumbled over dead, while his companions, instead of continuing their flight, surrounded him as if to aid him in his trouble.

A second shot had the effect of dispersing them, and the brave hunter had the satisfaction of examing the prize at his leisure. It proved to be a full-grown hog, "weighing about one hundred and fifty pounds, while its thick, round body measured three feet in length, and two feet in height."—Harper's Young People.

The Louisiana Swamp.

There is a beauty, a charm, an enchanting serenity, and a delight in the Louisiana Swamp which the devotee to the city's flare and flush, the lover of rugged mountain fastnesses, or he who vaunts the graces of the unruffled prairie would scarce concede. Wild, level, gay as these, it is unlike them; yet none may say it is not beautiful, lovely, exquisite.

Far from the rattle and racket of the great city, leagues beyond craggy mountain range, remote from the wide stretch of prairie, and ignorant of the village church bell's sound, the Swamp's broad aisles and lengthy collonades invite the lover of Nature to feast.

There are gorgeousness and delicacy of coloring, grace and grandeur of form, intricacy and simplicity of texture and construction.

Walk under the over-spreading boughs of the forest centenarians, revel in the delicious fragrance of flowers without number, gaze, as you must, on their exhilarating hues and their soul-stirring completeness, and adore the Mighty One who formed and rejoices in them.

No fetid morass post among hills, not a mere splatch of liquid mud wherein ownerless swine befoul themselves, but broad as ever was prairie spread, seemingly dallying with the blue firmament above as its glorious foliage climbs aloft, abundant in leafy coverts and resounding with the sweet carolings of countless birds; this is the Louisiana swamp, the Venice of the wildwood.

There the gladdened botanist, wandering afoot or floating in his tiny pirogue, through waving iris, discovers flora so sturdy, so rank, he, for a moment, doubts its identity.

There the delighted hunter comes upon wader and diver, brings down snipe and plover, hopefully follows the agile water-rail, or sends his whistling rifle-ball skipping on the glassy water into the neck of wary mallard and teal. Pushing further into the inner labyrinths where large game hides, he slowly lifts his stealthy foot from the wad of grass he lends down for a moment's footing and slides it along to another, brushing through nodding cat tails, thrusting aside the rattling palmetto, and tearing away the heavy network of vines sturdily clinging him in their embrace.

Eye and ear alert, breath suppressed, rifle ready, heart bounding and limbs trembling, as he spies the crowning of the day's adventure, an elfish sunbeam dances on the polished muzzle-sight, there is a snap, a crack, a puff of blue smoke, a dash forward to firmer footing, and the prize is won!

As the million echoes scamper away amid the cries of startled birds, the hunter turns and gazes on flower and vine and lush, verdurous, rich, profuse, it seems that were the seedling ground for the gardens and forests of the universe.

He has been so eager in his search, so intent on the discovery and pursuit of his game, he has not seen, till now, the maze of sprawling, clambering, tumbling verdure everywhere around and over him. Violets cuddle on a lump of soil whence the water has retreated, while over them, like a protecting mother-bird, ferns spread their graceful wings. Just above, a mass of yellow jasmine holds a little knoll, waxen-white blossoms of magnolia-grandiflora peep in twixt their leathery leaves like roguish eyes between chubby fingers, and all around giant cypresses look down as upon a joy they cannot comprehend, while trumpet flower and passion flower climb up, up, up, to the coveted perch of the great outstretched arms where, nestling in the soft gray moss, they pour forth wordless jubilates of purple and scarlet glory.—James B. Cobb, in The Current.

Tax the Pistol.

While Congress is in session would it not be well, when imposing a heavy tax upon the manufacture and sale of tobacco, whisky, and other such articles, to include pistols with these evils and tax them out of existence? Neither the traffic in whisky, tobacco, or any other article entails half as much misery on the human family as is caused by the pistol. It is a curse to the human race as it is now vended. It furnishes more victims for the gallows than all the other evils combined. It entails more misery, suffering, woe, and disgrace upon the human family than any companion of the assassin, the murderer, the thief, and the coward—than any other known evil. It is the boon of highwaymen, whereas if it were not for the pistols we do not believe that one of these crimes would be committed where a hundred are now recorded. It ought to be legislated out of existence (except for the army) as the greatest curse known to civilization. There is not a single good word that can be said for it. Out of every thousand acts committed with a pistol there is not more than one good one—the rest are all evil. It would be a blessing to society, to civilization and to the whole human race if pistols had never been invented.—Lancaster (S. C.) Ledger.

Specialty in Farming.

The assistant in agricultural experiments in the Agricultural College at Ames, Ia., presents strong reasons why the farmers should commence to be "specialty" farmers; that is, each one should select one branch of agriculture, as wheat-raising or dairying or the breeding of one kind of stock, and bend his whole energies to its mastery in all of its details, instead of carrying on mixed husbandry that includes the raising of oats and corn and wheat and stock. He assumes that the average farmer of to-day spreads his energy over too many kinds of work to advance much in knowledge of any one. The subject of agriculture is yearly becoming broadened by science. The writer refers to workers in scientific matters, how hopeless would be the task of a scientific man who attempted to become a second Leonardo, the master of all the knowledge of his time. For a man now to accomplish anything of note in to the world in study, he must not only take one branch of study, but a single division of that branch. Thus in farming the man can accomplish most who limits himself to work in some one small part of his great profession. For instance, instead of investing five hundred dollars in cattle, five hundred dollars in horses and five hundred dollars in swine, let him put all of his capital into the business of breeding one class of stock. Let his reading be largely on the habits of this stock and its treatment and care by the most successful breeders, and let him attend all gatherings of like breeders, where he may hear interchange of experience in his chosen work.

No doubt this is very good advice if not carried too far. It is well, indeed, to have a large number of "specialty" farmers who will rapidly improve their departments of agriculture, and thus benefit all farmers. It will do very well for those farmers in good financial circumstances, if they have a taste for one kind of work, to devote to it their entire time. In most cases where there is intelligence and energy displayed, this "specialty" farming would prove more remunerative than general farming, and besides would tend more to increase the common stock of knowledge. But a very large majority of farmers are not financially able to make expenses in a special line of work, requires more than ordinary ability. They have not ready means, and could not afford, to have their little all on one bottom trusted. Variety is so limited by the weather, by disease and by insects, that a variety of crops and different kinds of stock seem to be necessary for most farmers, so that if one is lost by a frost or a pestiferous grub or insect, others will be left on which the family may exist.

To the average farmer then, whose bank account is not very large, this advice to give up all but one branch of agriculture is not good. He must continue to have his different crops, his cattle and his horses and his sheep, and babied, such a system is best for maintaining the soil's fertility, for the richest soil will become worthless by long continued use in the rearing of one plant. "Mixed husbandry" is essential to the best agriculture of which any country is capable, and it presents a problem of broad one, indeed, compared to the improvement of one breed of cattle that should be solved. It is the rotation of crops best calculated to sustain the productivity of the land, and the greatest amount of stock per acre that can be profitably kept on a farm.—Kansas Farmer.

Conservative Turkeys.

Turkeys share with geese the curious conservatism that prevents them taking new shapes to please poultry fanciers. The ordinary fowls never hesitate at any absurdity, and there is nothing a breeder could ask a pigeon that it would not do. But geese and turkeys refuse to become anything save what they were. They will grow as large as you please, for they like that. Feeding is agreeable to them. But they will not turn trumpeter or tumbler, nun or capuchin. It is no use trying to develop variations under domestication. They prefer to stay as they are, and politely but firmly decline to be anything else. This may seem, of course, a want of courtesy, or be construed into a lack of originality. But it is just as well after all in this world of change that something should remain as it always was. The geese on the Egyptian sculptures are one of the few representations that even the meanest capacity can comprehend. The turkey is one of the few birds that can be directly referred back to its primitive type. Wild or where this admirable fowl, so handsome in person and so excellent at the table, came within the sphere of poultry-yard history does not record, but its name in various languages betrays suggestions of such differing and such distant sources that it would seem as if from the first its origin had been a puzzle. Yet no one who has ever seen a turkey in a farm-yard could set eyes upon a wild one and fail to recognize it. The latter may be a trifle taller, and the coloring be, perhaps, less decided, but there is no possible room for doubt as to species. Yet, with an acquiescence in civilized tastes that can not be too highly commended, the tame birds has been careful to lose the coarseness of flavor of its wild congener, and with much consideration has exchanged the vulturine leg-bones of its primitive ancestor for delicate shanks, replacing muscle and sinew with flesh, and padding its breast with an amplitude of good meat. These changes act upon the bird precisely as broadcloth and boots act upon the savage caught fresh with all his paint and tattoo. They elevate his moral tone, and give him personal consequence. He moves about as one of importance, acquires the civilized sense of property, begins to possess and assert rights, inaugurates social conventionalities and etiquette. The better he is treated the better he becomes, more self-respectful and fatter.—London Telegraph.

The American Agriculturist truly says that in enumerating the crops of the country it should be borne in mind that the boys and girls are the most important. A failure in the grain crops may be remedied by succeeding harvests, but the future prosperity of the country depends on the character of the sons and daughters of the farmers.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me."

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
153 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palesthe, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In 1875, thirteen men employed the entire working force [illegible] in the manufacture of the James Boss Gold Watch Case. Now over one hundred are employed, yet the number is constantly increasing. The reason of this increase is that, in the James Boss Gold Watch Case all the metal in sight and subject to wear is solid gold, while the remainder, which only lends strength to the case, is of stronger metal than gold, giving gold where gold is needed, and strong, elastic metal where strength and elasticity are needed, a combination producing a watch case better than solid gold and at ONE-FIFTH the cost.

Over [illegible] of these cases have been sold, and every jeweler in the country can testify to their quality and merit.

[illegible] Gold Watch Case [illegible] that natural [illegible] and I am satisfied [illegible] safely guarantee [illegible] Watch Case for many years, and the [illegible] the first ones are carrying them to-day. [illegible] I had bought a solid gold case, it would cost me twice the money. I regard them as the only cases of this kind a jeweler should sell who desires to give his customers the worth of their money or value his reputation.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt."

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew,
But the "Bull Dog" he tried
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation."

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

In cold times, not noted for gumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption,
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed.
That he did was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

DIPHTHERIA!

THE PROSTRATION which follows Diphtheria, and the persistency with which it clings to the patient, are well known to all who have had any experience with this terrible disease.

The following letter shows how the restoring and invigorating properties of overcome it, and how by vitalizing and enriching the blood it neutralizes and eradicates the poisoned matter from it, bringing to the convalescent the color, life and vigor of robust health.

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—My little girl had the diphtheria last April. The disease left her very weak, blood poor, with no appetite, and she could not walk. She rally from its effects. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA was recommended by a neighbor. After she had been taking it a few days we noticed a change for the better—she began to eat with a relish. It seemed to take out the poison the disease had left in her blood, the change being very noticeable in her face. She took it two months and fully regained her health, much to our delight. We now recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA with a great deal of pleasure. Very truly yours,

J. R. SMITH,

Dr. AB. MESEROLE, No. 96 John St., New York.

The Youth of Our Land.

There really ought to be some law against the sale of dime novels to young boys. Instances occur almost daily where the minds of young boys have become so distorted by reading trash that they are ready to slaughter their fellow beings in large quantities. A boy who reads about some avenger of the prairie who chops and splits his cord and a half of Indians regular every day, or some pirate whose scuppers run off enough blood every minute to make a hundred dollars worth of blood sausage, gets into an abnormal condition of mind and is wholly unfit for the solid work and low wages of real, every day life.

He begins to accumulate pistols, daggers, and other old junk, and longs to run a poniard into some false Spaniard, and twist it around, while he hisses through his set teeth some drivel that he has read in a novel. Such a boy will not hoe corn. Near Peru, in Illinois, the other day, a sheriff found a cave where a number of these boys, whose minds had become inflated, had established a sort of pirate's glen. The pirates were not at home, being away probably on an expedition to capture a dark-eyed Spanish beauty, or a bantam or shanghai beauty, and the sheriff entered the place and took an account of stock. All around were the sinister looking weapons of death, and the treasures and spoils of war, and among them were twelve bottles of lemon beer. This in itself ought to teach boy that there is no such thing as realizing what novels tell about. There never was a novel yet that told about the duke pacing back and forth with a clouded brow, in the elegant drawing room of his castle, and then going to the sideboard and draining a flagon of lemon beer. Not any. The duke always drains a flagon of fine old Rhenish wine, seven hundred years old, before he sets out to mutilate a couple of townships of people. A boy ought to see by this that if he is going to try and follow the duke's example he will have to use old Rhenish wine instead of lemon beer. And where would be the fun in slaughtering those two townships of people with a skin full of lemon beer or pop? It would be insipid. And not only that, but ridiculous. Suppose the duke should draw his rapier to run a person through the body, and just as he was about to say, "Die, villain," the gas from the lemon beer should come up in his nose. He would feel like a fool. A boy who reads a novel, and becomes all wrought up and excited, never thinks of this. Neither does he think who it is that writes the novel. If he could see the author of the novel—who is some poor devil in a New York garret, who has starved himself half to death for money to buy whisky, and who changes his quarters every month to save rent—he would be ashamed to be seen reading such stuff. The poor broken down scribbler who writes about the brilliant diamonds of inestimable value that flashed upon the bosom of the countess, is probably wearing a sheet of writing paper for a shirt front.—Peck's

The merits of ATHLOPHOROS as a specific for Rheumatic and Neuralgic affections have been proved over a range of territory as wide as our Continent. It never fails, no matter what the climate or atmospheric conditions. Here is a significant voice from the Northwest. Mr. John S. Something for all the Preachers

Rev. R. H. Farrell, D.D., editor of the Iowa Methodist, says editorially, in the November 1883 number of his paper: "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that, by a thorough course of treatment, it will cure nine of every case of catarrh. Ministers, as a class, are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly." Not a liquid nor a snuff. Applied to nostrils with the finger.

What Has It Done for You?

The sceptical Mr. Bradlaugh was once lecturing in a village in the north of England, and at the close challenged discussion. Who should accept the challange but an old bent woman, in the most antiquated attire, who went up to the lecturer and said: "Sir, I have a question to put to you." "Well, my good woman, what is it?" "Ten years ago," she said, "I was left a widow, with eight children unprovided for, and nothing to call my own but this Bible. By its direction, and looking up to God for strength, I have been enabled to feed myself and family. I am now tottering to the grave; but I am perfectly happy, because I look forward to a life of immortality with Jesus in heaven. That's what my religion has done for me. What has your way of thinking done for you?" "Well, my good lady," stammered the lecturer, "I don't want to disturb your comfort;" but—"Oh! that's not the question," interposed the woman; "keep to the point, sir. What has your way of thinking done for you?" The infidel endeavored to shirk the matter again, the feeling of the meeting gave vent in uproarious applause, and Mr. Bradlaugh had to go away discomfitted by an old woman.—The Lutheran.

A GOOD INVESEMENT.—One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window and I got a bottle. After she had taken it a week she had a rousing appetite, and did everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time." Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

Many whose blood had become poisoned from various causes, and whose ill health was indicated by pimples, sore feelings, aches, pains, urinary sediments, catarrh and inflammation of the mucous membrane, constipation, dyspepsia, bad dreams, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc., have been restored to perfect health by using Dr. Guysott' Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It is the only true blood purifier and strengthener of mind and body. No other remedy equals it.

During a political campaign in Michigan a well-known lawyer was addressing an audience composed principally of farmers in Gratiot county, in order to win their confidence, he said: "My friends, my sympathies have always been with the tillers of the soil. My father was a practical farmer, and so was my grandfather before him. I was myself reared on a farm, and was, so to speak, born between two stalks of corn." Here the speaker was rudely interrupted by some one in the audience, who exclaimed: "A pumpkin, by jingo!"

A complete cure for that debilitating drain that indicates a weakness of the urinary organs, nasal catarrh and other evidences of a deceased mucous membrane can be found in the use of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Don't be frightened by the advertisements of quack doctors. This remedy will purify the blood, strengthen the parts affected, heal all irritation of the mucous membrane, and remove every symptom of the disorders. It is a sure cure for nervous debility and general ill health.

POSTAGE STAMPS.—There are about six thousand different descriptions of postage stamps in existence. The museum of the Berlin Post Office alone contains between four and five thousand specimens, of which half are from Europe, and the remainder divided between Asia, Africa, America and Australia. What country carries off the palm for absurdity and grotesqueness of artistic design and inferiority of execution we are not told, but if the collection is faithfully representative the variety of ugliness must be considerable. Some of the stamps, it appears, bear coats of arms and other emblems, impartially borrowed from the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth—stars, earthquakes, horses, serpents, railway trains, elephants and other "fearful wildfowl." There are, moreover, the effigies of five emperors, eighteen kings, three queens, one grand duke, several inferior titled rulers, and many presidents. In so many countries and nationalities some really attractive specimens must have been elaborated.

One Suffering Soul Happy.

"I can send one suffering soul to you." Writes James Corbin, of Washington, Ill., "I will be happy. Samaritan Nervine cured me, and will cure all cases of fits." $1,50.

I remarked to an old farmer back in the country, whom I had not seen for several years, and whose farm, in the incantime, had improved wonderfully, that his place was so changed I hardly knew it. "Yes," said he, "I've been fixin' up a little. The old woman pestered me to death about the garden, and so I slicked it up a little, and fixed about the house, and it looked so nice I went at the farm fences and the brush, and saved more manure, and kept killing the weeds, and the crops got better, and so I kept going on, and things do look pretty good now. Wife takes a paper, and I take one, and I get time to read it too, and I used to think that I hadn't time for anything." And so he ran on, seemingly much pleased with what he had done, and his life and his home without doubt the happier for it. Examples of a like kind may be found all over the country.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is unlike any similar remedy as it is taken internally. For sale by all druggists at 75c bottle.

A GATE WITHOUT HINGES.—A subscriber in Pennsylvania sends a description of a gate which is without hinges. It turns upon a pin or French round iron, fixed in a block of wood or a stone, under the heel post, and a pin bent to a proper shape, fitted in the top of the heel post. This method of hanging a gate is cheap, simple, and more secure than to use hinges.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gents—I feel it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—Rheumatic Syrup"—to all who are suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia or kidney difficulty.

I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, caused by kidney difficulty, and have been treated by our best physicians, but they failed to reach my case or benefit me in the least.

I saw in the Auburn papers the names of a number who had been permanently cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, and, being acquainted with many of them, I was induced to try it, and to my surprise I found that all pain ceased before I had finished the second bottle. I continued its use for a time, and to-day I am well as ever and feel no more pain or trouble with my kidneys. It has been several months since I discontinued its use, so I know it is a permanent cure in my case.

I can testify that Rheumatic Syrup will do all you claim for it. I am yours truly,

MRS. HATTIE PADDOCK.

Indian Names in Wisconsin.

Our readers are aware that most of the names of places in this vicinity are derived from the Indian tongue, some of them having been altered somewhat for the sake of euphony, as, for instance, Peshtigo for Pe-shet-i-go. We interviewed our old friend Captain Powell, the other day, who is well along in years, and was born here, and is almost as familiar with the Indian language as the Indians themselves, and he gave us the following as the significations of some of the names of the places in this vicinity:

Suamico—The yellow sand.
Oconto—The place of the pickerel.
Pensaukee—The place of the brants.
Peshtigo—Snapping turtle.
Menominee—Wild rice.
Menekaune—The place where the lodges are; literally, the village.
Escanaba—A flat rock.
Manitowoc—The dwelling of the spirit.
Kewaunee—The name of a kind of duck.

Thus it will be seen that the Indians named places after some peculiarity of the location; or, as in the case of Manitowoc, after some superstition. Most of the American names are utterly meaningless, as applied to the locality, and we like the Indian plan the best.

Take for instance, Appleton, Seymour, New London, Preble, etc., which mean no idea whatever. Bellevue is better, but it is French, and is duplicated in other languages, as, for instance, Bucna Vista, in Spanish. Fond du Lac is good and conveys an idea.

Oshkosh perpetuates the name of an Indian chief, and Marinette that of an Indian woman, and both are very good.—Green Bay Advocate.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best med'cine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle.

Canning Fruit.

In canning fruit it is wise to use a good deal of sugar. Plain canned fruit is apt to turn, and does not retain its flavor so when made a little rich. If our housekeepers would take as much pains in making preserves as the French do, they would find themselves amply rewarded when in the winter, they turn out the beautiful clear fruit, always in perfect shape. To preserve fruit in the French method it is necessary to make a clear syrup first, which can be done by melting two pounds of the best sugar with a pint of water, using a white porcelain kettle, and the slightly beaten white of one egg before the syrup becomes hot; let it boil, and skim it until no scum ceases to appear. Then put in the fully selected fruit, a few at a time, opening carefully that they do not break, and removing one at a time as soon as they become clear. When these are put in jars and the syrup poured over them, fruit will make glad the most [illegible]

Gents—I have been very low, and have tried everything to no avail. My stomach was so bad I could not digest food enough to keep me alive. I commenced to use your Hop Bitters, and now am able to do my work, and I can't say your Hop Bitters too much for me. I commenced with a little, I did, and now am around, and constantly improving, and am nearly as strong as ever.
W. H. Weiler.

It is said by a well known Illinois editor that "The average western farmer toils hard early and late, often depriving himself of needed rest and sleep—for what? To raise corn. For what? To feed hogs. For what? To get money with which to buy more land. For what? To raise more corn. For what? To feed more hogs. For what? To buy more land. And what does he want with more land? Why, he wishes to raise more corn to feed more hogs to buy more land to raise more corn to feed more hogs—and in this circle he moves, until the Almighty stops this foolish proceeding."

Fun is Far Better than Physic.

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. They would be more healthy, live longer and enjoy life thoroughly if they used Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all blood disorders, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, removes pimples, and is a perfect tonic. Can be taken by the most delicate. Only 50c a bottle, of Baker & Hall.

A bowl of good pea soup is as satisfying as a hearty dinner on a cold day. To make a gallon of it, wash a pint of peas and soak them over night; then boil in five pints of water, gently simmering three hours or so, until thoroughly soft. With a potato-masher rub the soup through a colander or wire sieve. A pound of beef or ham bone may be boiled with the peas. The soup may be seasoned in various ways—with onions, cloves, pepper, etc.

There is nothing to equal Ayer's sarsaparilla for purifying the blood, and as a spring medicine.

THE CROUCH TRAGEDY.

Detectives from Pinkerton's Agency have been at work upon the Crouch mystery for the past few days, and on Saturday last, Judd Crouch and Dan Holcomb were arrested charged with the murders. We gather a few items from the Jackson Patriot showing the present situation of affairs:

By permission of the sheriff a Patriot reporter interviewed both Mr. Holcomb and Judd in the prison. He was first conducted by Turnkey Evans to the apartment of Mr. Holcomb who occupied a grated room on the second story. He appeared quite at ease, and his manner was marked by an air of patience and hopefulness. In answer to a question as to what he thought would be the result of the examination on Friday next, he replied, "I have no fears." Mr. Holcomb then stated in reply to different questions in substance about as follows: "I have expected this for some time. I do not blame the officers. In fact I don't see how they could have done otherwise. The press, as a rule, and public sentiment have tried, judged and condemned. Since I have been here I have come to consider my arrest as probably the best thing that could have happened to me. It will serve to bring tangibly forward every jot of evidence that can be adduced and will give me an opportunity of either explaining or refuting it. Of course I feel my position. It is very embarrassing, but my chief grief is for my daughter. In regard to bloody clothes stated to have been found, that is a matter that can easily be explained, they were the property of the late James Foy and were worn by him when killing pigs last fall. The letters, papers, bonds, mortgages, etc., they are welcome to examine. The 39-caliber revolver is the one that I have already acknowledged as mine and stated under oath at the Foy inquest that I had purchased it at Fuller, Barnard & Smith's.

"Mr. Holcomb, who do you think did the killing on the night of November 21, 1883?"

"That I do not know, but I have always thought and still think, that the woman Reese knows more than she has ever divulged, for was it not proven that just before the storm came on she was up and closed her window; and it was very shortly after that the Negro Bolles heard the shots."

"Have you any statement to make that you would wish made public?"

"I have none. I only say that I am glad that the arrest has taken place and I court investigation."

By the kindness of Mr. Evans the reporter was allowed to see Judd in the office of the jail. He was as cool and collected as usual and said, "though this affair is a terrible one, yet I feel more for pa (meaning Mr. Holcomb) than for myself, as I can stand it better, and feel more for Edith than either of us, she never had a care in the world until the murder, and since then blow has followed blow in quick succession. The rumor is said to be going around that a diary of mine has been found in which, under date of Nov. 21, '83 I had written that I had killed Polley. The fact of the matter is I never kept a diary in my life. I telegraphed on Saturday night to my brother Captain Crouch and to-day I learn that the telegram has been received at the ranch in Texas. I know that he will come as quickly as steam will bring him. He was to have been here anyway about the middle of next month. I have no fear of the result and don't think this affair will go any further than the examination on Friday next. I said on the morning after the murder that the deed was done by some one who had followed Polley and I have never since had reason to change my opinion. I did not expect this arrest and was considerably taken by surprise, but a time like this is not for repining, but for a man to keep his courage to the sticking point. You can say to the public through the Patriot that I am in good health and spirits and will fight this thing thro." It was incidentally mentioned that a lady had nearly been accidentally shot and Judd laughingly called on turnkey Evans to certify that he was in jail at the time and consequently did'nt do the shooting.

Portraits of three healthy, happy children, adorn the colored lithographic title-page of "Hood's Latest," a handsome little eight page periodical, published by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., proprietors of the successful medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla. It also gives an abundance of humorous and other reading matter. Copies free at drug stores, or by addressing the publishers.

Adrian Times: Andrew J. Marvin has purchased a half interest in the old Morenci woolen mills building, and as yet, the good people of the village have been unable to fathom his purpose in doing so. "Andy" has a head, and did it ever occur to them that he is in the milling business himself in that section, and don't want a roller mill put into the newly purchased building until he is able to do it himself?

OFFICIAL APPEAL.

Action of the Philadelphia Bar on the Judicial Robe Question.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—The stated meeting of the Philadelphia Law Association at the Law Library yesterday afternoon took the expected action which is likely to result in the Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania wearing robes when on the bench. The association met at 3:20 p. m., the attendance numbering about twenty members of the bar. Chancellor George W. Biddle occupied the chair. Hon. Richard Vaux offered the following:

"WHEREAS, The judicial ermine, or robes of office have always been identified with the administration of justice, since courts were instituted to protect the liberties, rights and properties of the people; and

WHEREAS, The highest judicial tribunal of the United States has maintained the use of these judicial robes as proper insignia of the judicial presence; therefore

Resolved, That the Law Association of Philadelphia respectfully suggest to the honorable the Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, that it would be eminently proper for them to adopt judicial robes, and that they be requested to wear them during the sessions of the court.

There was no discussion of the resolution, those present seeming to assent at once to its propriety, and it was referred to a committee to report at the next meeting. Every member of the bar who was asked declared himself in favor of robing the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

A Disastrous Fire.

UTICA, N. Y., March 3.—The fire that was discovered yesterday morning at an early hour in the new shoe manufactory of H. J. Holbrook & Co., Catherine street, proved the most destructive in the history of Utica. The Holbrook building, M. B. Delong's furniture house, and James Rockwell's clothing house, on Catharine Street; M. C. & E. D. Comstock's large storehouse on the Erie Canal, the Utica City National Bank, Newell & Sons, paper and glass dealers, the Utica Observer building and office, Comstock Brothers' wholesale house, C. H. Sayers' hardware store, and Edward Martin's gas fitting and plumbing store, from No. 109 to No. 123 inclusive, on Genesee street, were totally destroyed, with most of their contents. The Utica Observer saved its files and but little else. The weather was intensely cold. Assistance was rendered by the fire departments of Little Falls, Rome, and Whitestown. The flames caught in the First National Bank building across Catherine street, and in the cornices on the west side of Genesee street, but were extinguished with small loss. Buckley & Co. and H. Barnard & Son, whose stores extend through from Genesee to Catherine street, were damaged by water. J. S. & M. Peckham, stoves and nica, adjoining Delong's building, was damaged somewhat, but was insured.

Brutal Prize Fight.

TORONTO, Ont., March 4.—A brutal boxing match took place here Friday night between Bittle and Kerman. Eight rounds were fought, at the end of which Bittle drew blood from his adversary's face, which blinded him for a time. The referee called time, but could not make himself heard, and Bittle struck Kerman again, and knocked him off the stage. Kerman's friends threw him in the ring again, and Bittle knocked him into a chair and was about to hit him again when the referee interfered. Both the men were thoroughly exhausted and badly cut up. A mob rushed upon the stage and threatened the referee when he spoke of reserving his decision. He then announced it, giving fifty-three points to Keenan and forty-two to Bittle.

Arranging for the National Colored Convention.

PITTSBURGH, March 4.—Rev. C. S. Smith, of Bloomington, Illinois, Chairman of the Colored State Central Committee of that State, arrived here to complete arrangements for the National Colored Convention to be held here in April. Rev. Smith says the convention will be in session several days and a secret session will adopt an address demanding recognition from the people and better protection for the colored race in the South. The address will be issued purposely before the two National conventions, and colored people will wait to see what is done. About two hundred and fifty delegates will be present.

Midget and Musician Mated.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 4.—Miss Lillie Sanville, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a midget, who has been on exhibition at a museum in this city, was married Sunday to Courtney Savage, a musician of McConnellsville, O. The little lady is well known among the show people of the country. She is twenty-three years old and weighs fifty-five pounds.

Shot His Father.

RICHMONT, March 4.—Moses M. Ellick, a dry goods merchant, was fatally shot yesterday morning by his son Moses, who fired four shots at his father, two taking effect in the back. He was arrested while in the act of shooting. Ill treatment of his mother and other domestic troubles is the alleged cause of the tragedy.

Three Men Killed by an Explosion.

WILKESBARRE, PA., March 4.—The boilers in the California Saw Mill at Bear Creek exploded yesterday morning, demolishing the building and killing Rudolph Sipler, Whitney Whitebread and Jesse Kneecht. The bodies were blown several hundred feet. Loss $2,000.

Mexican Tariff on American Corn.

LAREDO, March 4.—Many heavy shipments of corn have recently been made from Laredo to the interior of Mexico. Yesterday an official notice was received that the City of Saltillo had imposed a tax of sixteen cents per bushel on all American corn imported into that city.

Big Strike in the Sunday Creek Valley.

COLUMBUS, March 4.—The drivers in all the mines on the Ohio Central road in Sunday Creek Valley have struck against a reduction from $2 to $1.75 per day and over 1,000 miners are out in consequence and will support the drivers.

Contractor Hall in Canada.

TORONTO, March 4.—B. W. Hall, the Chicago contractor, who skipped from there with $3,000 due his employes, is here and defies the United States authorities to extradite him.

Canadian Oil Refiners Want Protection.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 4.—The Canadian oil refiners are requesting the Minister of Finance to grant further protection to that industry or they will be unable to keep trade up to its present standing.

GONE WRONG.

A Prominent Business of Buffalo Becomes a Defaulter.

BUFFALO, March 4.—There is considerable excitement in commercial and social circles over the reported defalcation of a hitherto honored citizen, one who had, until the writing of this, held the confidence and esteem of the public. The man referred to is John W. Hawkins, United States inspector of Lumber, and confidential secretary of Nelson Holland, an extensive lumber dealer. Mr. Hawkins is accused of being a defaulter to the extent of $50,000. The exact amount is not known. The government accounts are supposed to be all right, although no investigation has been made. Mr. Hawkins is lying ill at his home on West Huron Street. The matter has been kept a profound secret up to the present time, mainly on account of the sympathy of his family. Upon investigation by a reporter this afternoon, it was ascertained that Mr. Hawkins has held the place of confidential clerk and private secretary of Mr. Holland for eighteen or nineteen years. He had been implicitly trusted by his employer, who valued him highly. It was in the handling of private financial accounts that the opportunities for theft occurred. It was comparatively easy for a clever accountant to cover up his tracks. Speculation in bucket shops was the first step, it is said, on Hawkin's road to ruin. He lost, and sought to recover, and was sometimes successful. He invested in real estate in order to be able to make good the deficiency. He moved in good society, became a prominent member of one of our city churches, and was looked upon as a highly prosperous citizen. His wife is an estimable lady, and his daughter is a charming girl of fourteen. The blow is a terrible one for those ladies, and for a sister of Mr. Hawkins, who is a teacher in the public school. Mr. Holland will not prosecute Hawkins, but will seek to recover something from the real estate and other securities which Hawkins held when the discovery was made a day or two ago.

The Texas Pacific Trouble.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Senate Committee on Public Lands decided by nearly a unanimous vote in favor of the forfeiture of the Texas Pacific territorial land grant assigned to the Southern Pacific Railway Company. A motion was then made to restore the land to the public domain, and pending action the committee adjourned.

To restore the lands immediately to the public domain without other action than is provided for in the House bill would in the opinion of some members of the committee leave the lands subject to appropriation under the existing laws for speculative purposes. It is proposed to consider and perhaps amend certain features of the House bill so as to make sure that the lands will be available for no other purpose than actual settlement. A special meeting will probably be called within a day or two to dispose of the matter.

Fires in February.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The Daily Commercial Bulletin publishes the usual monthly fire record, showing that in February there were 181 fires, where the loss was between $10,000 and $200,000, with one other fire of $500,000. Adding the January fire loss this makes, for the two months, $19,000,000, the loss in January being $12,000,000, and that of February $7,000,000. There were only eight fires in February, where the loss reached, or exceeded $100,000; but there were twenty-six destructive fires which ranged between $50,000 and $100,000.

Anthony Comstock After Frank Tousey.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Frank Tousey, publisher, was arrested last night on a warrant issued by Justice Duffy on complaint of Anthony Comstock, on the charge that he had violated the law in reprinting the book entitled "Memories of George IV.," which, it was claimed, was injurious to the morals of the community. His bail was fixed at $500, and he was released. Sinclair Tousey, of the American News Company, the young man's uncle, became his bondsman.

Important Legal Tender Decision.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A decision was rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday afternoon in the long-pending legal tender case of Jaillard vs. Greenman. The Court holds that the legal tender act of March 31, 1878, is valid and constitutional, and that the Treasury notes reissued under it are good and legal tender in payment of all debts. The opinion was by Justice Gray, Justice Field dissenting.

Muldoon Wins.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—The Muldoon-Bauer Graeco-Roman wrestling match was held last evening at Mechanics' Pavilion for $500 a side. Bauer won the first fall in eighteen minutes, Muldoon the second in five minutes and twenty seconds. The third was won by Muldoon in twelve minutes and ten seconds. Both were trained to 185 pounds. A match was arranged between Whistler and Muldoon for $1,000 a side.

After Seven Years' Idleness.

BOSTON, March 4.—After seven years' idleness, the larger furnace of the South Boston Iron Works was lighted up Saturday for casting a 12-inch rifle mortar for the United Stater Ordnance Department. This will be the first of a lot of five heavy experimental guns authorized by the last Congress.

Bouncing the Chinese.

BOSTON, March 4.—The drying house of the Middlesex bleachery and dye works burned yesterday morning. Loss $30,000.

New Prolific Tree Bean.

Having raised them for main crop the past season, I can conscientiously give them the following recommend: On good soil they will yield an average of about 150 pods to the tree, 6 or 7 grains to the pod, and 60 bushels to the acre if planted AS DIRECTED. They closely resemble the Navy Bean, cook in much less time than the Navy, are very white, and of excellent flavor. Having but one stalk in a hill they are much easier cultivated than five to seven stalks of any common variety, and can be left in the hill until all are fully matured, thereby avoiding liability to mould. They should be planted as soon as danger from frost is over, in rows two feet apart, and 15 or 18 inches in the row, more than one stalk in a hill will not do, and if more is planted, thin when two inches high to one plant in a hill, and they will completely cover the ground. About four quarts plants an acre. Try them and for main crop you will grow no other. Net price per quart, 25 cents.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The March number is, we think, one of the best yet issued of this deservedly favorite magazine. The 128 quarto pages are filled with choice, entertaining and instructive literature, and there are over 100 handsome embellishments, besides a very tasteful colored plate frontispiece, "A Wood Nymph." The articles embrace varied subjects, and are by popular writers. "Soudan and its Complications," "Napoleon's Marshals," "Living Homes," "The New York Negro Plot of 1741," etc., are exceedingly interesting. Etta W. Pierce's serial, "A Dark Deed," is continued; and there are short stories, sketches, etc., by Nathan D. Urner, Isabella Crawford, N. Robinson, Etta W. Pierce, K. V. Hastings, and others. There are poems of great merit, and a comprehensive miscellany of pleasant reading matter. The price of a single number is 25 cts, and the yearly subscription $2,50, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, N. Y.

Bulwer Lytton's Bridge.

Where it Touches the Shores and the Great Columns in Midstream.

"What a beautiful bridge between old age and childhood is religion. How intuitively the child begins with prayer and worship on entering life, and how intuitively, on quitting life, the old man turns back to prayer and worship, putting himself again side by side with the infant," remarks Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, in his "Strange Story."

Yes, but between its distant abutments the bridge of life has many high and awful arches, through which the wild waters dash and roar in wrath and desolation. Prayer and worship do not sustain these. Nature's solid rocks must lie unshaken beneath and human art and skill must rear and solidify the structure overhead. God's will is best exemplified in the laws He has made for the creatures whom he has placed under their control. Neither the child's trustful "Our Father," nor the old man's "Forget me not in the midst of mine infirmities," will alter this by the weight of a single grain.

Science and art are first—then faith and prayer—is the order of Heaven itself. Divinity heals through its agents, and these agents are the discoveries of man; not the vague announcements of prophets or seers. Is life a burden to you? Does time drag? Is your power to cope with life's problem and duties weakened? You are not well. Your blood is sluggish and tainted, perhaps; or some important organ is torpid or overworked. The fact may have taken the form of dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, malaria, pains in the stomach, chronic headache, or any of a dozen other ills. PARKER'S TONIC will invigorate those who have been shut up in damp, fetid cells. It is powerful, pure, delicious, scientific, safe—the keystone of the central arch of the bridge of life.

The return leap year party at Clinton, on Monday evening of last week, was a grand success.

M. P. Brown has a new card in this week's HERALD, setting forth the advantages of his ground floor gallery.

R. M. Boyd of Raisin had a beautiful cradle presented to him last Tuesday evening by an enthusiastic neighbor, as a gentle reminder of what is expected of him in the future.

We have a copy of the Miami Helmet, which announces that L. F. Wheeler's Rambles will be given in Piqua, Ohio, for the benefit of the flood sufferers. Wheeler's big lantern is useful wherever it goes.

D. P. Anthony received a little Orange stalk the other day from Dr. Hause of Florida, which contained 13 matured oranges. It seemed hardly possible that so large a number could be held on so small a stem.

A. W. Mills has a new book on sale entitled The People's Directory and Every day Encyclopedia. It is a book of 709 pages containing a vast amount of useful information for the counting room or household. It ought to have a large sale. We should call it a first rate book for agents to handle.

S. W. Temple says he has got the best sash and door machinery in the market, and that he is prepared to make all kinds and size of sash and doors, on short notice and in the best workmanlike manner. Give him a call. Remember the place, S. W. Temple's New Brick Planing Mill.—Office on Shawnee Street.

Clinton News: Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Taylor, of Franklin, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage last Wednesday, Feb. 20th, with a pleasant gathering at their home of the family and relatives. Mr. Taylor is one of the pioneers of the town, having settled upon the farm which he now owns and which at that time was covered with woods, fifty-two years ago.

A large party of A. D. Hall's neighbors to the number of eighty gave him a surprise last Tuesday evening. The party was gotten up by, Uncle Billy Brezee, assisted by Mrs. Geo. Heesen, who are adepts at such work. The old mansion was flung open to the guests from cellar to garret, and resounded with merrymakers until a late hour. Mr. Hall passed the ordeal valiantly. Who will be the next victim?

A meeting will be held in the Presbyterian church of this place on Thursday evening, March 13th, at 7:30 to present the claims of Lincoln University, Pen., as an institution for the education of teachers and preachers of and for the colored race. Rev. Dr. Chester of Cincinnati, financial agent of the University and Rev. Dr. Bingham of the Board of Trustees will be present, and addresses will be made by several ministers, all of them graduates of the University.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 6, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

The village election was about unanimous last Monday.

The Adrian Press is moving into its new building this week.

If you have real estate to sell, put a notice in the HERALD. It will pay you.

Zero weather the first week in March is something unusual in this latitude.

The Methodists of Clinton are raising money with which to build a new parsonage.

Jas. H. Aten has rented his farm and has moved into the village. Glad to have him come.

Uncle Josiah has made another convert. He has appointed Williard Stearns, of the Adrian Press, as State Commissioner to the World's fair at San Francisco.

Blissfield Advance: Internal disturbances, Cupid, and a lack of stick-to-a-tiveness may prevent the Blissfield orchestra from becoming the best in the county.

The two enterprising young men of Hudson, who were accused of the highway robbery of two farmers have been held for trial, and in default of $3,000 bail were jailed.

New Carpets.—We have just opened our New Spring Styles of Carpets—a large assortment, handsome patterns at very low prices.

W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

James Updike, Sr., who was severely injured last week is improving rapidly. He has got so much better that he wants to smoke, which is a very favorable symptom.

J. W. Patterson having sold part of his farm will hold a public vendue on the premises Thursday, March 27th, and some of the best stock in Lenawee county will be sold at that time.

Among the graduates of the Detroit Medical College, who received their diplomas last week, we find the name of John B. Haynes, who was for many months the faithful night watch of Tecumseh.

Mrs. H. E. Stout has removed her millinery stock of goods to the rooms over Anderson's Dry Goods Store, formerly occupied by Mary Dingman, where she would be pleased to see all her old friends.

Dr. John B. Haynes has decided to locate in Dundee and will begin practice at once. We congratulate Dundee upon this addition to her role of professional men, and wish the Doctor abundant success.

A. S. Kedsie, the veteran editor of the Grand Haven Herald, was in town Tuesday and favored us with a call. We have heard a good deal of Bro. Kedsie but never before had the pleasure of a chat with him.

Met Conklin begins the reaper campaign in good season, and swings out a card this week for the celebrated Walter A. Wood Reapers and Binders. These machines still lead the list among harvesting machinery.

Clinton News: A few months ago we had but one local wheat buyer.—Now we have four, besides E. G. Cook, of Tecumseh. And E. G. Cook can buy more wheat in one day than all the rest of them combined can in three.

Rev. C. E. Conley will be in Brooklyn next Sunday assisting in revival meetings. Rev. J. W. Payne, of Clinton, will occupy his pulpit in this village on Sunday morning, and Rev. E. J. Brownson, of Napoleon, in the evening.

Tecumseh has a free trade club, officered as follows:

President—J. C. Eccles.
Secretary—Dr. S. Catlin.
Treasurer—Frank Bumann.

The club intends to go in and do some missionary work during the coming campaign.

It seems to be a well settled principle now that personal property is liable for drain taxes the same as all other taxes, and that township treasurers have no right to return lands for drain taxes until the proper effort has been made to collect from personal property.

Leap year is doing its work. Last evening Mr. Robert M. Boyd, of Raisin, one of our most promising bachelors, lead to the marriage altar Miss Anna M. Brown. The congratulations extended to the happy couple will not be mere formalities but genuine wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

Adrian Press: B. F. Hilton, of Deerfield, warns all hunters to keep off his premises or they will hunt bail in short order. He especially protests against the utter disregard some of the chaps have for the Sabbath, and if they do not want to get into trouble they better keep out of Hilton's woods, and to church instead.

A citizen met President-elect Root last Monday evening and thus accosted him: "I congratulate you, Jerry, upon your official promotion. Have you any cigars about your person?" "No," said Mr. Root, "I have no cigars in stock now, but I propose to divide my official salary with my friends."

Mr. J. S. Gilman is going to start a harness shop at Holloway.

The Swedish Lady quartette give a concert in Clinton this week.

O. W. Bean has returned from a prospecting tour down in Texas.

A leap year return party will be given at Manchester on Wednesday evening, March 12th. Arrangements are making for a brilliant event.

People desirous of purchasing either farms or village property would do well to call at the HERALD office. We have several good bargains on our books.

Morenci Observer: [illegible] order for the man who utterly refuses to pay his village taxes to complain about the extravagance of our village board? Should he not either "put up or shut up?"

Evening News: A reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Hicks, at Au Sable, Feb. 29th, which was the most brilliant social event of the season. The twain thus honored had been married but a few days before.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hicks here in Tecumseh will be glad to learn of the cordial reception given them in their new home. May their future be as bright as their present prospects are.

Last Sunday evening Justice Pennington was called to the office of John Kellogg, to unite in marriage Mr. Kellogg's niece, Etta Kellogg, and a gentleman from Leslie, whose name we have not learned. The peculiar feature of the circumstance was that the parties had never met previous to the occasion, and knew each other only by exchange of Photos.—Macon Cor. Clinton News.

Clinton News: Last Friday evening the ladies of St. John's church gave a New England supper at Town Hall for the benefit of the society.—The bill of fare was pork and beans, doughnuts, pumpkin pies, and other such substantial viands as the New England supper is commonly supposed to comprise, served by young ladies and gentlemen in the picturesque fashions of ye olden time,—and all for the exhorbitant price of ten cents.

Maggie Mitchell.

On Saturday evening, March 8th, Miss Maggie Mitchell, justly styled "America's favorite actress" will produce the charming drama "Little Barefoot" at the Adrian Opera House. The reputation of this great actress is too well known to make any comments from us necessary, while the play is one of the most popular in her repertoire. Her appearance will be the dramatic event of the season in Adrian, and from present indications she will be greeted with a packed house, excursions being run 62 miles for the accommodation of people on the Wabash railroad who desire to attend the performance. The sale of seats opens at Adrian, Thursday morning, March 6th, and those of our citizens desiring to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Miss Mitchell, can secure their seats by telephone or letter to C. M. Croswell Jr., Manager Opera House, Adrian, the scale of prices being 50, 75 and $1.

THE VILLAGE ELECTION.

The corporation election last Monday was a very quiet affair, there being but one ticket in the field. There was no contest in the Saturday caucus, and the ticket then nominated was elected on Monday without opposition. In fact our village affairs are now in such a satisfactory condition that there is no chance for fault finding. The corporation is out of debt and has nearly $2000 on hand belonging to the contingent fund. It also has a loan of $2100 to the Cemetery bearing seven per cent interest. During the past two years, a team has been bought, a new office safe has been purchased, while the streets are in better condition than ever before. President Mills retires from his two years service as presiding officer of Council with the satisfaction of having closed a very successful administration. He has served four years on the Council, two years as trustee and two as President. During the entire time he was absent but three meetings, and for the past two years he was not absent from a single meeting, either regular or special. At the caucus he received the nomination for President again, getting 39 ballots out of 70 votes cast, but he absolutely declined, and the nomination then fell upon Mr. Jeremiah Root. Mr. Root has seen three years service on the Council and no better man for that place could be found in the village. We predict a continuance of village prosperity under his leadership. The new men chosen are all well fitted for their positions. Tecumseh has been exceedingly fortunate in her local rulers in the past, and the new council, we believe, will travel in the same path. This is in no small degree attributable to the fact that our corporation elections have been kept out of politics. Below are the names of the new officers chosen:

President—Jeremiah Root.
Recorder—John L. Schoolcraft.
Treasurer—J. Newton Satterthwaite.
Trustees for two Years—Rufus Adams, Oscar P. Bills, George W. Marsden.
Assessors—Edgar A. Tribon, Horatio Keyser.

FROM THE "BAPTIST ITEMS."

Mrs. J. Cook is now very ill.

Bro. Kirtley was ill about a week after he left Tecumseh.

Peter Waldron, Sr., has been very sick during the past two weeks.

Miss Emma Morse has been ill—some of the time seriously ill—since the first part of January.

The Adrian church has completed arrangements to enlarge its house of worship during the coming summer at a cost of about $10,000.

Brother Holmes has decided not to accept the call to the pastorate of the Kalamazoo Baptist church, and the Adrian church is jubilant.

On the 24th of January, Dea. John Margeson was called by telegram to the home of his early manhood to attend the funeral of his brother. He was absent about ten days.

Grant Garlinghouse has spent about two months this winter in his old home in the state of New York. He came back about the first of February, and was glad to get home too.

We regret to learn that Bro. Emmons Sherd will probably soon leave this region permanently. He has sold his farm and contemplates moving to Ingham County. We hope he will change his mind.

Albert Howard has been sick again with neuralgia of the heart. He is well again. This is the second attack. But the physician thinks that with proper care of himself he will eventually outgrow the difficulty. It is to be hoped so.

The February Social was entertained at the chapel by Mrs. J. Fisher, Mrs. L. G. North, Mrs. A. Stevens, Mrs. H. H. Munger, Mrs. Calvin Lawrence and Mrs. Wm. Jordan. The gathering was large and royally entertained. Receipts, $11.63.

Bro. J. K. Waldron was elected superintendent of the Clinton Baptist S. S., and Bro. Geo. P. Wright, assistant superintendent, at the beginning of the present year. It is said that these two brethren are among the most faithful members of that church.

Dr. Ferguson, of Coldwater, has purchased the drug stock of Jas. W. Patterson, of this village, and will continue the business at the old stand. Dr. F. is an earnest christian man, and a staunch Baptist. We heartily welcome him and Mrs. Ferguson to our town and to our church.

At a special meeting of the S. S. Board, held Feb. 13th, in the chapel, the resignation of A. J. Coddington, as treasurer, was accepted and Miss Carrie Osborn elected in his place.—Also the officers of the school were appointed a committee, Dr. L. G. North, chairman, to procure funds for the purchase of a new S. S. library.

Dr. Hamilton was the recipient of a very handsome present Jan. 14, in the form of a volume of Gems for the Fireside, in full Russia binding. It was accompanied by a very friendly note from the giver, Mr. A. W. Mills, expressive of good will, and hoping that when the new house is completed the new neighborly relations may be pleasant and lasting.

The pastor acting under the direction of the Special Board of Foreign Missions for Michigan, has just completed arrangements for five Foreign Missionary Institutes at as many different points in the State during the month of March, viz: At Lowell and Williamson on the 17th, at Fenton and Hillsdale on the 14th, and at Sturgis on the 26th.

The next quarterly meeting of the Home Mission circle—which will occur the last Wednesday of March—will be a praise meeting, and one in which all the sisters of the church whether present or absent, can take part in. Let each one of you, before that time, lay aside an offering to the Lord, large or small, according as He has prospered you. When the appointed day arrives, place your offering in an envelope, with some passage of scripture that is especially dear to you, or appropriate to the occasion, and either bring or send it to the church, but put no name on it. These envelopes will be opened, the scripture read and commented upon, prayer, song and remarks offered. It is hoped that the occasion will be profitable one. Come if possible, and if not—send.

On Feb. 12th Dea. Marvin Howard met with an accident which might have terminated fatally. He was driving down Chicago street, when a cutter with bells was driven past him, frightening his horse so that it became perfectly unmanageable. In spite of all his efforts to stop him he ran from near Judge Stacy's residence down to Hough & Hosmer's jewelry store, where he leaped over an unloaded sleigh. Breaking the cross-bar, he was immediately freed from the cutter, and Bro. Howard was thrown with tremendous force into the box of the sleigh. The concussion of the fall was so great that he could not breathe for some seconds. Aside from this, strange to say, he was scarcely injured at all. It was a narrow escape. The horse was immediately captured, and the cutter was injured but little aside from breaking the cross bar.

The M. & O. road will give a cheap excursion to Toledo next Saturday. Tickets will be good on the regular train leaving Battle Creek at 5:25 A. M., and Toledo at 5:30 P. M. Passengers will have seven hours in Toledo and a chance to witness Bartley Campbell's Matinee at the Wheeler Opera, in his celebrated play Siberia. Tickets will be sold at less than half fare, only 95 cents for round trip.

FARMERS' CLUB.

Friday Evening, Feb., 29th, the farmer's Social Club met according to adjournment at the residence of R. B. Gillespie. The attendance was quite large and the program was well carried out with the exception that we again had to dispense with the essay, as the essayist failed to put in an appearance.

The declamation and recitation of Garland Gillespie and Seva Gillespie were both good for persons so young, and also new beginners.

The Select Reading was a good selection, being an article on the customs and manners of the German People in the Father-land. The rest of the Program was well carried out in good taste.

The Question—"Is it going to be profitable for the farmer's of this section to continue the raising of wheat as a main crop" elicited a good deal of interest. Almost every farmer present speaking upon the subject. It was the general opinion that ours was a good wheat soil and that it is a good and sure money crop, and must take the lead. DIED.

BROOKS.—On Sunday, March 2d., Mary L., wife of William Brooks, aged 37 years.

Mr. Brooks moved from Petersburg to Tecumseh in June last and has since lived on the old P. W. Adams farm west of the village. His wife has been ill for some time but was not considered dangerous until two days before her death. A brief service was held at the house Tuesday forenoon and the remains were then taken to Matamora, Ohio, for final burial.

BASS.—At the residence of C. C. Tefft in this village on Saturday, March 1st., Silas W. Bass, aged 45 years.

The deceased was born in Marshall, Oneida Co., N. Y. June 1st., 1839, and lived on the old farm in that township until his majority. He spent two winters in Michigan teaching school in the vicinity of Tecumseh, nineteen years ago and fourteen years ago. During the past thirteen years he has lived with his father Seth Bass at Hamilton, N. Y. Upon the death of Seth Bass in Dec. last, Silas, who had been in feeble health for some months, came to this village with Mr. and Mrs. Tefft where he found a good home and loving friends to care for him in his last days. When he first came here he had strong hopes of recovery, but consumption had marked him for a victim, and he gradually failed until the end came. Silas was the youngest son of a large family, but four of whom are now left—Pitt and William Bass of Lawrence, VanBuren Co., Mrs. Harvey Hanchett of Deanville, N. Y., and Mrs. C. C. Tefft of Tecumseh. The funeral services were held at Mr. Tefft's residence last Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. H. Shepard with J. S. Strong to lead the singing. The deceased was a dutiful son, a man of generous impulses, a great lover of music, a faithful friend. His earthly sufferings are ended and he has gone to his final reward.

Right to the point

The Rev. J. E. Searles, of New York, is one of the most widely-known and highly esteemed of Methodist ministers.

Mr. Searles says: "I am impressed that it is a duty I owe to those afflicted with Rheumatism or Neuralgia, to say that a remedy has been discovered that is indeed a marvelous success. My son was greatly afflicted with Rheumatism, and suffered so severely that, at times, he was obliged to have morphine injected into his arm to get relief. While in this condition he discovered a remedy which effected immediate relief and a permanent cure. He has since furnished it to many others with the same result. I have also furnished it to a number of persons suffering with Rheumatism, and the result has been immediate relief, and a permanent cure. Among others, I cured Rev. Wm. P. Corbit, pastor of the George St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn., who recommends it warmly to his terrible disease. I will give you his own words as written to my son, wishing him to publish the fact for the benefit of others suffering with the same disease.

What Mr. Corbit Says:

"New Haven, July 24, 1882.

"Mr. Searles Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of all who are suffering with Inflammatory Rheumatism, that your medicine is infallible. I suffered for two months the most excruciating torture; lost 30 pounds of flesh, and was not out of my house for a month. I heard of your remedy, and was almost instantly relieved by it. If there is a specific for diseases of any kind, yours most certainly is for Inflammatory Rheumatism in its severest form.

"Yours most respectfully, WM. P. CORBIT,
"Pastor George St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn."

The Trouble with Our Wheat.

As the Prairie Farmer is always interested in the subject of wheat-raising, I will give its readers some of my experience in raising this crop, which dates back forty-seven years. Our country was then comparatively new, and we had no trouble in raising thirty-five and forty bushels to the acre; indeed, this was considered the average crop, though some farmers raised as high as fifty bushels and over to the acre. One case I will mention, that of Reuben Flag, Esq., of Plainfield. The land where his crop was raised was rather low and wet until drained, and before it was plowed produced a large crop of hay. Why I am so particular in describing the location and condition of the land where this crop of wheat was raised is, that it goes far to prove my theory correct, and it correct, there is no reason why we could not raise equally as large crops now as we did then.

This was the first crop after breaking up. Previous to this the tall grass had been burnt and the ashes leached on the ground, forming an alkali that had penetrated to quite a depth, and for many years bountiful crops of all kinds were raised on this ground. But now one can not be sure of ten bushels of wheat per acre on this same ground, although it has had the benefit of the barn-yard fertilizer freely applied.

I will here state that I sowed in the fall of 1845, eleven acres of wheat on ground that had but one crop of sod corn upon it after breaking up; this yielded forty-three bushels to the acre, and up to this time it has been our custom to burn our straw on the ground. We were not troubled with worms, weevils or bugs. You ask why? I answer because everything grown was so impregnated with alkali that insects could not live.

When the burning over of our prairies, as well as the burning of our straw, had become a thing of the past, then our crops commenced to fail. We began to increase the stock on our farms, carefully saving all droppings, thoroughly cleansing our barn-yards once a year, and spreading the manure thus collected upon our land. This increased the crop of straw materially, but the berry failed rapidly; insects of all descriptions made their appearance, claiming their share of the little that was raised. The correctness of these statements can be testified to by all the early settlers, farmers, I mean.

Now for the remedy: Let us bring back our land to the condition we found it in when we raised large crops, and free from insects. I would not have you burn your straw, as we need that for paper, and also for feed. Neither could we burn our hay land, but let us replenish this alkali by a liberal use of quick-lime, say four barrels to the acre. Sixteen years ago I became so convinced of the practical use of lime that I made this offer to all parties who would comply with my proposition, to-wit: I would furnish five hundred barrels of lime, no one person to have over twenty barrels, this to be sown on four acres of land and sown to wheat, with an equal amount of land sown to wheat that was not limed. In pay for which they were to give me one dollar a barrel in one year, or what surplus wheat they raised on the land that was limed over that which was not limed.

But one farmer took advantage of this offer—a German living near Wheaton. He came and got eight barrels of lime he sowed that on two acres of land, and sowed it to wheat. At the same time he also sowed two acres that was not limed. He told me there was no difference at all in the land—as the four acres were broken in one year and on one piece of ground, and had been cropped every year with the same kind of crop. He paid me for the lime before he harvested his crop, but gave me the statement of it after he had thrashed his wheat. He had twenty-two bushels and three pecks of No. 1 wheat to the acre where the lime was sown, and where the lime was not used, only between twelve and thirteen bushels to the acre—and that of an inferior quality. Where lime was used it was fully two weeks earlier. Had not the German moved to Minnesota he would have taken one hundred barrels the next year.

I have tried lime on corn with remarkable success, and I believe that if properly used, it will save our potato crop from the bug. We must use enough to thoroughly impregnate the vines.

For top dressing for tame meadows, two barrels of lime to the acre, sown as you would for wheat, and run over the ground with a light harrow, to break the grass roots. This does to grass what judicious pruning does to currant bushes. Where this has been tried the result has been satisfactory.—Cor. Prairie Farmer.

Ornamental Hedges.

It is hardly likely that attempts will again be made in most parts of the country to protect field crops by means of hedges. As wealth increases, however, more attention will be given to beautifying the premises, and ornamental hedges about small lots or so to yards will become common. A living hedge is far more beautiful than a fence made of almost any material. The plants for ornamental hedges will vary to conform to the climate of the different sections of the country. Evergreens are preferred for ornamental hedges in all places where the climate is suited to them, as they are beautiful during the entire year. The American arbor-vitæ, Norway spruce and hemlock are recommended to places where they will grow. The locust, honey locust, barberry and privet are hardy in most parts of the country, and a beautiful hedge may be made of either of them. A hedge very beautiful at the season of flowering may be formed of the lilac and common snowball. They are both quite hardy, and are easily propagated by roots and cuttings. A long sprout of either of them, if bent down, fastened in position, and covered with soil, will spread out roots and branches and furnish several plants. These plants will not form a hedge that will turn cattle, but protection against them may be furnished by barbed wires that will be hidden when the plants are covered with foliage. Ornamental hedges require considerable care, but they add greatly to the appearance of a farm, while they call for only a small expenditure of money.—Chicago Times.

—A Boston correspondent of the New York Graphic writes: "I doubt, too, if there is another city in which women have entered journalism in as large numbers as they have here. There is not a daily paper in the city, and not a weekly of any importance that has not at least one woman, and, in several cases, two or three women on the staff as reporters, editorial writers, critics or special writers."

—A poet sings: "Let me die when all is cold and drear." Now is an excellent season for the purpose, and the man who would interpose a single objection should be severely talked to. —Quite unsympathetic: Birdie McHennepin and her brother were at the seashore. "O, see that!" exclaimed Birdie. "See what?" inquired the stoical John. "Pa," said the daughter of the house to the man of the house the other evening, "What are we going to have for breakfast?" "I have ordered Lyonnaise potatoes, my child," was the father's answer. "And where does that come from, pa? Does it come from an animal, or does it grow?" "It is taken from an animal, my dear." "Oh, I know, now" after a pause to think up her natural history "then it is taken from licensees, isn't it, pa?" Pa was [illegible] enough to say "Yes."—Lowell Citizen.

A great, big, hurly fellow stepped into the editorial rooms of one of our morning contemporaries yesterday and said: "I want to clean out this office." "What, what's the trouble now?" feebly asked the editor-in-chief, turning ghastly pale. "Nothing's the trouble. I will clean out the police and scrub down the stairs for one dollar." Then the editor's face resumed its natural color, and spitting half way across the room, he shout: "Get out of here, you tramp, or I will spill you head first into the waste basket."—Philadelphia Call.

Wanted His License Back.

A gawky boy and a "gangling" girl were married by an Arkansas magistrate the other day, and shortly afterwards the boy reappeared and said: "Squire, gimme back them licenses." "I have sent them to the County Clerk's office where they properly belong," the Justice replied. "I am mighty sorry, fur I want 'em back." "What's the matter?" "Why, I don't intend to live with that gal. I never seed sich a critter, Jedge. You see her daddy gave her a cow, an' this mornin' when I went to milk the blame thing, she kicked me heels over head. I would n't er minded this, but my wife stood thar an' laughed ter kill herself. The County Clerk ken keep the papers if he wants to, but I wush you'd call that gal next time yer see him to ask I'll be dad blamed if I'm goin' to live with that gal."—Arkansaw Traveller.

SWISS MOUNTAIN GIRLS.—In these beautiful health-giving mountains one would expect to find the most beautiful and healthy-looking of all girls. Where only pure air is to be breathed, inspiring scenes to be witnessed, women should be as fair as daughters of the gods. But not so. The women in Switzerland have a prematurely worn and aged look; if at twenty they were robust and possessed of that attraction which good health bestows—at thirty they are faded and seem to take pleasure only in going through their dull and never-ending round of duty. For they do the greater share of the work in the field and in the house, and in addition rear large families. In fact they make up in usefulness what they lack in beauty.

COMPOUND OXYGEN NOT A DRUG

A NEW TREATMENT.

For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all chronic and Nervous Disorders.

A CARD.

We the undersigned, having received great and permanent benefit from the use of "COMPOUND OXYGEN," prepared and administered by Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, of Philadelphia, and being satisfied that it is a new discovery in medical science, and all that is claimed for it, considers a duty which we owe to the many thousands who are suffering from chronic and so-called "incurable" diseases to do all that we can to make its virtues known, and to inspire the public with confidence.

We have personal knowledge of Drs. Starkey & Palen. They are educated, intelligent and conscientious physicians, who will not, we are sure, make any statement which they do not know or believe to be true, nor publish any testimonial or reports of cases which are not genuine.

From Mrs. Inez Shetler,
[illegible] Wilt St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

I was confined for sixteen years with spasms of the stomach and heart and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of congestion of the head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My friends urged me to test Zoa-Phora. I did so, and it gave me complete relief. I advise all sufferers from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—Twelve graduates of Phillips Exeter Academy, N. H., have been Governors of States, the list including Cass, Everett, Butler and Dix.—Boston Post.

—The Synod of Kansas has constituted a new Presbytery of the Indian Territory, and passed a resolution to the effect that the Indian Territory should be transferred from the Foreign to the Home Board.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

—A colored school-teacher in Brooklyn thrashes his pupils and gives them a glass of water to stop their sobbing. He maintains that it is "a trick he learned in the country," and that after they have swallowed the water they can not cry.—Brooklyn (N. Y.) Eagle.

—Dr. John Hall says churches require educated men for ministers—men of social standing as indicated by dress, hospitality, money contributions, etc., and yet in a majority of cases pay them, salaries smaller than are received by postmen and policemen.—N. Y. Tribune.

—An exchange says a Harvard student has fitted up his room at a cost of $4,000. The probabilities are that he will be the poorest scholar of his class, and before old age will be glad to take a clerkship under some of the now poverty-stricken members of his class. It is a rare thing for scholarship and riches to go together. The father makes no greater mistake than when he lines the pockets of his son in college with greenbacks.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

—According to the Rocky Mountain Cell there are about 100,000 colored Catholics in this country. In answer to the question: "Why have you not colored priests to administer to colored congregations?" a leading Catholic clergymen answered "that it was the experience of his church that the colored people themselves do not take kindly to their own race. They prefer white priests, and seem to feel that they are not treated fairly unless they are given white priests."

He Won His Wager.

Two young lawyers in Boston were bantering each other concerning their shrewdness, and one, who had been distanced in boasting by his companion, at last exclaimed: "I will wager a good dinner and a bottle of wine that I can ride in the street-cars from Scollay Square to Roxbury Crossing without paying my fare."

"Oh, pooh," said the other, "any man can dodge a horse-car conductor; that is nothing."

"But I will take you along with me, and we will not dodge the conductor, but on the other hand talk with him on the way."

"Done," cried the other, and having agreed at what time and place the wager should be paid, they set out together for Scollay Square. When they reached the head of Tremont street a Back Bay car was just passing. Lawyer number one instantly made a rush for it.

"Hold on," exclaimed number two, "that's not a Tremont street car."

"Keep your tongue still and follow me," said the other, savagely, and he pulled his companion upon the front platform. They then walked leisurely through to the rear platform, where they found the conductor.

"Does this car go to Jamaica Plain?" asked number one.

"No, sir," replied the conductor; "Jamaica Plain cars start from the Tremont House."

"Oh, ah," said number one, starting to get off again: "I beg your pardon, I'm sure."

"Might as well ride down to the other car, sir," said the conductor pleasantly.

"Just as you please, thank you," responded number one affably; and so the two lawyers rode free to the Tremont House. Here they got off and quietly waited till a Tremont street car came along. Boarding this, lawyer number one asked the conductor if the car went to the Art Museum. Receiving a negative reply and implicit directions as to the car that should be taken for that place, he proceeded leisurely to get off again, followed by his astonished companion. They had gained about three rods by the maneuver, and after it had been repeated several times, the general inquiry being for a Jamaica Plain or Brookline car, a light began to break upon the mind of lawyer number two. They had worked their way to the West street gate in the Common, when the disgusted companion said to the energetic number one: "How long are you going to keep this sort of thing up?"

"Till we get to the Roxbury crossing, of course. Come along, get on the car. Does this car go to South Boston? Well, can you tell me where I can get a South Boston car?" When they had dismounted from this car, number two said quietly to his friend: "I've got tired of this thing; I guess I'll settle that wager myself," and arm in arm they proceeded back to their offices, number one looking as happy as a petted cat and number two as solemn as a clam.—Boston Globe.

A Wonder Among Widows.

A few days ago a prominent financier died in this city leaving a widow hardly half his age, whom he married for his second wife some fifteen years since. At the time of his second marriage he had several grown up children, who, as usually happens, were very angry, and insisted that his new wife had accepted him on account of his wealth. Despite the difference of her age they were in sympathy and lived happily together. She always resented the charge of mercenariness, and now that he is dead she has opened a boarding-house, resolved to take care of herself. Although her husband was held worth several millions it is given out that he left her none, in Wall street and that she will. Some of the wealthy [illegible] urged her to insist on her [illegible] but she [illegible] and innocent, with the [illegible] thought to keep [illegible] [illegible] —Boston Globe.

Beautiful Hair.

"How do you keep your little boy's hair such a beautiful golden shade?" asked a reporter of a fashionable New York lady.

"Why, that is the natural color," said the lady, somewhat indignantly, as she twined a long golden curl over her finger.

"But doesn't his hair grow darker as he grows older?" asked the reporter. "I have heard that some mothers can keep that bright gold in their children's hair all the time."

"Yes," assented the lady, "that is so. I kept the color in my little girl's hair until she was fifteen, and then she had enough vanity to take care of it herself."

"How did you do it?" asked the reporter.

"Her hair was very fine and long when she was six years old, but it began to turn dark; so every other day I washed it in soda and common soap, and when it was dry brushed it thoroughly and curled it. Once a week I rubbed the scalp with raw egg."

"Doesn't washing the hair so much make it dry?"

"Yes, if you do not brush it thoroughly, and then it is the best thing for it."

"Your children have very beautiful hair," said the reporter to a lady who sat in her drawing-room with a half-dozen children playing about her. All of them but two had light yellow or golden hair, with bangs and curls.

"Yes," she replied. "Those two little children with short hair are my sister's. I wouldn't have a child about me unless it had pretty hair; but my sister thinks differently. Teddy, the boy, insisted on having his hair cut when he was six, and he had the most beautiful yellow hair, just like spun silk; and then Elora, the little girl, cried to have her hair cut, to be like Teddy. My sister says it makes a boy more manly to have short hair, but for my part I don't see any necessity of being manly at six."

"How do you keep your children's hair so pretty?"

"Oh," she replied, "they have a French bonne who washes their hair in salt water and a little potash and puts it up in curl papers every night. The hair does not curl naturally, you know."

"Isn't the salt water injurious to the hair?"

"No, I think not, although I have often heard so; but my children have heavy hair, and they have had it washed in salt water ever since they were babies."

A lady living on Fifth avenue has a little girl with large black eyes and very yellow hair floating over her shoulders to her waist. The reporter asked her if she did not possess a very unusual style of beauty.

"Oh, no," she replied; "but I bleach her hair. I am partial to dark eyes and fair hair, so I keep her hair bleached."

"How do you accomplish it?" asked the reporter.

"I wash it in lemon-juice once a week, and the acid makes it light. My other children have all black hair, and I keep it cropped close to their heads, but Ethel is the plainest of all of them, so I thought it was well to give her some special advantage."

"Why don't you have your boy's curls cut off this warm weather?" said the reporter to a Brooklyn lady.

"Cut off my boy's beautiful hair!" she exclaimed. "O, I wouldn't do it for one hundred dollars cash."

"But it will have to come off soon," said the reporter.

"I know it, and it breaks my heart to think of it; so don't mention it to me, please."—N. Y. Cor. Utica Herald.

Frozen Water Pipes.

Those who did not thoroughly protect their water pipes before cold weather set in will be troubled this winter by having them frozen. To get up in a cold morning and find the pump frozen up, or the water in some of the leading pipes frozen so that it will not run, is not only trying to the patience of the most even-tempered man, but it is often a serious drawback on the operations of the whole household, and the important question immediately forces itself upon the head of the house: What means are to be taken to get the water to running? This must depend on the situation of the pipes that are frozen. The first thing to do is to find the particular portion of the pipe where the water is frozen; this is not always easy, but good judgment will generally detect the most probable point. If it is above ground where it can be reached, dip a bag, or any thick cloth, in hot water and immediately wind it around the pipe where it is supposed to be frozen, then pour on it boiling water to keep the cloth hot; in this way the pipe will be thawed out in a few moments; if it is not, then some other place must be tried, changing until the right place is found.

Should the pipe be under ground, and yet where the upper end can be worked from, take a lead or rubber pipe that is small enough to go inside of the frozen pipe, running it in until it strikes the ice, then into the upper end of this pipe pour boiling water, being careful to force the lead, or rubber pipe, down as fast as the ice melts, which will be very rapid. The same thing can be done from the lower end, if the lead or rubber pipe have the end in which the water is poured lifted one or two feet higher than the end that is forced against the ice. In thawing a long pipe under ground, it is sometimes necessary to work from both ends.

Pipes that cannot be reached at either end to run a pipe in, if they have a good descent, are sometimes thawed out with salt; this will take time, but will generally accomplish the object.

When one has exhausted all of his ingenuity and most of his patience, and finally succeeds in thawing out the pipes only to find them burst somewhere where it is not easily got at, then comes man's self-control over his language. The wise man is silent, but will strive to keep his thoughts directed to how he may be able to prevent another such disaster.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

—It is said that George Munro has built a publishing house nine stories high, and costing $1,000,000, out of his profits on the reprints of English books which have no copyright.—N. Y. News.

Opening the Fountains.

In numberless bulbs beneath the skin is secreted the liquid substance which gives the hair its texture, color and gloss. When this secretion stops, the hair begins at once to become dry, lustreless, brittle and gray. Is that the condition of your hair? If so, apply Parker's hair Balsam at once. It will restore the color, gloss and life by renewing the action of nature. The Balsam is not an oil, not a dye, but an elegant toilet article, highly appreciated because of its cleanliness.

Cost of Bringing up a Boy.

A clergyman who has been discoursing about boys has devoted considerable attention to the cost of them, some of that necessary individuals, and he estimates the expense of bringing a good boy, with all the advantages of city life, to the age of fifteen, at about $5,000. These figures are about doubled by the time the boy is of age, if he goes through college. A bad boy, arrived at the age mentioned, costs fully as much, even if he has not been to college, and the computation, as the reverend gentleman suggests, does not include the value of the mother's tears and father's gray hairs. Most men who have brought up boys will agree that the estimate is not too high.

The very best remedy that can be compounded from our present knowledge of drugs, for colds, coughs, asthma bronchitis, and other lung diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It has cured many cases of consumption when all other remedies had failed. A single spoonful will cure an ordinary cough or cold and give instant relief to asthma. It is soothing, healing and strengthening to throat and lungs and is very pleasant to take.

Logical deduction: She was a Boston lady of culture. She stood watching a canal boat loaded with ice, as it was being locked into the canal from Lake Champlain. "What is that boat loaded with?" "Ice," was the reply. "Oh, my!" she exclaimed, "if the horrid stuff should melt, the water would sink the boat."

The story is told of an old hunter in Michigan who lost his way in the woods a number of times while the country was new. At length he secured a pocket compass and its use was explained to him by a friend. But shortly afterward he lost his way again and lay out as usual. When found he was asked why he did not travel by the compass. He did not dare, he said. He wanted to go north, and he "tried to make the thing point north, but it wasn't no use, 'twould shake, shake, shake round and point southeast every time."

In sunshine use the brushy part;

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Wm. D. Wells and Henry Pocklington leave Ridgeway this week for Addison. Success attend them.

Mr. Sedan of Dundee is the proprietor of the meat market here.

Miss Ella Hall returned from New York City last Friday. Her friends were not expecting her for some time, hence a very pleasing surprise.

Miss Luella Wilson will teach the village school, spring and summer terms.

Mrs. George Lester died very suddenly March 6th, of apoplexy. She was a very estimable lady and leaves a very large circle of friends who sincerely mourn her loss.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

The leap year party, of which Misses, Whelan & Dibble were proprietors, held at Tuttle's Hall, Friday evening, was a complete success. Mrs. Dr. Jenkins furnished the supper to which a large number of the young people of Franklin and neighboring towns did justice. The girls displayed their ability as managers, and a better time was never enjoyed. Music by Charley Cooley and others. Now boys, a return is in order.

ADDISON ATOMS.

The thermometer registered six degrees below zero here on the morning of the tenth. Winter appears to be loth to effect an adjournment.

Mr. George Smith of Somerset, who received such severe injuries by cow-hooking last week, is reported doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Regular morning services are now announced at the M. E. Church by parties of the Congregational persuasion. The final establishment of a church here of that type is among the objects striven for.

As the time approaches for the public schools to close for vacation, our juveniles begin to cast about them for some new method of amusement.

Since the recent fall of snow logs have been delivered at Morley's Steam Mill with more dispatch than during any other period of the winter.

Rev. B. T. Bailey, pastor of the Baptist church in Rollin, is announced to preach here next Sabbath at three o'clock.

The spring elections being near at hand it becomes the duty of all office seekers to turn their attention to "ways and means."

An engineering party engaged in working up a line for the proposed Grand Trunk railroad extension, have been at work in this vicinity for some days. The enterprise coming as it does immediately on the heels of the one just completed, receives but little attention here compared with its deserts under other circumstances.

MACON MOLECULES.

Many Clinton people attended quarterly meeting Sunday.

Miss Bertie Sage and Miss Alice Collins recently returned from Vermontville, Mich., where they went to attend a wedding.

Beecher Lighthall and his mother are to occupy the house recently vacated by Mr. Betser.

DeWit Martin just closed his school in the Culbertson district. Mr. Martin is reported to have given excellent satisfaction.

Mr. Jesse Coller was home last Monday. He looks as though "city" life is quite agreeable.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. John Sage does not convalesce very rapidly; still we hope that he may entirely recover.

Mr. Geo. Burdette died Monday afternoon. Although his death was expected, yet a gloom was cast over the neighborhood. Mr. Burdette had been an honored citizen of Macon many years. He held for a number of years the office of township treasurer. The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon at the Baptist church, Rev. Mr. Kerridge officiating. All unite in extending their sympathy to the bereaved family.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

This school has been progressing during the present year with unusual harmony and interest. The number of boarders has been larger than for some time, and we believe the work done has been very thorough and satisfactory. The improvements made in the building last fall have added greatly to the pleasantness of the student's life. Two interesting and instructive lectures have been delivered to the students the present term, one by Mr. Douglas, on the subject of "Astronomy" and the other by the Principal on the subject of the Earth, geologically considered. Dr. Morden lectured on Wednesday evening of last week on the theme "Is the world getting better?"

Vocal music and painting have been regularly and successively taught the past two terms.

The next term, which opens April 1st., is in many particulars the most favorable time of the year to attend this school. Review classes are often formed for the accommodation of Teachers in attendance. The lawns are beautiful and ample and are especially adapted to the prosecution of Zoology and Botany. The weather is also usually more favorable for using the telescope.

Those students boarding in the building are visited daily in their study rooms, and careful attention is given to their health and habits.

The thorough teaching under such good christian influences, and at such cheap rates, makes this school a very desirable one to be patronized by the public.

AUCTION SALES.

Pres. DePuy having rented his farm will sell at auction 5 miles north east of Tecumseh, and 2 miles southwest of Pennington's corners, in the township of Clinton, on Wednesday, March 19th, at 12 o'clock, M., the following property: 1 six year old mare, 7 year old gelding, 4 year old mare, 3 year old gelding, span brood mares, 40 ewes with lamb, Galloway bull, Champion mower, cultivators, harrow, 2 year old heifer, hay fork, pair trucks, clover hay, farming utensils, &c. Usual terms of sale. Ben Reynolds, Auc.

Robert McCook having rented his farm will sell at auction one half mile south and two miles east of Clinton, Tuesday, March 25, '84, at 12 M., one heavy work team, yearling bull, set double harness, single harness, lumber wagon, single buggy, light wagon, bobsleighs, triumph reaper, ghampion mower, 3 cows, 2 yearling steers, 5 shoats, farm tools, white seed oats, hay, etc. Eighteen months credit. Abe Hanford, Auctioneer.

The Adrian Press says: Our paper this week is the first weekly printed in Lenawee county by water power. The presses are run by a No. 12 Tuerk hydraulic motor, and it does its work on a 40 pound pressure most admirably. The supply stream from the main comes through a two inch pipe, but the feed stream that drives the motor is only one eighth of an inch. The motor is almost noiseless, and excites universal admiration by the manner in which it runs the pulleys.

HYPOCHONDRIA.

The Mysterious Element in the Mind that Arouses Vague Apprehensions. What Actually Causes It.

The narrative below by a prominent scientist touches a subject of universal importance. Few people are free from the distressing evils which hypochondria brings. They come at all times and are fed by the very flame which they themselves start. They are a dread of coming derangement caused by present disorder and bring about more suicides than any other one thing. Their first approach should be carefully guarded.

Editors Herald:

It is seldom I appear in print and I should not do so now did I not believe myself in possession of truths, the revelation of which will prove of inestimable value to many who may see these lines. Mine has been a trying experience. For many years I was conscious of a want of nerve tone. My mind seemed sluggish and I felt a certain falling off in my natural condition of intellectual acuteness, activity and vigor. I presume this is the same way in which an innumerable number of other people feel, who like myself are physically below par, but like thousands of others I paid no attention to these annoying troubles, attributing them to overwork, and resorting to a glass of beer or a milk punch, which would for a time invigorete and relieve my weariness.

After awhile the stimulants commenced to disagree with my stomach, my weariness increased, and I was compelled to resort to other means to find relief. If a physician is suffering he invariably calls another physician to prescribe for him, as he cannot see himself as he sees others; so I called a physician and he advised me to try a little chemical food, or a bottle of hypophosphates. I took two or three bottles of the chemical food with no apparent benefit. My lassitude and indisposition seemed to increase, my food distressed me; I suffered from neuralgic pains in different parts of my body, my muscles became sore, my bowels were constipated, and my prospects for recovery were not very flattering. I stated my case to another physician, and he advised me to take five to ten drops of Magende's solution of morphine, two or three times a day for the weakness and distress in my stomach, and a blue pill every other night to relieve the constipation. The morphine produced such a deadly nausea that I could not take it, and the blue pill failed to relieve my constipation.

In this condition I passed nearly a year wholly unfit for business, while the effort to think was irksome and painful. My blood became impoverished, and I suffered from incapacity with an appaling sense of misery and general apprehension of coming evil. I passed sleepless nights and was troubled with irregular action of the heart, a constantly feverish condition and the most excruciating tortures in my stomach, living for days on rice water and gruel, and, indeed, the digestive functions seemed to be entirely destroyed.

It was natural that while in this condition I should become hypochondriacal and fearful suggestions of self-destruction occasionally presented themselves. I experienced an insatiable desire for sleep, but on retiring would lie awake for a long time tormente I with troubled reflections; and when at last I did fall into an uneasy slumber of short duration, it was disturbed by horrid dreams. In this condition I determined to take a trip to Europe, but in spite of all the attentions of physicians and change of scene and climate, I did not improve, and so returned home with no earthly hope of ever again being able to leave the house.

Among the numerous friends that called on me was one who had been afflicted somewhat similarly to myself, but who had been restored to perfect health. Upon his earnest recommendation I began the same treatment he had employed but with little hope of being benefited. At first experienced little, if any, relief, except that it did not distress my stomach as other remedies or even food had done. I continued its use, however, and after the third bottle could see a marked change for the better, and now after the fifteenth bottle I am happy to state that I am again able to attend to my professional duties. I sleep well, nothing distresses me that I eat, I go from day to day without a feeling of weariness or pain, indeed I am a well man, and wholly through the influence of H. H. Warner & Co's Tippecanoe. I consider this remedy as taking the highest possible rank in the treatment of all diseases marked by debility, loss of appetite, and all other symptoms of stomach and digestive disorders. It is overwhelmingly superior to the tonics, bitters and dyspepsia cures of the day, and is certain to be so acknowledged by the public universally. Thousands of people to day are going to premature graves with these serious diseases, that I have above described, and to all such I would say: "Do not let your good judgement be governed by your prejudices, but give the above named remedy a fair and patient trial, and I believe you will not only be rewarded by a perfect restoration to health, but you will also be convinced that the medical profession does not possess all the knowledge there is embraced in medical science."

"SET YOUR FOOT WITH MINE, JOHN."

Set your foot with mine, John,
Let us step together
If the road be good or bad,
Fine or stormy weather.
Put your hand in mine, John,
Keep it firmly, brother;
Strangers can not be to us
What we are to each other.

We, the same good father, John,
No love had a better;
To his wisdom and his love
Both of us are debtors.
We'd the same sweet mother, too;
No boys had a sweeter:
We must love each other well,
Or how could we meet her?

When we were but little chaps,
Driving home the cattle,
Then we shared each other's talks,
Fought each other's battle.
Then we had the self-same griefs,
And the self-same pleasures,
Held in common bats and balls,
And our boyish treasures.

Now, though we are bearded men,
Still, you know, we're brothers;
Than we are to others,
I for you, and you for me,
In life's changing battle,
As it was in bygone days,
Driving home the cattle.

So put your foot with mine, John
We will step together,
If the way be good or bad,
Fine or stormy weather.
Let the world go well or ill,
Put your hand in mine, brother:
Strangers can not be to us
What we are to each other.

A VISIT TO THE HOLY CITY.

The ceremonies I am about to describe have been practiced for more than a thousand years, and are so interesting from their antiquity, as well as from their extraordinary character, that the very horror and disgust they occasion is accompanied by a feeling of respect even for the victims of the superstition which gives rise to them. Moreover, the recent development of Mohammedan fanaticism under the auspices of the New Prophet gives a special interest to this matter at the [illegible] Christian woman who has ever been admitted to see these rites. Before I went I did not understand their nature, and the readers will easily imagine how glad I was, long before their conclusion, to make my escape.

The Holy City of Kairwan is the Mecca of the State of Tunis, and indeed of Northern Africa. It lies about eighty miles south of Tunis, and some twenty miles inland from the sea. On entering the town I saw a flock of camels coming over the desert, led by their keepers. On the other side appeared a woman riding on an ass, and robed in a mantle of deep dark blue, which was folded over her head and round an infant in her arms. A man walked by her side with a staff to which a gourd was attached. The sun was descending behind them, and its beams lit up their figures as they turned away into the wilderness. A little further on, near a solitary palm tree, a man was riding a camel, with a worn woman slowly trailing on foot behind him. At a sign the camel stopped, and the man, dismounting, lay under the tree, and sent the weary woman far into the distance for water. It is here that the barber of the Prophet Mohammed is buried, who possessed the most precious clippings from his beard—three hairs of which now remain. The town is not interesting, consisting of houses built of small bricks, partly covered in patches with dilapidated plaster. The roofs are flat, and one can walk from one to another almost over the town. The town is surrounded by a thin wall, surmounted with a parapet with semicircular crenelations. The gates are of old wood studded with iron knobs. The streets are filthy unpaved lanes, and the house doors lead downward as into a cellar. There is no hotel or inn of any description. The whole town is studded with mosques, small, decayed and poor in appearance, but there are only two of consequence, the Great Mosque and the Tomb of the Barber.

In the Great Mosque there are a multitude of pillars, mostly antique remains, of various colored marbles. On entering, knowing the prejudices of the Turks, I stooped down to take off my shoes before treading on the holy carpet—or rather matting. This appeared to please them, and a priest made a gesture to me and forthwith caused the matting to be rolled away, so that I could walk upon the floor, thick with dust and dirt. The scene was impressive. Numbers of figures, with the white burnous bound round their heads by a string, were crouching round with their rosaries of beads, and prayer-boards, chanting a kind of Gregorian measure. This caused a sort of vibrating hum to pervade the building. At the foot of the pulpit are two red granite pillars, about twelve feet high, and some six inches apart. Through these the faithful squeeze themselves into Paradise, having previously reduced their bodies by starvation for the purpose. Nearly two and a half inches of granite have been worn away from one of the pillars by repeated friction, so that the entrance has become easier than it must once have been. A small, slim boy of thirteen years of age was just able to slip through. To a full grown man it must have been a severe trial. The Tomb of the Barber, placed in an upper room in one of the mosques, is surrounded with trellis-work, covered with rich carpets, and hung round with canopies, banners, painted ostrich eggs, and other offerings of the faithful. Every Friday, and also on other days in the week, penances take place at various mosques or religious houses in the town. The persons who practice these rites have many social and pecuniary privileges, and belong to a special caste of their own.

I went to see one of these ceremonies. It took place at half-past eight in the evening, two hours after dark. I entered a court-yard and passed thence into a whitewashed room, stepping over the carved barrier about eighteen inches high, which is usual in Moorish houses. I then found myself in a room, as far as I can guess, about thirty or forty feet long by twenty or thirty feet wide. On the right, as we entered, was a sort of alcove with dark marble pillars. The walls of the room, which were somewhat irregular, were daubed with whitewash and very dirty; the floor was of mud and stone. Opposite the alcove, and on the left of the entrance door was a huge wooden grating, behind which the women were placed. In the center hung an enormous chandelier of rough wood-work, perhaps about twelve feet square, and covered with bits of candle, glasses with oil and floating wicks, and scraps of glass and mirrors, an old glass chandelier being opposite the door, likewise garnished with oil lamps and scraps of tallow candle. The light was very dim, and the room had no windows except in the roof, which was high and very irregular in form, leading upward till its shape was lost in the gloom. A piece of yellow matting was in the center, on the edge of which was a small camp-stool for the chief priest. For our accommodation two wooden divans, in size and shape like camp bedsteads, were ranged along the wall opposite the door. In the center of the matting was a large iron brazier with tripod feet, filled with glowing embers—I think of charcoal. Around this brazier, with their faces inward, a number of persons were sitting, or rather squatting, in Oriental fashion, their shoes placed in rows outside the edge of the matting. Their dress consisted of a fez, with a white and gold turban wound tightly round the lower part of it; underneath this fez they wear white caps. Their cleanliness was very remarkable, and presented a striking contrast to the houses in which they live. On their bodies they wore common white shirts, and loose linen trousers, a waistcoat of embroidered cloth fastened on one shoulder, and a loose robe down to the ankles, with loose hanging sleeves. Over all the burnous is worn like the Roman toga, hanging down over the left shoulder, and drawn up under the right into a fold over the breast. About twenty of these in the inner circle nearest the brazier had musical instruments. The drums, which were the principal instruments, were apparently made of green earthenware bottles, turned upside down, the bottom hammered out, and replaced by thick parchment tied down with string. They were accompanied by pipes, tambourines, and the clashing of pieces of hard wood and fragments of [illegible] short time the music began, under the direction of a leader. At first the measure was slow, but quickened in magnificent crescendos and diminuendos, with cries of "Allah, Allah." This lasted nearly three-quarters of an hour. The music was barbaric, but the religious fervor of the performers gave it a certain artistic merit that was very impressive. By degrees the devotees rose from the carpet, and stood along the wall of the room opposite to us. They then began to sway from side to side, keeping time to the music; then, as the music became louder, they swayed more and more, sideway and forward; at last bending down on one knee and rapidly rising again.

At last one of them began to roll his head round and round on his breast. Upon this the lesser priests brought him forward onto the matting, and removed the turban, fez, and white cap, leaving his head bare. The head was shaved, with the exception of a long, thick bunch of hair in the center, which sometimes hung down to the waist. With this the Prophet will lift them into Paradise. The music played louder and louder, and they all began to groan—or rather, I should say, to howl—until the noise was almost insupportable. Then one after the other became seized with the delirium, rolling their heads and eyes in a manner that almost frightened me. Then the assistant priests removed the garments from their shoulders, and the brazier was handed from one to another, over which they held their heads to inhale its fumes. Each man then knelt before the high priest, who prayed into each ear in succession. A number of swords were then brought forward. They consisted of broad blades of steel; instead of handles these swords were fitted into round blocks of wood, about six inches in diameter and two inches thick. The devotees seized them with both hands at the handle and point, and began to raise them over their heads, and bring them down with all their force against their waists. Several of them knelt down and placed the points of the swords against the muscles of their shoulders near the neck. The priests then drove the points into the flesh with small wooden mallets, so as to project through the skin on the other side.—Cor. London Daily News.

Abnormal Appetites.

While the normal appetite naturally indicates the amount of food demanded to repair the waste caused by the ordinary exercise, with the kinds especially demanded to meet present necessities, this appetite may be so molded, by unnatural habits, as to become wholly unreliable. It is a creature of accident, and may be made or unmade at will, changing to the extent of our changes of habits. Any article, however distasteful, even disgusting to the natural taste, by a systematic and continued course, may be made to become the most agreeable to the taste (vitiated, of course) of any known substance. If one may so far reverse nature, so far violate physical law, so revolutionize the taste as to relish tobacco, any known article may be tolerated and enjoyed. And here, it may be remarked, that the more repulsive any article may be, the greater the effort required to establish a habit, the more the system is violated in the formation of such a habit, the stronger that habit will become, making its victim a slave!

It is as true that the gratification of such morbid appetites, demanding unusual violence to nature, the less will be the real pleasure of such gratifications, as nature always institutes a "drawback" on all infringements of her laws. It follows, therefore, that the use of the simple foods, rich in natural nourishment, with a normal appetite, will afford the greatest amount of pleasure to the taste, in accordance with a general law in morals, that it is always safe and profitable to do right.—Golden Rule.

—It is estimated that 57,600 papers of a certain brand of smoking-tobacco are daily sold in New York City.—N. Y. Mail.

A Rich Man's Romance.

The frowns of a step-mother, it appears, indirectly laid the foundation for the millions of the Astors. The original John Jacob Astor was born in the village of Waldorf, on the banks of the Rhine, in 1763. His father was a butcher. He forced his sons William and Jacob to work from morning until night while he enjoyed himself with his neighbors at the tavern. The mother of the Astor boys died while they were young. The father married again and the motherless boys for several years passed through a siege of terror. John Jacob the elder, seems to have received more than his share of the trials. During the day he would go from door to door with a heavy basket of meat on his shoulder, and when night came he would prefer the soft side of a plank with the horses rather than to brave the scowls of his step-mother. At the age of sixteen he bid good-bye to his native village and started out to better his fortune. Sixteen years later the boy who had been driven from his home on the Rhine, had accumulated $250,000 in honest money. In 1848 he died, leaving $20,000,000. The two generations of Astors which followed increased and enjoyed this mammoth fortune.

Mr. John Jacob Astor of to-day, who is about to celebrate the evacuation of Holland by his grandfather, is a man of fine and polished manners, of a retiring nature, devoting his time chiefly to society and charities. He was born in 1823. The home of his parents, then in the suburbs of New York, was surrounded by green fields and stately trees. After that portion of the city was built up the old mansion remained intact at Broadway and White street. Later it gave place to a magnificent structure, which was erected as a monument to mark the location of the Astor homestead.

Young Astor was born and raised in luxury, receiving every advantage of a moral and intellectual education. His early days were spent at the magnificent country seat at Rhinebeck, on the Hudson, which was after the English style. A family chapel on the borders of the estate was used as a school, which was superintended by a professor of high degree, and at which the children of their neighbors commingled with John Jacob Astor in the pursuit of knowledge. John Jacob in his boyhood was of a reserved demeanor and retiring disposition, very diffident in society, and showed to poor advantage the thorough education of which he was possessed. As years passed, however, this gradually disappeared, only to return, however, with his first love.

Thomas Gibbs was a Southerner who had made an ample fortune in land speculations in South Carolina and had brought his family to New York to enjoy the ease and comforts the large metropolis afforded. Mr. Gibbs and the father of young John soon became acquainted through business transactions. The intimacy ripened to social intercourse, and John Jacob and his brother, William B., were introduced to the Gibbs household, where they became acquinted with the fair daughter of their host, a maiden of the Southern type of beauty, just ripening into womanhood. Miss Augusta Gibbs was of noble character, talented and dignified, in every way worthy of the consideration and love of an Astor. John Jacob learned to love the fair Southern maiden, and a romantic courtship followed. The young girl, with her parents, were frequent visitors to the Astor country seat on the Hudson. Here the young couple, seated in shady bowers of the vast park, or strolling arm-in-arm along the broad beach of the Hudson by moonlight, plighted their troth and laid plans for their future happiness. In the social circles of this city young Astor and his betrothed were known as a singularly modest and dignified couple, who would have attracted little notice had it not been for the great wealth of Mr. Astor's family.

The wedding which followed was one of the grand social events of the day, and after an extensive tour the happy couple returned to the Astor country seat on the Hudson, where the event was again celebrated by a family gathering and a reception after the English custom. Within the year following the happy marriage of his son, William B. Astor died. The large estate, estimated at $40,000,000, was divided between the widow and her two sons.

Mr. J. J. Astor and his wife rose rapidly in social splendor, and soon became the leaders of New York society. Both devoted much of their time to charitable purposes, and it is said that soon after their marriage the charitable donations from Mr. Astor and his wife amounted to upward of $100,000 annually. Shortly after the death of the senior Astor a beautiful baby boy was born to the new household, who in after life received the entire affections and devotions of the fond parents. This, their only child, gradually grew to be a man of noble character, and was at an early age sought to fill one of the highest representative positions of the Nation.

Mr. Astor at the age of sixty-one continues to visit his business office daily and superintends the control of his vast estate, while his wife, several years his junior, finds time to visit daily the half dozen or more charitable institutions which she has assisted in organizing and supporting for upward of a score of years. Socially Mr. John Jacob Astor and the once diffident and reserved Southern belle take the lead. The broad halls of their spacious mansion on Fifth avenue are thrown open twice a week regularly to the elite of New York society, and a sumptuous repast is served. The old family mansion and spacious grounds on the Hudson, around which many fond memories are entwined, still remains a summer resort for the aged couple, and in the warmer months serves as a refreshing and quiet retreat, where they are refreshed by the fond recollections of earlier days.—N. Y. Journal.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"No. 5[illegible] St., New York, May 16, 1882.
Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by observation of many other cases and from personal use in the future years, to begin taking it for the all-prevailing disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were relayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful article, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real honest merit; and thus it is that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case has its imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of scales. Be sure BOTH crown and scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturers is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., Feb. 13, 1883.

The James Boss' Gold Watch Cases go like hot cakes. Each one I sell sells another. Don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my customers has had a James Boss' Gold Watch Case in use for 20 years, and it is as good as ever. With this case I do not hesitate to give my own guarantee, especially with the new and improved cases, which seem to be everlasting. JESSE T. LITTLE, Jeweler.

This gold case, No. 8668, known as the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, came into my possession about 1858, has been in use since that time, and is still in good condition. The movement in the one which was in the case when I bought it, and its condition shows that the case has really outworn the movement, which is played out. MARTIN A. HOWELL,

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt"

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident of a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation."

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for gumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption.
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he lived was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

WE DO NOT CLAIM

that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,
MRS. S. S. MOODY,
No. 75 Broadway.

Struggling Lives.

You, reader, who are blessed with a comfortable home—who are well fed and warmly clad and sheltered—you can hardly realize to what straits and make-shifts many a poor mortal is reduced to live honestly, or even live at all. Women there are, delicate, cultured, refined, and all unused to physical labor—women nursed often in the lap of luxury, but thrown suddenly and helplessly upon the world by some social or domestic volcano that engulfed home and friends and left them stranded and alone to struggle with the hard conditions of cruel and relentless poverty. We have seen them thinly and poorly clad, with pinched faces from lack of nourishing food, boarding themselves in cheerless and isolated rooms, and eking out a bare pittance honestly earned with needle or pen—patient, often, and hopeful in their sad and lonely lot. Let their more fortunate sisters, born to affluence and comfort, with every luxury within their reach, imagine themselves suddenly reduced to such extremities, and can they wonder that many a tempted one is led into a gilded life of sin? Truly, society is out of joint, and there is need for a larger measure of charity in the world. We wonder if the favored ones of earth are aware that there is but little merit in the goodness of one who has never been sorely tempted.

I caught a severe cold, and remembering you told me to use "Downs' Elixir," I bought a bottle and in less than three days my cough and sore throat had vanished! It's good.

What Common Sense Does.

Common sense is symmetry of mind, character, a. of purpose in the individual combined. It represents man in completeness, harmony, and equipoise. It clothes him with dignity, invests him with power, and stamps him with superiority. It is not genius, for that is often erratic; nor cunning, in its sinuous course; nor tact, with its decline into trickery. Common sense is the embodiment of true manhood. It confers a patent of royalty, though birth be plebian, and exalts men from their lowliest spheres to the highest station. Not by sudden flights of genius or a train of adventitious circumstances are they thus dignified; but step by step, through obstacle and hindrance, they overcome by force of character and the proper force of will power. Common sense is a tremendous force in this lower world. Its power is felt and acknowledged through all the ramifications of governments, society, business, finance, science and commerce. In fact it is the history as well as the true philosophy of the ages. It is the salt that has saved humanity from barbarism, and the moving power that has propelled the race onward, in its march of progress and civilization.

Something for all the Preachers.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D.D., editor of the Iowa Methodist, says editorially, in the November (1883) number of his paper: "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that, by a thorough course of treatment, it will cure almost every case of catarrh. Ministers, as a class, are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly." Not a liquid nor a snuff. Applied to nostrils with the finger.

Fourteen Wonders of the World.

The seven wonders of the world, in ancient times, were the pyramids of Egypt, the Pharos of Alexandria, the walls and hanging gardens of Babylon, the temple of Diana, the statue of the Olympic Jupiter, the Mausoleum of Artemesia, and the Colossus of Rhodes.

The seven wonders of the world in modern times are the printing press, the steam engine, the telegraph, the daguerreotype, the telephone, the phonograph, and the electric light.

The so-called "Seven Wonders" of the ancients were mere trifles compared with those of the present time. The Brooklyn bridge, for example, would make the hanging gardens of Babylon a mere toy, while the whole seven wonders put together would sink into insignificance could the builders have seen a lightning express train at full speed.

A Rare Talent.

The faculty of drawing out of persons with whom one is conversing the best there is in them—brighter things even than they suppose themselves capable of—is the rare gift with which Nature has endowed some women. George Eliot was a most charming person in conversation, though she was a women of few words, because of her intuitive insight into the thoughts of others. A few words would put her in possession, not of what they said, but of what they would fain have said, and she would so improve upon it that ordinary people went away charmed with her who had made them for once at least feel themselves to be wise. Long afterward, perhaps, she would call to their remembrance the wise or witty things which they could hardly believe themselves to have said, and which they assuredly never would have said but for her quickening influence.

We All Believe

That it is a long lane that has no turning; that many a shaft at random sent, finds a mark the archer little meant; that no remedy sold will cure coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and all throat and lung troubles so quickly nor permanently as Dr. Bigelow's Positive cure; that our druggists, Baker and Hall, are very generous to give trial bottles of this remedy free of charge.

Coloring a Pine Floor.

The Art Interchange gives the following directions for coloring a pine floor which is to be partially covered with rugs: Buy at any painters' store turpentine and linseed oil (not boiled.) Ask them to put a little Japanese dryer in the turpentine. Buy either burnt sienna or Vandyke brown, or both, according to the color of the rug and the tint on the walls. These colors come put up in tin cans, smaller but otherwise similar to tomato or fruit cans. After your floor has been washed thoroughly clean, is free from dust, and dry, begin by opening your can and mixing, in another receptacle, the oil, turpentine and paint. Remember, the oil is to thin your paint, the turpentine to dry it. The mixture should be so thin that it will run with liquid readiness. Lay it on with a brush as thick as your hand, stroking the brush the way of the grain of the wood. To protect your hands wear old gloves, and go over the floor with a rag. In fact, you will need two rags, one pretty well charged with paint, to rub in every crevice, and another rag to rub off any superfluous paint. Mind your stops, or, rather, put some mind in the way you stop. Do not stop in a straight line across the grain of wood, but carry your brush irregularly down, taking a hint from nature's lines in the wood you are preserving with paint. By mixing the burnt sienna and Vandyke brown you will secure a rich color without needing to use the paint in a thick form. Your mixture should be so thin that the grain of the wood will show through. If you have too much turpentine the paint will rub off. If you have too little your room will need more days to dry. Take as much oil as turpentine certainly. Do not economize the oil, albeit be as prodigal in rubbing as your strength will permit.

To take the gloss on a stained floor it is recommended once a week to wipe up the floor with diluted buttermilk or sour milk.

Hood's Sarsaprilla.

Is designed to meet the wants of those who need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Hood's Sarsaparilla. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy. $1 a bottle; six for $5.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that "the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time." Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

Many whose blood had become poisoned from various causes, and whose ill health was indicated by pimples, sore feelings, aches, pains, urinary sediments, catarrh and inflammation of the mucous membrane, constipation, dyspepsia, bad dreams, nervousness, sleepiness, etc., have been restored to perfect health by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It is the only true blood purifier and strengthener of mind and body. No other remedy equals it.

During a political campaign in Michigan a well known lawyer was addressing an audience composed principally of farmers in Gratiot county. In order to win their confidence, he said: "My friends, my sympathies have always been with the tillers of the soil. My father was a practical farmer, and so was my grandfather before him. I was myself reared on a farm, and was, so to speak, born between two stalks of corn." Here the speaker was rudely interrupted by some one in the audience who exclaimed: "A pumpkin, by jingo!"

A complete cure for that old lingering drain that indicates a weakness of the urinary organs, nasal catarrh and other evidences of a decreased mucous membrane may be found in the use of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Don't be frightened by the advertisements of quack doctors. This remedy will purify the blood, strengthen the parts affected, heal all irritation of the mucous membrane, and remove every symptom of the disorders. It is a sure cure for nervous debility and general ill health.

Home Politeness.

A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinions of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves, and who will continue to sustain and be interested in us, notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every boy and to every girl, cultivate the habits of courtesy and propriety at home—in the sitting room and the kitchen, as well as in the parlor—and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner. When one has a pleasant smile and a graceful demeanor, it is a satisfaction to know these are not put on, but that they belong to the character, and are manifest at all times and under all circumstances.

It is proposed to use stiff canvas stretchers in place of the ordinary berths in sleeping cars. They are comfortable, and can be so cleverly stowed away during the day that one would think himself in an ordinary drawing-room car. The canal-packet men knew this fifty years ago.

Mrs. Hattie Paddock.

On one occasion while the English naturalist Gould was wandering along the banks of the Thames with a party of friends, a rare laugh was created at his expense. He had climbed a tree for the purpose of exploring the contents of a nest. On suddenly looking down at a hollow formed by two branches of the tree, and which at the time contained a pool of water, he exclaimed: "As I'm a living man, if there is not a large owl here in this hole, looking straight at me." The excitement was intense, but was instantly turned to a shout of merriment, when the naturalist on putting down his hand to seize the supposed owl, discovered that it was simply the reflection of his own image in the water.

W. H. Weller.

It is said by a well-known Illinois educator that "The average western farmer toils hard early and late, often depriving himself of needed rest and sleep—for what? To raise corn. For what? To feed hogs. For what? To get money with which to buy more land. For what? To raise more corn. For what? To feed more hogs. For what? To buy more land. And what does he want with more land? Why he wishes to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—to buy more land—to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—and in this circle he moves until the Almighty stops his hoggish proceedings."

Spring Medicine.

Why does everybody take a spring medicine? For three good reasons, viz: I—Because one bottle of a blood purifier taken at this season will do more good than two at any other. II—Because the blood is in a more impure condition than at any other season. III—Because the system is so weakened by this impure state of the blood that it has not sufficient vitality to withstand the debilitating effects of spring weather. Hence, by common consent, people seek relief in medicine. The combination of Hood's Sarsaparilla commends it to our judgment as a good spring medicine and blood purifier. Such things as Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Mandrake, &c., compounded by competent druggists like Messrs. Hood & Co., warrant us in suggesting that all in need of a medicine of this kind give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Astronomy is a beautiful science. We are told that if a railway was to run from the earth to the nearest fixed star, and the fare was one penny for every hundred miles, and if you were to take a mass of gold to the ticket-office equal to twice the national debt—or $3,800,000,000—it would not be sufficient to pay for a ticket to the nearest fixed star aforesaid. If this be the case, it matters very little to us whether such a railway is ever constructed. It would be discouraging to go to the ticket-office with a mass of gold equal to $3,800,000,000, and be informed that the fare was $5,678,032,000. If the ticket agent wouldn't trust until we got back, we'd be compelled to forego the trip.—Norristown Herald.

A POOR MAN'S CONFIDENCE.

The loss of time to many a Rheumatic sufferer is a worse agony than the disease. The remedy which is prompt and efficacious is his only real benefactor. Says Mr. F. Smith, of 622 S. Ninth st., Phila.: "I suffered so much from Rheumatism without any speck of relief, that I borrowed the money to buy a bottle of ATHLOPHOROS. After seven doses I had not a sharp pain or ache. Have been at work ever since. It is all that is claimed for it and will prove a sovereign balm for many a poor suffering soul."

Long visits, long stories, long exhortations, and [illegible] dom profit those who hear them. Life is short. Time is short. Moments are precious. Learn to condense, arrange, and intensify. We can bear things that are dull if they are only short. We can endure many an ache and ill if it be over soon, while even pleasures grow insipid, and pain intolerable, if they be protracted beyond the limits of reason and convenience. Learn to be short. Lop off branches; stick to the main facts in your case. If you pray, ask for what you would receive, and get through; if you speak, tell your message and hold your peace; boil down two words into one, and three into two. Always learn to be short.

$2,500 versus $1.50.

"I spent $2,500 with other doctors," writes Mr. J. W. Thornton, of Clifborn, Miss., "Samaritan Nervine however alone cured my son of fits." This is on a par with hundreds of others, speedy, but thorough.

The highest elements of character, of power and dignity lie within reach of the lowest and the poorest.

Instead of being content to live so as to escape blame, the Christian is required to live so as to prove a means of blessing.

Bulwer Lytton's Bridge.

Where it Touches the Shores and the Great Columns in Midstream.

"What a beautiful bridge between old age and childhood is religion. How intuitively the child begins with prayer and worship on entering life, and how intuitively, on quitting life, the old man turns back to prayer and worship, putting himself again side by side with the infant," remarks Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, in his "Strange Story."

Yes, but between its distant abutments the bridge of life has many high and awful arches, through which the wild waters dash and roar in wrath and desolation. Prayer and worship do not sustain these. Nature's solid rocks must lie quietly beneath and human art and skill must rear and solidify the structure overhead. God's will is best exemplified in the laws He has made for the creatures whom he has placed under their control. Neither the child's trustful "Our Father," nor the old man's "Forget me not in the thick of life's infirmities," will alter this by the weight of a single grain.

Science and art are first—then faith and prayer, as the order of Heaven. Health, divinely heals through its agents; and these agents are the discoveries of man; not the vague announcements of prophets or seers. Is life a burden to you? Does time drag? Is your power to cope with life's problem and duties weakened? You are not well. Your blood is sluggish and tainted, perhaps; or some important organ is torpid or overworked. The fact may have taken the form of dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, malaria, pains in the stomach, chronic headache, or any of a dozen other ills. PARKER'S TONIC will invigorate those who have been shut up in damp, fetid cells. It is powerful, pure, delicious, scientific, safe—the keystone of the central arch of the bridge of life.

LANSING, March 6, 1884.

EDITOR HERALD:

Having been asked by friends from Tecumseh to look up the Supreme Court Decisions with regard to the acceptance or rejection of Liquor Bonds it seems to me, that being at this time a question of so much importance, and of course attracting so much public attention, you might like to publish the result in your paper; if so it is placed at your disposal.

The question of acceptance of Liquor Bonds by Township or Village Boards has been before the Supreme Court twice, as follows

Mary Curry vs. Township Board of Baldwin, Iosco Co., Mich. Application for a writ of mandamus to compel the Board to accept Liquor Bonds, sworn to be full, ample, legal and valid, but rejected by the Board. No written decission was filed, but the motion was on arguments denied with costs. Jan. 22, 1872.

The verbal decision as I am informed by the Clerk of the Supreme Court was to the effect that the acceptance or rejection of Liquor Bonds by the Township or Village Board, was by the law simply an Official Act, entirely committed to their judgement and discretion, and one which, whatever that decision might be, the Supreme Court would not in any way, nor in any circumstances assume to review or interfere with. This is what is called the East Tawas case.

Heffron vs. Township Board of Manisteque, Schoolcraft Co., Mich. Application for Mandamus upon precisely the same grounds as before.

On argument of the case the Counsel for the Applicant becoming satisfied that the Supreme Court was about to re-affirm its former decision rendered in the Curry Case, asked leave to withdraw the application of his client for a writ of Mandamus, but was allowed to do so ONLY upon payment of costs. This was on the 25th day of Oct. A. D. 1881.

And this is the way the Supreme Court and the Law with regard to Liquor Bonds now stand.

ANOTHER RAILROAD PROJECT.

The following extracts from Saginaw and Howell papers give the outlines of a new projected railroad to connect the Saginaw valley with the Wabash lines. The Saginaw Courier says:

Some months since the Courier noted the fact that considerable interest was being manifested in the proposed line of railway directly south from East Saginaw to Adrian or Manchester, connecting at the latter points with the Wabash system, and it was stated at the time that no line of road could be constructed that would inure more directly to the benefit of the Saginaws. The project has been quietly discussed by the people along the line of the proposed route, and considerable of a boom is the result. The counties which such a route would traverse are Saginaw, Shiawassee, Livingston, Washtenaw and Lenawee, a rich farming territory. At Adrian it would connect directly with the Wabash system, a combination which operates 9,757 miles of railroad, or more than one-twelfth of the entire railroad mileage in the United States.

The Livingston Democrat has the following concerning the proposed line:

For some time past there has been occastonal agitation of a line connecting the Saginaw valley with the Wabash system of the southwest. By reference to the map it will be seen that a line running south from East Saginaw, through Howell, presents a project in which there is a better show for business than any north and south road in Michigan, and affords us connection with the Wabash system the most important and strongest system of competing roads. This outlet for the Saginaw valley is sure to be made and the line of route depends on the activity of the localities seeking to secure the road. We are shown letters received by one of our business firms from Saginaw gentlemen, in which they say Saginaw is alive to the object, and when the ball is started it will be pushed to the end. Now, will the people of Howell be behind in this work?

Manchester has already been putting in some quiet work to secure this line. The business men of Tecumseh should organize at once and take hold of this enterprise.

LASKER RESOLUTION.

Bismarck's Letter and the Returned Resolution Transmitted to the House.

Secretary of State Frelinghuysen's Sarcasm—The Chancellor's Action a Matter of Supreme Indifference to the United States.

THE RESOLUTION.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The President transmitted to the House of Representatives to-day, in a brief message without comment, a number of letters, telegrams and other documents relating to the Lasker resolution which was recently returned by Bismarck. The first of these documents is a letter from Secretary Frelinghuysen to Minister Sargent transmitting the Lasker resolution. This letter is followed by a communication from Sargent to Frelinghuysen in which the former acknowledges the receipt of the foregoing letter and incloses a copy of his note to Count Hatzfeldt, the Imperial Secretary of State, of his letter to Moritz Lasker, one of the nearest relatives of the late statesman, and the latter's reply. Sargent's letter to Hatzfeldt is a formal note inclosing a copy of the resolution of the House of Representatives.

The next in order is the reply of Moritz Lasker to Sargent, in which he acknowledges the receipt of Minister Sargent's latter and of the copy of the resolution, and returns the thanks of the brothers and sisters of the deceased, and says: "I beg to assure you that among the many similar communications which have reached them, none were more deeply appreciated by them than those conveyed in the resolution herein referred to."

Then come a series of telegrams which passed between Frelinghuysen and Sargent. Frelinghuysen informs Sargent that there is a rumor that the Lasker resolution has been returned by Bismarck. Sargent replies that no doubt the resolution has been sent back. Frelinghuysen asks by whom. Sargent states that the resolution was returned through the German Minister at Washington, but he (Sargent) had not been officially informed of it. Frelinghuysen then authorizes Sargent to publish the instruction directing him to transmit one copy of the resolution through the Foreign Office to the President of the legislative body of which Lasker was a member and another to the family of the deceased.

The first document is a memorandum of a conversation between Secretary Frelinghuysen and the German Minister to the United States, Von Eisendecker, and it is as follows:

The German Minister said: "Mr. Secretary, I have received instructions from my Government to read to you and leave with you a copy of the dispatch which I hold in my hand relating to the resolution of condolence adopted by the House of Representatives of the United States on the death of Dr. Lasker."

The dispatch of Prince Bismarck thus presented by Von Eisenber was as follows:

Bismarck to Eisendecker:

"FREDRICHSRUHE, Feb. 9, 1884.

"The envoy of the United States of America has communicated with a note, dated the 1st inst., the text of a resolution of the American House of Representatives, dated the 9th of January, in which the House expresses regret at the death of Dr. Edward Lasker. Every appreciation which the personal qualities of a German receives in a foreign country cannot but be pleasing to our national feelings, especially when emanating from such an important body as the American House of Representatives. I should, therefore, have gratefully received Mr. Sargent's communication and should have asked His Majesty the Emperor to empower me to present it to the Reichstag if the resolution of the 9th of January did not at the same time contain an opinion on the direction and effects of the political action of Representative Lasker which is opposed to my convictions.

"In the resolution it is said in relation to the deceased 'that his firm and constant exposition of free and liberal ideas have materially advanced the social, political and economic condition of those people.' From my knowledge of the course that the political and economic development of the German people has taken I cannot regard this opinion as one in accordance with the facts I have witnessed. I would not venture to oppose my judgment to that of an illustrous assembly like the House of Representatives of the United States if I had not gained, during an active participation in German internal politics of more than thirty years, an experience which encourages me to attach also to my opinion certain competency within these limits. I cannot make up my mind to ask His Majesty the Emperor for the necessary authorization to communicate the resolution of the House of Representatives of the United States to the German Reichstag, because I should therewith have to officially indorse myself and also to indorse with His Majesty the Emperor an opinion which I am unable to recognize as just. VON BISMARCK."

After reading and presenting to Secretary Frelinghuysen the above letter Minister Von Eisendecker read: "I am further instructed to express to you, Mr. Secretary, Prince Bismarck's regret that he found himself unable to comply with the wish formulated by Mr. Sargent; and also to leave with you, if you desire it, an engrossed copy of the resolution, which, in deference to its high origin, I may add my Government cannot, on its own responsibility, feel at liberty to retain."

The Secretary of State said: "Mr. Minister, in response to your offer to return the engrossed copy of the resolution, let me say that the President cannot be supposed to have any wish in respect to what the German Government may do in regard to the disposition of the copy of the resolution of the House of Representatives after it has been decided it cannot be transmitted to the body for which it was courteously intended."

The Minister replied: "Your answer, Mr. Secretary, expresses no wish, and consequently relieves my Government from any obligation it has felt to return the resolution which was entrusted to it for transmission."

NEGRO SCHOOLS.

A Move in the Virginia Legislature to Regulate Their Control.

RICHMOND, Va., March 11.—A bill has been introduced in the Virginia Senate which proposes to make a radical change in the present system of public schools in this State. The measure contemplates creating the office of Director of Schools in all of the counties of the Commonwealth, the colored people to have their directors and the white theirs. The duties of these officers are defined to be to nominate teachers for and have general supervision over the schools of the colored people. It substantially gives them control of their schools. The patron of the bill in explaining it said that it merely carried out the pledge made by the Democratic Convention which met at Lynchburg last summer to give the colored people the control of their schools. Senator Norton, of New York, a coalitionist, and the only colored member of the Senate, made a strong speech in opposition to the change contemplated by the bill. He contended that it was calculated to do vast injury to the present system of public education so far as his race was concerned. He and the colored people of Virginia are perfectly well satisfied for the whites to have the management of this important branch of the Government. One of the greatest objections to the pending proposition urged by Senator Norton is that in many sections of the State it would be impossible to find colored men qualified to assume the directorship of the school system. He urged the Democrats not to press the bill as the changes proposed were likely to hamper the educational advancement of his race.

Mr. Kerner, the ex-Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and the patron of the resolution contemplating the colonization of the colored men, said he favored it only because he was under the impression that the colored people desired to have control of their own schools. He did not approve of the plank of his party which proposed to separate the government of the schools. The power of appointing the new colored officers contemplated in the bill will be in the hands of the Democrats. At the solicitation of Norton and others the new measure was passed by till Tuesday next. It will then attract a good deal of attention in educational as well as political circles in this State.

Anxiety Felt for the Safety of Ten Men.

SPOKANE FALLS, W. T., March 11—Fears exist for the safety of ten men who went to Rathdrum thirteen days ago to locate the trail to the Colur D. Alene gold mining district. They left a point twenty-five miles from Rathdrum with four days' rations and left other provisions in charge of a man with instructions to wait six days. They never returned and the man left. It was thought they reached Eagle City, but a man who arrived Saturday said they had not been there. Several parties have been organized and are now out. There is no place where they can stay between the points known, and the snow is very deep. Their names are Charles Pond, L. Merriam, Charles Boatman, McNutt Whitesell, William Deane, George Spafford, William Hayes, Peter Esch and one unknown.

The New Fast Mail Train.

Postmaster General Gresham, First Assistant Postmaster General Hatton, and General Superintendent Thompson, of the railway mail service, accompanied the train. There were seven postal cars. General Gresham stated to an Associated Press representative that the new service was in every way satisfactory, and that at no time was the train over seventeen minutes behind the schedule time.

An Interesting Combination of Weather.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Hail, rain, snow, thunder and lightning made up the weather hereabouts yesterday. Icy sidewalks made walking full of peril. Trees and telegraph wires are heavily coated with ice. In Hartford the heavy ice broke down the wires and even trees. Telegraphing is badly interrupted. Virginia had its rain, hail and thunder. The Appomattox is very high and rising rapidly.

A Slight Railway Accident.

OMAHA, March 10.—A north-bound passenger train on the Kanas City, St. Joseph & Council Bluffs Railway, due here yesterday morning, collided with a construction train near Portsmouth. BRICK AND TILE CONVENTION.

The fourth annual convention of the Brick and Tile Makers, convened at Workingmen's Hall Adrian, last Tuesday morning, with a very fair attendance.

At ten o'clock President Harris made a few remarks to the convention, suggesting that as the members were not all in, the time until they should arrive be taken up by impromptu talks by any one present who had any questions to ask or views to present.

The officers of the Association are C. H. Harris of Jackson, president; W. S. Comfort of Tecumseh, secretary; W. E. Carleton of Carlton, treasurer.

Secretary Comfort called the convention to order at about half past ten and President Harris then read his address, which was very interesting. Mr. Harris wished it distinctly understood that the convention was not called for the purpose of forming a pool to boom prices in tile and brick, and robbing the honest farmer, but for the public benefit. The convention gave each man a chance to give his experience and views on the business, and in short, to enable each manufacturer, as far as possible, to make the best wares for the least money.

Next in order was the completion of the roll of membership, and during this order of business many new members were received. Mr. Billingsly, of Indianapolis, suggested that the roll of membership be called by the secretary, and that as each member's name was called he give a short synopsis of his past summer's experience and work.

General Grant was only forty-seven when inaugurated President; the youngest by several years of any before or since. But no candidate more than seventy years of age has yet been elected to that great office, and a contemporary draws an unfavorable inference from that fact as to the old ticket, about which so much has been said. President Harrison was the oldest President, having been sixty-eight when he entered the White House in 1841. Washington was fifty-eight when inaugurated in Philadelphia, ninty-five years ago.

FRANK LESLIE, Publisher 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

New Prolific Tree Bean.

Having raised them for main crop the past season, I can conscientiously give them the following recommend: On good soil they will yield an averagge of about 150 pods to the tree, 6 or 7 grains to the pod, and 60 bushels to the acre if planted AS DIRECTED. They closely resemble the Navy Bean, cook in much less time than the Navy, are very white, and of excellent flavor. Having but one stalk in a hill they are much easier cultivated than five to seven stalks of any common variety, and can be left in the hill until all are fully matured, thereby avoiding liability to mould. They should be planted as soon as danger from frost is over, in rows two feet apart, and 15 or 18 inches in the row, more than one stalk in a hill will not do, and if more is planted, thin when two inches high to one plant in a hill, and they will completely cover the ground. About four quarts plants an acre. Try them and for main crop you will grow no other. Net price per quart, 25 cents.

A BUSINESS CHANGE.

The firm of Stacy Brothers has been dissolved, S. C. Stacy having bought George N. Stacy's interest in the HERALD office and business. S. C. will continue the business as heretofore, will relinquish farming the first of April and give his undivided time and attention to the HERALD. George has purchased a half interest in the East Saginaw Evening Express and assumed the business management of that paper yesterday. While we regret exceedingly to have George leave Tecumseh, we feel that the arrangement will be a benefit to him financially, and bid him God speed in his present venture. He possesses natural ability for a first-class newspaper manager and he will have room for using it to the best advantage in his new field of labor. May the fates deal kindly with him and grant him prosperity and success in his new business home.

It is said that there are only three men now living who own the land they originally purchased of the government in the township of Seneca.—They are Arch Browen, John Campburn and Isaac Powell. An exchange gives the public this gentle reminder: "Never growl because the newspaper fails to give every scrap of news, so long as you never take any particular pains to give the editor any information. The average editor isn't a medium or a mind reader, but gets the news just the same as a milkman gets his milk—by pumping."

The best time to push the sale of goods by means of printers's ink is when business is dull. People have then more time to read, and as money becomes more scarce and valuable they are studying how to expend what they have most advantageously. They read the papers to get this information, and those who are plucky enough to keep their goods in the foreground during the dullest times will get the bulk of the trade, and they will keep and reap a rich harvest when good times come again.

Adrian Record: The first train of the new fast mail service passed thro' this city last evening a little late. The train consisted of four mail cars and one coach. She went through the city at a very rapid rate, and many people stood along the streets to see her. The accompanying coach contained besides some officers of the road, Postmaster-General Gresham, First Assistant, Postmaster-General Hatton and General Superintendent Thompson, of the Railway Mail Service accompanied the train through from New York. The train arrived in Chicago seven minutes ahead of time.

Last Monday morning about eight o'clock, the fire bell sounded an alarm. A small house on Maumee street near Bean's tannery, owned by Peter Johnson of Adrian and occupied by tenants was on fire. The fire department responded instantly and the engine was on the ground as soon as the big team on a dead run could take it there, but the fire had done its work before the engine arrived. The household effects were saved. Insurance on the house of Four Hundred dollars, which will nearly cover the loss. The fire originated from a defective chimney, and burned for some time before the alarm was given, and hence the flames were beyond control when the steamer arrived on the ground.

Detroit Free Press: There is a well defined rumor that the Lake Shore trains will, at no distant date, commence to run into the Michigan Central passenger station at the foot of Third street, instead of into Brush St. depot as heretofore. While inquiry among railroad officials failed to find any authority for the statement, it is still regarded among them as quite probable and a desirable change. The Lake Shore, being, like the Central, a Vanderbilt road, and the management of the two lines quite in harmony, lends color to the rumor. The change would save the Lake Shore five miles hawl around the city, and save delays incident to handling a large number of trains on a single track. It may be that the belief recently expressed by a prominent railroad director are about to be realized, and that the Third street depot will become in some sense a union depot.

ROCK BOUND GIBRALTAR.

A Voyage Across the Atlantic, and Arrival on the Soil of Sunny Spain.

We are permitted to take a few extracts from a letter written by Miss Lizzie Hayden to her friends at home, which cannot fail to interest our readers:

ROYAL HOTEL, GIBRALTAR,
Monday, Feb. 18, '84.

It matters not how many miles lie between us, we are not far apart, and those at home are with me constantly in my mind and heart. We are at Gibraltar still and have had no letters from America yet, and probably we will not have any until we reach Seville. When the Gattardo came in to port we packed up our clothes, ate a hearty lunch and then climbed down the ladder into a little row boat and were taken ashore. They will not allow steamers to go to the dock because they cannot find employment enough for the natives so they make the traveling public support their poor.

When we landed we went to the Royal Hotel, a very nice place. Meals served "table d'hote," breakfast at 10, lunch at 2, dinner at 6. After breakfast we found some little donkeys and went up on the rock and through the fortifications. Just imagine five of us mounted on donkeys, crawling slowly up the side of a mountain 1,400 feet high. We saw live monkeys skipping from tree to tree. At the summit of the rock is a signal station, where we got a lunch of army bread and cheese and ale. Then we began our descent, by another road, passing through the park and public squares and barracks, to the hotel. We were quite ready for dinner and did ample justice to all that was set before us.—The next day we arranged to go to Africa, Tangiers. We left Gibraltar at 11 o'clock and reached Tangiers in about three hours. We went to the Continental hotel and left our satchels, then started out to see the town. It seems as though we had gone back thousands of years. Such a quaint old town; the widest streets are not more than 15 feet wide, and there are many streets not more than 5 feet wide. Moors, Arabs and Jews, in their strange costumes. The Moorish ladies all covered save their eyes, the Jewesses glittering with gold and tinsel, the gipsies and beggars with just a few garments on. It was market day so we had the best of opportunities of seeing the people. There were whole trains of camels, from across the desert, bringing loads of wheat, herds of cattle, sheep, etc. In the evening we went to a Moorish cafe and were highly entertained by the natives and their music. They played on some stringed instruments, and they opened their mouths and the noise came out. They kept time by striking their hands together. They call it music.

We saw some of the schools where the children are taught. The Koran, an old man, is squatted down on the floor in one corner on his crossed legs, surrounded by small children in a like posture, all gabbling at the top of their voices. There are no desks, chairs or books.

The next morning we went out into the country, mule back, by the villas of the foreign embassadors.—The most beautiful ride I ever had.—For miles and miles down a narrow road, hedged on either side with cork trees, aloes, cactus, ivy, myrtle, nasturtium, geranium, etc. It seemed as though at any moment we might enter the garden of Eden. Occasionally through a break we could see ruins of old Roman bridges and castles. We came back into the present world again before noon and boarded our steamer and returned to Gibraltar at 5 o'clock. I have just learned that the steamer leaves tomorrow for Cadiz so I will have to pack this afternoon. The American Consul, Mr. Sprague, called while we were in Tangiers and again this morning, and invited us to dine with him to-morrow; unfortunately we cannot accept. We will be on the ocean en route for Cadiz.

Seeds that Talk.

Yes—seeds that talk. Can anything speak plainer than a full row of seeds, which have forced their tiny leaves above the surface in garden and field? They fairly shout to us that they are alive and can be depended upon every time. Such are Sibley's Tested Seeds, they talk right at you, and can be had promptly by sending a postal card to Hiram Sibley & Co., Rochester, N. Y., or Chicago, Ill., for a Catalogue and price list.

R. R. Hall has just finished cutting into wood one of the oldest orchards of Lenawee County, consisting of one hundred trees, which yielded him about one hundred and twenty-five cords of wood equal in quality to hickory. Several of the larger trees measuring across the stump two and one-half feet. It was planted out about sixty years ago.

The following change in star service effecting this county has been ordered: Route 24,106, Tecumseh to Cambridge, from March 20, 1884, curtail service to begin at Tipton, omitting Tecumseh, decreasing the distance six miles. The following star service has been discontinued: Route 24,107, Adrian to Tipton, from March 19, 1884.

Blissfield Advance: A. W. Smith, chairman of the Republican county committee, was in town one day last week. Doc. informs us that we need not look for his obituary just yet, even if we do hear of his being called hard names. A mission of some kind is what Doc. seems to have on hand, with a strong desire to execute it.

We have received from the old Travelers' Insurance Company, of Hartford, a copy of the official engraving of the Bartholdi Statue to be placed in New York harbor. It is the only correct picture of that noble gift and faithfully represents to the eye the enormous statue, completed and in the midst of its magnificent surroundings.

The first excursion trip over the M. & O. last Saturday was a success in every particular. About 300 passengers took tickets, all the stations from Battle Creek to Dundee being represented. Tecumseh sold a number of tickets, and those who went from here report a fine ride and a good day in Toledo. When a man once rides on the M. & O. he is certain to take that route again.

THE CROUCH EXAMINATION.

The examination of Dan Holcomb and Judd Crouch for the murder of the Crouch family has been in progress during the week at Jackson. New and damaging evidence has been brought to light. The Jackson Patriot of yesterday has this item showing the present status of the case.

Jackson, Mich., March 12.—The Crouch murder examination this morning, was quite exciting. Detective Harris testified as to Holcomb admitting the owning of a 38-calibre revolver, and that he lost it in a lake up north. When he admitted this, he was greatly agitated, and called for water. The witness and Frazier, the defendant's counsel, had a tilt about a witness being tampered with. The witness said Frazier was the one he bought. Frazier called him a liar. Sheriff Winney corroborated Harris' statements. They visited Lansing, but could not find where Holcomb bought the revolver. The coroner and two jurymen at the inquest swore that Holcomb swore that he never had a 38-calibre revolver. Nettie Snyder, a servant, testified that no hogs were killed at Holcomb's for seven weeks previous to the murder.

Modern Science and Skepticism

What has Skepticism done for the world?

Nothing but to suggest doubts. It has even suggested that Rheumatism cannot be cured. Skepticism is as bad as Rheumatism.

What has Science done for the world?

A good many things; for instance, it has shown that Rheumatism can be cured.

It has shown that Neuralgia can be got rid of.

Modern science has proved that Rheumatism is a blood disease, and has provided a remedy as the remedy which can completely cure it.

It has proved that although the old doctors failed to overcome Neuralgia, Antiphones can.

It has proved that though these tormenting diseases were so slow and obstinate, they can be overcome in a little while by means of Athlophoros!

Don't be skeptical. If you have any doubts as to what ATHLOPHOROS can do, write to some of those whom it has cured. For instance, Rev. S. R. Dennen, D.D., Pastor Third Congregational Church, of New Haven, Conn., the Rev. W. P. Corbit, pastor George St. M. E. Church, of New Haven, the Rev. J. E. Searles, pastor Willett St. M. E. Church, New York city, Mr. Brummell, the well known candy manufacturer of New York, Ex-Gov. Bigelow, of Connecticut, and many others, equally well known.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

ZOA-PHORA

WOMEN.

MARSHALL, Ind., June 15, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—Your work has done for me more than I dare hope for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For four years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years. But, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MISS C. G.

JENNYVILLE, Ind., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler.

No. 28 Wilt St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

Business in Base-Balls.

"How is business?"

"Well, I don't know that I can complain," said one of the leading manufacturers of sporting goods in the country, as he led the way into his factory on Beach street, below Cramp's shipyard, the other day. During the year just closed we have made upward of 1,315,000 balls, or an average of 300 dozen per day for the year round. Our capacity is 400 dozen per day. We make fourteen different styles of balls. Fully three-fifths of last year's work was of the cheaper grade used by boys, which sell at prices ranging from five to fifty cents apiece, and a good share of the remaining two-fifths were of the makes known as the 'Amateur Dead' and 'Professional Dead,' which sell at seventy-five cents and a dollar apiece, respectively. The American Association, our best make, sells at $1.25. We send base-balls all over the world. I can show you orders on our books from Hong Kong, China, Heidelberg, Germany, and from several cities in England. There is not a large city in the United States or Canada in which you cannot find our goods. We sell most base-balls in the North and West. The South has not taken hold of the National game with the same vigor as other parts of the country, but the craze is growing. I think I can safely say that we make more base-balls in a month than any other sporting goods house you can name turns out in a year.

"We can't get enough of the wood we want for making base-ball bats. The second growth of ash is the best, and that is hard to get. It comes from Wisconsin and Michigan, and should lay a year to season after being cut before it is used. To kiln-dry it makes the bats brittle. Our red-band bats are made of the second growth of ash, and they have become very popular, although we turned out the first lot only last summer. There are two other styles of bats—the 'professional ash,' which was popular with professional players before the red band came out and the 'American willow' (really basswood), which sells best in country towns and goes in company with the cheaper class of bats. Of the three grades we made between 600 and 900 gross last year, or about 100,000 bats.

"Cricket fell off fully fifty per cent. last year. Young men who have been in the habit of playing cricket by way of recreation have fallen in with the

"Oh, yes, we make other things beside base-balls and bats. I guess you would find it hard to name anything in the sporting goods line we don't manufacture. We make specialties of all base-ball goods, but also do a good deal in foot balls, boxing gloves, striking bags, vaulting horses, sprinters' shoes, tennis rackets, Indian clubs, and in fact, all kinds of gymnasium goods."—Philadelphia Record.

Like Webster.

Many lawyers were seated around, and, as their wont is, they began to tell stories.

"When I was a young man," said Judge M——, whose stock of legal anecdotes is inexhaustible, "there was a lawyer in New York whose name was R——. He was not much of a genius, but he prided himself on being like Daniel Webster. He got himself up to resemble the famous lawyer, adopted a collar and necktie like his, and wore his hair in the same fashion. In court and in private life he affected Websterian attitudes and tones, and was thoroughly satisfied that he was Webster's counterpart. Vanity was not the only failing which characterized R——. He never paid his debts when it was possible to avoid payment. One day a creditor, to whom he had owed money for a long time, and whom he had put off with excuses over and over again, entered R——'s office. The lawyer was seated at his desk, and on the top of a bookstand in front of him was a bust of Webster.

"'Good morning, Mr. R——,' said the creditor, 'how well you are looking. Good heavens!' he ejaculated, raising his eyes to the bust, 'what a splendid likeness; when did you have that taken?'

"'Think it's like, eh?' the lawyer said, smiling.

"'Like!' the creditor exclaimed, 'why it's marvelous. Who is the sculptor? I never saw such a fine work. When did you sit for it?'

"'Ha, ha,' the lawyer laughed gently, 'do you think it's good? Well, I suppose it is. It doesn't flatter, anyhow.'

"'Flatter!' the creditor said; 'it is the very living representation of you. By the way, Mr. R——, I called on a little business, but that splendid bust drove it out of my head—about that little bill, you know. If it's perfectly convenient, and won't incommode you, I should like to have the money.'

"'Why, certainly,' said the lawyer, with a gracious air, and forthwith he produced his pocket-book and paid the amount.

"As the creditor was quitting the office, he paused, with the door in his hand, and, looking back, said:

"'You don't suppose I'm such a blank blanked fool as to suppose that bust was ever intended for you. It's no more like you than it's like Melchizedek.'"—Brooklyn Eagle.

—The editor of the Atlanta Constitution, who has reduced orange-eating to an exact science, says: "Oranges should never be eaten in company. They should be quartered with the rind on and gobbled up with sufficient speed and voracity to get the true flavor, which never clings to the fruit after the skin is stripped off. We mention this fact here because there are thousands of people in this country who don't know how to eat an orange."

—The one lesson which, more than all others, is being taught by the progress of sanitary science and art is that most of the physical evils of life are the direct results of breaches of law.—N. Y. Independent.

—At a funeral of a Mexican child in Socorro, N. M., the other day eight Mexican women bore the coffin, which was open, on their shoulders, and another walked behind carrying the lid.

—Lord Baltimore's landing place in Maryland is to be marked by a $10,000 monument.

Canton Prisons

There are two principal prisons in Canton, the Nam Hoi and the Pun U, district jails analagous to our county or State prisons. The main part of the building is called the Great Prison, where are confined those convicted of capital crimes. It is surrounded by thick adobe walls, and the corridors and cells are approached through the single entrance of the keeper's lodge. Through a hole in the crazy door is presented the grimy paw of the keeper, which we touch with a Hongkong ten-cent piece and are immediately admitted. We enter a dark, dismal den, black with sooty cobwebs and full of dense fumes of gray smoke. A spluttering of opium pipes comes from a corner where the withered faces of two or three turnkeys in recumbent posture curled round the lamp, with opium pipes in their hands. A few more ten-cent pieces are needed to gratify, not satisfy, the cupidity of a half-dozen hungry-looking, greasy, smutty, down-at-heeled petty officers, who demand exorbitant fees before we can proceed.

We finally pass into a narrow, dirty alley, flanked by the main wall and leading to the wards and cells. There are six wards, each ward containing four cells, the walls of which are in parallel sections. Each ward consists of an open quadrangle of execrable filth, about forty feet square, with cells on the east and west sides. In the center of this area is a shrine containing the image of a god, supposed to have the power of melting the most obdurate heart, causing penitential tears to flow from eyes that have only gloated over deeds of blood and shame. Very little homage does this idol receive from the Cantonese jail-bird, except on the birthday of the god, when the prisoners are regaled with an extra bowl of rice, a piece of pork and perhaps a cup of wine, provided at the expense of the Governor of the jail. This disinterested official takes care to amply refund himself by a careful manipulation of the funds for prison maintenance which the prisoners know to their sorrow the next few days.

The cells are separated from each other by upright beams and are divided off from the outer courtyard by a wooden palisading, giving them the appearance of cattle-pens, in which are herded together as many as thirty human beings in each pen, with hardly sufficient space to lie down. In each cell is a raised wooden floor, full of vermin, covering nearly the whole area of the space. Here the prisoners sleep and eat their food, and are permitted to lounge about the open yard during the daytime. A few pots, an earthenware furnace where they cook their rice, and a stool or two are the only furniture, except a large tub in each cell to receive the excreta. As this tub is usually left open and stands in a crowded den where the prisoners sleep, the stench on a hot summer's night can be better imagined than described. We have now passed through labyrinthian passages reeking with vile odors, past a group of women and children, perhaps, vainly wailing for husbands and fathers whom they will see no more. Door after door is locked behind us as we penetrate the recesses grim and dark and drear of this horrible place, while the awful thought of being seized and forcibly detained among these demons haunts us with a shuddering dread.

We now come to the quadrangle described above. As the door opens we hear again the clanking of chains. A prisoner sees a stranger at the door and announces in shrill tones the arrival of a "foreign devil." We are immediately surrounded by a crowd of ragged, unshorn, squalid, emaciated, cut-throat looking wretches, whose savor is anything but that of "Araby the Blest." They crowd uncomfortably near us, a hundred hands are held out, ferocious eyes glare upon us beneath their shaggy locks and a chorus of voices demand kamshaws. We look appealingly to the keeper, who comes to the rescue with a mouthful of untranslatable curses, delivered in stentorian tones, upon which they disperse. We see them next squatting down on the bare earth in merry, garrulous groupes, as if oblivious of their impending doom. They are mostly half-naked, or dressed in tattered garments filled with insect life, their long disheveled locks matted together, and their bodies corroded with two or three strata of filth.

Water and soap, brush and broom, razor and comb are scarce commodities in a Chinese prison, and hundreds of these wretches live year after year without touching water till the executioner's knife turns them faster into clay. They spend their time gambling and singing lewd songs, or occupy themselves in entomological pursuits, such as picking the vermin out of their clothes or from each other's heads, which, when caught, are popped into the mouth for safe-keeping. This last item is no fiction, but an every-day common-place fact. During one of the five or six visits made by the writer of this sketch to these prisons he was accosted by a prisoner of the most villainous type in broken English. He had been captured in Hongkong and had tasted the sweets of Victoria prison fare before his rendition. He said with the utmost naivete "Hongkong prison welly good place. He pay good chpw chow, good clothes, good bed, good dlink. S'pose hair get long, have got barber makee shave. S'pose me get sick, have got doctor makee well. Hongkong prison welly clean, all ploper. My no likee dis place. Here all too muchee louzee, too muchee muck, too muchee hungly, too muchee thin, too muchee die." This is mentioned to show how strongly the Chinese jail-bird appreciates the comforts and luxuries of Hongkong prison life compared with his native prison hells.—San Francisco Chronicle.

—The Toronto Mail tells this story: "A resident of Collinsby objected to a young man paying his respects to his daughter, and set a large rat-trap at the spot over which the lover would surely pass. The parent did not know that his wife was visiting when he set the trap. About eleven o'clock at night he was aroused by the screams of his wife, who had one of her feet caught in the trap, but she was released by the lover, who was in the parlor at the time, before the husband arrived. The young man is now a welcome visitor at the house."

SWISS MOUNTAIN GIRLS.—In those beautiful health-giving mountains one would expect to find the most beautiful and healthy-looking of all girls. Where only pure air is to be breathed, inspiring scenes to be witnessed, women should be as fair as daughters of the gods. But not so. The women in Switzerland have a prematurely worn and aged look; if at twenty they were robust and possessed of that attraction which good health bestows—at thirty they are faded and seem to take pleasure only in going through their dull and never-ending round of duty. For they do the greater share of the work in the field and in the house, and in addition bear large families. In fact they make up in useful ness what they lack in beauty.

Practical Hints Regarding Tornadoes.

The following hints regarding tornadoes, by John D. Parker, U. S. A., in Kansas City Review of Science, are given in the belief that many people are killed every year who could save their lives by a little practical knowledge of the movements of these destructive storms:

The tornado season is embraced between the first of April and the first of September, but in the latitude of Kansas City most tornadoes occur in the months of May and June. As we go north or south of this latitude they are proportionately later or earlier, and early or late seasons vary the time of their occurrence correspondingly.

Tornadoes occur in the afternoon, generally between two o'clock and evening, four o'clock being called the tornado hour.

Tornadoes move from southwest to northeast, generally east about twenty degrees north, and their linear movement is ordinarily from thirty to forty miles an hour.

Tornadoes occur on sultry days, or when the temperature is very high and the air is thoroughly saturated with moisture.

Tornadoes occur when the electrical conditions are high, or when the air is highly charged with electricity.

The approach of a tornado may be known by ominous clouds appearing in the southwest and northwest. The clouds sometimes resemble the smoke of a burning hay-stack, at other times they appear like irridescent fog. Sometimes they present a deep greenish hue, or are intensely black, or have a purplish, yellowish or bluish tinge. When these two masses or banks of clouds, under the impulse of opposing currents, approach each other, they are thrown into great confusion, there is a roaring, likened to the rumble of distant thunder, and an upward expulsion of air and vapor. Soon the funnel of the tornado is let down to the earth, and moves to the front, while scuds of clouds play around it. The tornado now formed has four characteristic movements; a linear movement toward the northeast; a gyratory movement north of the equator, contrary to the hands of a watch; a zigzag or swaying movement which leaves dentated edges in the path of the tornado, and a rising and falling movement, the poise of the upper current, by which the tornado leaps over portions of its path.

If one is familiar with these premonitory signs, he is put on his guard and when the tornado appears he is prepared to act intelligently and promptly. Under the preceding principles, he can easily determine the projected path of the tornado, from the location of the funnel, and whether it will be necessary to run north or south to escape from it. He must, of course, not run east or west.

When a tornado is imminent, certain precautions should be observed. Doors and windows in houses should be closed, animals in harness unhitched, and animals in stables let out. The safest place in a house is the southwest corner on the first floor, or better, perhaps, the southwest corner in the cellar. If a tornado overtakes one on the prairie, lie face downward, head toward the east, and place the hands over the head for protection. If near a low, solid object, like a large stone or stump, lie face downward, east of it, head toward the object, with hands over the head for protection.

Every home should have a dug-out at a convenient distance from the house, or what is better, a tornado room built into the west or south wall of the cellar, large enough for the family, and for things of great value like deeds or money.

The destructive effects of tornadoes result from the gyratory movement, which is estimated at from one hundred to five hundred miles an hour. Tornadoes with the hour-glass form of cloud are the most intense, and seem to be irrestible, but the greater number of tornadoes are of lower intensity, and we can build against them. Frame houses are more tenacious or elastic than brick or stone, and when overthrown are not so destructive to life. They should have strong frames. Brick houses should have an extra layer of brick laid in the west and south walls. Stone houses with very thick walls laid in cement are comparatively safe against most tornadoes.

Houses built near a hill or bluff presenting an elevation should be located on the northeast side, as the elevation tends to lift the tornado over the house. A grove of hard wood, such as oak, maple, walnut and hickory, southwest of a house, or a forest southwest of a town, has a tendency to break the force of a tornado and drive it into the upper air, although it is not safe for a person to be near a tree or in a grove during a tornado, for fear of being struck by flying timber. Occasionally a tornado of great intensity will cut a clean swath through a grove, but forests tend to break the force of tornadoes, and will drive most of them into the upper air. All towns in prairie States should plant heavy groves of hard timber southwest of them. During a residence of forty years in Southern Michigan, when it was heavily timbered, tornadoes were unknown; that is, they were driven into the upper air and rendered harmless; but since the forests have been cut away tornadoes in that part of the State have become somewhat frequent and destructive. Not to build and protect against tornadoes seems like not taking medicine for fevers. Sometimes a fever proves fatal, but most fevers can be cured, and so most tornadoes can be rendered comparatively harmless.

By a careful study of the principles which underlie these storms, and an observance of the premonitory signs, during the tornado season, it is believed that few, if any, persons who keep their presence of mind and act intelligently and promptly when the storm appears, need be killed by a tornado. Still, it is always best to have a clear conscience whatever may happen.

Meteorologists are carefully studying these storms. The Signal Service, already in their daily reports during the season, indicate the barometic trough of low pressure, extending from the southwest toward the northeast, along which tornadoes move, and it is believed that the time is not far distant when they will predict to certain districts probable tornado days.

The Mexicans.

Major Bacon, fresh from a journey through Mexico, was interviewed by a reporter. In reply to a question about the Mexicans and their country, the banker said:

"The United states are good enough for me."

"Don't you like Mexico?"

The Major shrugged his shoulders and said:

"There is nothing poorer than a poor Mexican and nothing meaner. The fact is, what a Mexican would not eat, a dog would not steal."

"Why, I thought Mexico was a land with lakes of silver and rivers of gold over golden sands. Don't you want to be annexed?"

"Not a bit of it. Diaz is a nice, sensible fellow, with a good streak of enterprise in his composition, but the balance! Deliver me."

"Tell me about it all."

"Well," said the Major, as he dropped into a more serious strain, "as far as the climate is concerned it is delightful. The quantity of silver in the mines is inexhaustible, and if properly worked by Americans with plenty of capital and improved machinery, those old mines, abandoned by Mexicans years ago, will prove as remunerative as anything that money can be invested in. As far as agriculture is concerned an American would not find it profitably, as the probability would be that the bulk of his crop could be captured by the natives by a process peculiarly their own. A Mexican would not mind going a hundred miles to steal another man's crop. They have very loose ideas about the sacredness of a man's title to his property. It would be, in addition, a difficult matter to purchase any land worth cultivating in Mexico, as all that is now irrigated or can be irrigated is owned by large proprietors who will not sell at any price. The land that I passed over between El Paso and Zacatecas—about seven hundred and fifty miles—is, with the exception of that along the Five Rivers, of too great altitude to produce grass equal to that in Texas, and the herds are very few and poor compared with those in Texas."

"What do you think of the people?"

"As far as my acquaintance went with the better class, I found them exceedingly polite, in fact, too polite—so much so that one is ill at ease. They throw open their entire establishments, and horses, servants and everything is at your command. As for the poorer classes—and they constitute ninety-five per cent. of the thirteen millions—they are as poor as any people on this continent. The wearing apparel and household goods of a Mexican family of peons would not bring three dollars in an old-clothes shop, and I don't believe that out of the entire population of that class one ever had as much as five dollars at a time."

"What's a peon?"

"The peon is the lower class of Mexicans who are hired out to the different haciendas. When one gets in debt he can't leave, or if he does run away is liable to be taken up anywhere in the Republic and returned to his master. In other words, he is as much a slave as the negro was before the war."

"How about the scenery?"

"It is magnificent. Some of the most beautiful scenery in the world is between Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico. The upper portions of the mountains have the climate of the temperate zone and produce corn. Lower down the mountain sides sugar cane grows and on the plains coffee is cultivated. Bananas grow wild on the roadside. There are miles of precipices much greater than that at Lookout Mountain."—Atlanta Constitution.

Her Class.

A beautiful young lady coming out of Farwell Hall, Chicago, Sunday afternoon, was warmly greeted by a gentleman, and they stood to chat a moment. Catching sight of some third party, the lady said hurriedly: "See there; that's him."

"Where? Who?" asked the gentleman, turning in the direction indicated by the lady's eyes."

"Why, my boy?"

"Your boy! What do you mean! What do you mean?"

"Oh, right here to our left. The one nearest to us. See, he's talking about me now and pointing me out to the others with him. He's awful jealous of me."

"Your boy! Jealous of you! Is it possible you allude to that Chinaman there? Why, he must be at least thirty years old. You're a great joker."

"Not at all. You don't understand. He's my class. I am a teacher in the Chinese Sunday School up stairs. Each lady has one Chinaman as a class. We girls call our class 'our boy,' and it is a fact, I learn, that each 'class' calls his teacher 'his girl.' I do believe some of the 'boys' are in love with their teachers—genuine, human love. They dress very richly in their style on Sundays and they make us very rich presents. Some of the girls have received gold watches and chains. Why, if I had not put a stop to it my boy would bring me something every Sunday. He has brought me silk handkerchiefs, lace handkerchiefs and lace collars. He gave me this deep collar I have on. He said he would leave school and go back to China if I did not accept it. It is real lace and cost at least thirty-five dollars. But I shan't accept anything more. He is a good boy, and I can do anything I like with him. He learns rapidly. He is an apt scholar. It is laughable. Sometimes I go across the room to talk with one of my lady friends in another class and he sits still and contented, but if a gentleman speaks to me for a moment Lang fires up like a real, splendid lover. His eyes flash, and he jabbers to himself in a great way, and I have to rush back to him or he would leave the room, and, I suppose, go back to China. He is jealous of me now. Excuse me a moment till I go and tell him you're my brother."

The lady went over and pacified the glaring Celestial, and he walked away with his companions. When she returned to the gentleman, he asked her something or other in a jocular way, and she replied, smiling: "Oh he says we 'Melican girls have too many brothers,' too many 'dudu' brothers." The group of Chinamen had taken a street car, and she laughed heartily. They were out of hearing, and the gentleman joined in the laugh.—Chicago Herald.

Opening the Fountains.

In numberless bulbs beneath the skin is secreted the liquid substance which gives the hair its texture, color and gloss. When this secretion stops, the hair begins at once to become dry, lustreless, brittle and gray. Is that the condition of your hair? If so, apply Parker's hair Balsam at once. It will restore the color, gloss and life by renewing the action of nature. The Balsam is not an oil, not a dye, but an elegant toilet article, highly appreciated because of its cleanliness.

Cost of Bringing up a Boy.

A clergyman who has been discoursing some days has devoted considerable attention to the cost of these somewhat necessary individuals, and he estimates the expense of bringing a good boy, with all the advantages of city life, to the age of fifteen, at about $5,000. These figures are about doubled by the time the boy is of age, if he goes through college. A bad boy, arrived at the age mentioned, costs fully as much, even if he has not been to college, and the computation, as the reverend gentlemen suggests, does not include the value of the mother's tears and father's gray hairs. Most men who have brought up boys will agree that the estimate is not too high.

The very best remedy that can be compounded from our present knowledge of drugs, for colds, coughs, asthma bronchitis, and other lung diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It has cured many cases of consumption when all other remedies had failed. A single spoonful will cure an ordinary cough or cold and give instant relief to asthma. It is soothing, healing and strengthening to throat and lungs and is very pleasant to take.

Logical deduction: She was a Boston lady of culture. She stood watching a canal boat loaded with ice, as it was being locked into the canal from Lake Champlain. "What is that boat loaded with?" "Ice," was the reply. "Oh, my!" she exclaimed, "if the horrid stuff should melt, the water would sink the boat."

The story is told of an old hunter in Michigan who lost his way in the woods a number of times while the country was new. At length he secured a pocket compass and its use was explained to him by a friend. But shortly afterward he lost his way again and lay out as usual. When found he was asked why he did not travel by the compass. He did not dare, he said. He wanted to go north, and he "tried to make the thing point north, but it wasn't no use, 'twould shake, shake, shake round and point southeast every time.

CONGRESS.

THE [illegible] laid before the Senate on the 5th a bill extending the limits of Yellowstone Park, and after debate the bill passed. [illegible] buildings for postoffices of the first, second and third classes at reasonable rates, not to exceed ten years. The Senate then took up the unfinished business, being Mr. Pendleton's bill, providing for the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon the United States in places outside their territory. Without reaching a conclusion the Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned. In the House Mr. Kiler reported back adversely a bill for the relief of the sufferers by the overflow on the Lower Mississippi Valley and by the cyclone in North Carolina. A resolution was reported from the Committee on Elections unseating T. Luna, delegate from New Mexico, and seating in his place F. A. Manzanares, adopted. The Senate joint resolution appropriating an additional $10,000 for witness fees in the Danville investigation was passed. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Naval Appropriation bill and [illegible] the House adjourned.

AMONG the memorials presented in the Senate on the 6th was one by Mr. Cockrell, from the United Labor Organizations of St. Louis, protesting against the attempts of employers, as illustrated by recent events in Connecticut with glass blowers and other trades, to reduce the compensation of American labor to a point on a level with pauper labor of Europe, and praying the passage of laws to restrict wholesale immigration intended to effect a reduction of wages of American workingmen. In presenting this memorial and moving its reference to the Committee on Education and Labor, Mr. Cockrell took occasion to commend it to the serious consideration of that committee; referred. Mr. Sewell presented a memorial series of resolutions from the Senate of New Jersey, opposing the Morrison tariff bill and expressing the belief of that body that anything approaching tariff for revenue only would materially injure if not totally destroy the manufacturers interests of New Jersey and reduce the wages of American workingmen to a point entirely inconsistent with the demands upon them as members of society in the United States. A number of bills was then favorably reported and placed on the calendar, when the Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

The morning hour was dispensed with and the House went into Committee of the Whole on the Naval Appropriation bill, and when the committee rose the bill was reported and passed—yeas 250, nays 1—adjourned.

[illegible] constituting the majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States to be a quorum of the court, instead of six judges as heretofore; the bill also prohibits a Judge who heard a case at a Circuit Court from sitting on the Supreme Bench when it comes up for appeal. A bill was passed appropriating $250,000 for the erection of a fire proof building for a hall of records. The Senate took up, and, after some debate, passed the bill for the relief of the heirs of Maurice Grivot; it provides for the repayment to the heirs of Grivot of about $700, constituting a bank deposit seized by order of General Banks in New Orleans on his taking possession of that city. The House bill declaring forfeited the lands of the Texas Pacific Railroad, was reported favorably. Adjourned till Monday. In the House a bill was reported granting a pension to General Francis P. Blair. The bill authorizing the retirement of Alfred Pleasanton with the rank of Colonel was recommitted without instructions. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the private calendar, and upon rising several private bills were reported back to the House and passed. At the evening session the House passed a number of pension bills and adjourned.

THE Senate was not in session on the 8th. In the House Mr. Phelps asked leave to present the resolutions of the New Jersey Senate protesting against the Morrison wool tariff bill, but objections being made they were not received. Mr. Dingley, from the Committee on Shipping, reported adversely upon the bill authorizing the purchase of foreign-built ships by United States citizens for use in the foreign carrying trade. The House by a vote of 127 to 117 refused to take up for consideration the Crowder extension bill, and went into Committee of the Whole on the Postoffice Appropriation bill. Without action the committee rose and the House adjourned.

MR. BAYARD submitted a resolution in the Senate on the 10th instant, the adoption of which would carry into effect the recommendation of the Committee on Judiciary, reported in the Senate, proposing an amendment to the Constitution so as to provide that Congress shall not have power to make anything but gold and silver legal tender for the payment of debts, nor pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. A joint resolution proposing the following amendment to the Constitution was submitted by Mr. Garland: Article 16. That members of the public debts of states repudiated by notes issued under authority of the laws with the property of actual money and has legalized the issue of debts, which have exceeded the sum of $40,000,000 since the adoption of the 14th article of amendment of the Constitution, shall not be counted in the apportionment of representatives among the several States, nor shall such debts be paid by any State, county or municipality, or the United States. A member of bill was reported favorably from the Committee on Commerce, and the Senate went into executive session. The House Committee on Ways and Means reported back the Senate joint resolution for the consideration of the Ways and Means Committee of such bills, joint resolutions and notes on the journal of each House. A number of bills were reported favorably from committees and placed on the calendar. The Senate then went into executive session. The House Mr. Springer, from the committee on Ways and Means, reported back the Senate joint resolution with an amendment providing that any order adopted for the purchase of silver for coinage purposes, and non-concurrence in other amendments agreed to. Mr. Hewitt introduced a bill providing a constitutional amendment that Congress shall not have power to make anything but gold and silver a tender in the payment of debts. The Senate bill establishing standard time in the District was passed. A message was received from the President transmitting, without comment, the documents received from the Secretary of State relative to a resolution of the House on the death of Edward Lasker. Mr. Hiscock offered a resolution reciting the facts connected with the passage of the resolution of condolence by the House, and that the House does hereby reiterate the expression of sincere regret at the death of Edward Lasker, and its sympathy with the Parliament of the German Empire, of which for many years, he was a distinguished member; referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. FARMERS' CLUB.

Friday evening last the club met at the residence F. V. Horton, according to adjournment. The attendance was quite small, yet the programme was pretty well carried out in the main, though some parts had to be omitted as some of the interested parties failed to put in an appearance. The singing and instrumental music were good. Mrs. J. W. Gillespie favored us with a highly instructive Essay, entitled Home Influence, teeming with many good points.

Before proceeding with the discussion of the Question, it was suggested by F. C. Rector that after the next meeting, which is the last of the season, that the club should meet once a month, in the afternoon, and discuss such questions as was of the most interest to us at the time of meeting, and the ladies prepare a supper and have a good time generally. After considerable talk a motion to that effect was made and carried. The question What Constitutes Good Farming, brought out a very spirited discussion. It was the general opinion that Southern Michigan had as many good farms, according to the population, as any part of the world.

The next meeting of the club will be held at John Fisher's, Friday afternoon, the 28th inst., at 4 P. M. This being the last meeting of the season, according to our former custom, we are to have a Picnic Supper, so the ladies are requested to fix up the goodies and bring them along. Adrian Times: Geo. W. Reese escaped from jail in this city to-day. It is the custom of the sheriff to allow prisoners, whose conduct is altogether exemplary, to work in the yard occasionally, and thus get a "breath of fresh air." Reese was allowed to step into the yard to-day for a short time, and not being observed for a few moments, skipped out. Officers immediately left in pursuit of the prisoner. Reese was one of the fellows arrested for robbing Adelbert Purcell in this city, during the races last June. He pleaded guilty upon being arraigned a short time since, and was in jail awaiting sentence. Should his capture be effected, which is altogether likely, he will probably find his sentence as severe as the circumstances will permit.

The Democratic state central committee will meet at Lansing to-day.

OUR ANCESTORS' NERVE.

The Secret of Their Unusual Vigor Explained and How it can be Acquired.

There was something about the sturdy vigor of former generations that challenges the admiration of every man, woman and child. They were no epicures—those ancient fathers. They lived simply, and successfully met and overcome difficulties that would have discouraged this age and generation. The rigors of the frontier were supplemented by the savages, wild beasts threatened their enterprise and poverty was a common companion. Yet they bravely encountered and resisted all those things and laid the foundatons of a land whose blessings we now enjoy. Their constitutions were strong, their health unsurpassed and yet they were forced to expose themselves continually.—There certainly must have been some good and adequate cause for all this and for the physical superiority of that age over the present.

It is well known to everyone conversant with the history of that time that certain home compounds of strengthening qualites were used almost universally by those pioneers. The malarial evils and exposures to which they were subjected necessitated this. When their bodies became chilled by cold or debilitated by the damp mists of a new country they were forced to counteract it by the use of antidotes. Medicines were few in those days, and doctors almost unknown. Hence the preparations above referred to. From among the number all of which were compounded upon the same general principle, one was found to be more efficient and hence far more popular than all the rest. It was well known through the middle and western states and was acknowledged as the best preparation for malarial disorders and general debility then known. The receipe for compounding of this valuable article was handed down from one family and generation, to another, was known to the Harrison family and is used as the basis and general formula for the present "Tippecanoe," the name being suggested by the battle in which General Harrison was engaged. The manufacturers have thoroughly investigated this subject in its minutest details, and are certain that for malassimilation of food, dyspepsia, tired feelings, general debility, prostration, malarial disorders and humors in the blood, nothing can exceed in value "Tippecanoe," which was the medicine of our forefathers and seems destined to be the most popular preparation of the day.

"Tippecanoe" is prepared and given to the public by Messrs. H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., proprietors of the famous Warner's Safe Cure, which is now the most extensively used of any American medicine. The well known standing of this house is a sufficient guarantee of the purity and power of this preparation which seeks to banish one of the greatest banes of the nineteenth century—malassimilation of food. Any one who experiences trouble of digestion; who feels less vigor than formerly; whose system has unquestionably "run down" and who realizes the necessity of some strengthening tonic cannot afford to permit such symtoms to continue. If the farmer finds that his threshing machine does not separate the grain from the straw he realizes that something is wrong and tries to repair the machine. When the food does not sustain the life, when it fails to make blood; when it causes the energy to depart and ambition to die, it is a certain sign that something is wrong and that the machine needs repairing. It is not a question of choice; it is a matter of duty. You must attend to your health or your sickness and nothing will sooner overcome these evils than "Tippecanoe," the medicine of the past, a safe guard for the present and a guarantee of health for the future.

TWO LITTLE SHOES.

["Two little shoes were found frozen in the lap of one of the dead of the ill-fated City of Columbus."]

Two little shoes—naught else!
How forlorn lay cold in death
Relentless, wodhn waves
Had shut had her parting breath!
Alas, for those was feet,
No mother should shall press
Their snowy dimpled shapes again
In love and tenderness.

Two little shoes—as if
In that dread moment there,
The mother's heart had clung
To these in out despair!
As if her latest thought
Unto her babe were given,
Ere from wild wreck and agony
The soul had sped to Heaven!

Two little shoes that speak—
As angels speak above—
A mother's gentle hope
A mother's boundless love!
Hope, love, that earthly ill
Can quench not, neither blight;
Tender, enduring, precious, sweet,
Yet deathless in its might!
—George Cooper, in Baldwin's Monthly.

GREEK FIRE.

At what period the ancient Greek fire was invented has never been certainly determined. There are many writers who place the invention in a far antiquity. Historical details have been adduced pointing to the period of the earlier wars between the Greeks and Romans as the true era of the discovery. But we do not find any certain evidence of the use of Greek fire until the sieges of Constantinople, in the seventh and eighth centuries, though a Father of the Christian Church, writing in the fifth century, gave recipes for making a combustible substance of similar qualities from the compounds resin, sulphur, pitch, pigeons' dung, turpentine, and the juice of the herb "aalheal."

It is related that the true Greek fire was invented by a certain Callinicus, an architect of Heliopolis in Syria (Baalbec) in 678. The secret of the composition of this artificial flame, and the art of directing its action, were imparted by Callinicus—who had deserted from the Caliph to the Emperor of Constantinople. From this period until the year 1201 the use of Greek fire was an important element in the military power of the Byzantine Empire. The progress of the Saracens was more than once decisively checked by the destructive action of this powerful and terrible flame. The important art of compounding the fire "was preserved at Constantinople," says Gibbon, "as the palladium of the State; the galleys and artillery might occasionally be lent to the allies of Rome; but the composition of the Greek fire was concealed with the most zealous scruple, and the terror of the enemy was increased and prolonged by their ignorance and surprise."

The accounts which have reached us respecting the properties of the Greek fire are such as to justify the high value attached by the Byzantine Emperors to the secret of its composition. It was a liquid, which was propelled by various methods against the ships or engines of the enemy. So long as it was kept from the air, or remained in large masses, the liquid appears to have been perfectly safe from combustion; but as soon as it was poured forth it burned with an intense flame which consumed everything around—not merely burning upward, but with equal fury downward and laterally. Water not only failed to quench it, but made it burn with new ardor. To subdue the flames it was necessary to employ, in large quantities, either sand or vinegar. Various methods were employed for propelling the liquid fire toward the enemy. Sometimes it was enclosed in vessels made of some brittle substance, and these were flung at the enemy by means of suitable projectile machines. "It was either," says Gibbon, "poured from the rampart in large boilers, or launched in red-hot balls of stone and iron, or darted in arrows or javelins, twisted round with flax and tow, which had deeply imbibed the inflammable oil." But the effectual use of the destructive compound seems to have been best secured by means of a species of fire-ships specially constructed for the purpose. Copper and iron machines were plated in the fore part of these ships. Long tubes, fantastically shaped, so as to resemble the mouth and jaws of savage animals, formed the outlet for a stream of liquid fire, which the engine—literally a fire engine—propelled to a great distance. Hand engines were also constructed by which the destructive compound could be spurted by the soldiers, Beckman tells us.

The secret, as we have said, was carefully kept by the Byzantines. The Emperor Constantine suggested the answers which in his opinion were best fitted to elude the pertinacious questioning of the barbarians. "They should be told that the mystery of the Greek fire had been revealed by an angel to the first and greatest of the Constantines, with the sacred injunction that this gift of Heaven—this peculiar blessing of the Romans—should never be communicated to any foreign nation; that the prince and subject were alike bound to religious silence under the temporal and spiritual penalties of treason and sacrilege; and that the infamous attempt would provoke the sudden and supernatural vengeance of the God of the Christians." Gibbon adds that the secret thus religiously guarded was "confined for above four hundred years to the Romans of the East; and at the end of the eleventh century the Pisans, to whom every sea and every art were familiar, suffered the effects without understanding the composition of Greek fire."

This, however, is not wholly true. The secret was preserved, indeed, from the Romans of the West, but the Saracens managed to possess themselves of it very much earlier than Gibbon's account would imply. For, at the siege of Thessalonica, in the year 904, the Saracens we are told by John Comeniata—threw liquid fire, by means of tubes, upon the wooden defenses of the besieged, and by this means principally succeeded in capturing the town.

In the Holy Wars the Mohammedans freely availed themselves of the use of Greek fire. Gallant knights, who feared little the swords or lances of the Saracen host, were terrified by the uncouth aspect and hideous noises of machines which belched forth upon them a torrent of liquid fire. Joinville tells us that "it come flying through the air like a winged long tailed dragon, about the thickness of a hogshead, with the report of thunder and the velocity of lightning; and the darkness of the night was dispelled by this deadly illumination."

It does not by any means follow, because the invention of gunpowder rendered the ancient Greek fire no longer a very useful military weapon, that the knowledge of the secret of its composition would be of little value. We must remember that the use of fire-arms rendered the old-fashioned engines, by means of which the liquid was propelled, no longer available, since those who worked the engines could no longer venture near enough to the enemy. It was to this cause, we suspect, rather than to any want of efficiency in the compound itself, that the discontinuance of the use of Greek fire should be ascribed. The time has not yet come for making gunpowder itself a useful adjunct to the employment of liquid fire.

It is not so clear, however, that the Ancient Greek fire was much more efficient than that which has recently come into use. Still, the inquiry into the nature of its composition is not without interest.

The Princess Anna Comnena states that Greek fire was compounded of sulphur, resin and oil. It may be well to dwell on this point, since many writers have been disposed to consider naphtha, or liquid bitumen, to have been the principal ingredient of the Greek fire. Possibly, however, the oil mentioned by Anna Comnena may have been naphtha, and not, as one would be disposed to infer, any of the ordinary vegetable or mineral oils; for the use of naphtha in lamps is of great antiquity.

Gibbon writes: "Naphtha was mingled, I know not in what proportions, with sulphur and with the pitch that is extracted from evergreen firs—that is, resin—in forming Greek fire."

It is a moot point whether Friar Bacon ever discovered the true composition of the liquid fire. Many supposed that he concealed a real ignorance on the subject, when he supplied an apparently unmeaning answer to the questions addressed to him. Others, however, assert that two of the components of Greek fire were, as Bacon said, sulphur and saltpeter, and that the third is to be detected in the logogriph—"Luru vopo vir Can utriet." We leave this anagram to the ingenuity of our readers, mentioning, in passing, that it contains the apropos words, "urit voraciter," but that the extraction of these words leaves us only the combination "lupovun," from which it will not be found easy to form a word. Possibly there is a mistake in transcription to add to the anagrammatic difficulty.

Many others have tried to elucidate the question. Friar Bungay, Charles du Frene, Ducange and Joinville—a host, in fact, of commentators, historians and antiquarians—have all had something to say more or less to the purpose. But the satisfactory solution of the problem has not yet been obtained, nor perhaps is it likely to be.

It has been well remarked by a writer on the subject, that "gunpowder blew the ancient Greek fire out of the field." But during the American war of 1860-65, it was shown that gunpowder might be used to blow modern Greek fire into cities. Whether the example will ever become a recognized military precedent is uncertain. But it has been shown that Greek fire may be flung into a city by means of a suitably prepared shell, and that its destructive properties may thus be made available when the besieging force is four miles or more from the central parts of the city. Charleston was certainly not destroyed by General Gillmore's fire shells; in fact, there are difficulties connected with the construction of such shells, which, though far from being insuperable, were not wholly mastered by the artillerists under Gillmore. But that an immense amount of damage was effected is shown by the fact that General Beauregard hurled from the mouth of his cannon denunciations against Gillmore for employing "the most villainous compound ever used in war."

That Greek fire will one day be employed as a fearfully destructive agent in warfare seems scarcely probable. Yet, so far from looking forward with dismay to the prospect of such an application for its properties, we may rather, perhaps, consider the prospect as favorable to the interests of peace. We may apply to this case the remarks applied by Fuller to the use of cannon—"Though some may say that the finding of such appliances hath been the losing of many men's lives, yet it will appear that wars are now fought with more expedition, and that Victory standeth not so long a neuter, before she expresses herself on one side or the other."—Knowledge.

—A canine at Bridgeport, Conn., has learned the art of skating. The skates are made of celluloid, quite light, and small enough to fit the dog's foot. After they are adjusted by its master, the dog starts out with different movements, until a signal is given, when he rises and skates on his hind legs, giving the Dutch roll and other movements with quite a waggish air. Afterward he drops upon his fore legs and skates with his back ones elevated—Hartford Post.

Juvenile Audacity and Cherokee Disgust.

I shall not soon forget a stage coach ride from Fort Smith, Ark., to Muskogee, I. T. I had thought that I would be the only passenger, but when a woman and boy, and subsequently a half Indian, entered, I very naturally revised my former impressions and declared that I would have company. The half Indian had been educated at an Eastern school and was a very intelligent man. He was, I understood him to say, a member of the Cherokee Council, and was returning home from a visit to Washington to attend a session of that grave, if not potent, body of Indian legislators. When the boy learned that the man was an Indian he began to exhibit a restlessness which I soon discovered would result in the red man's annoyance.

"Did you ever kill anybody?" he asked.

"Tommy," said the woman, "don't be rude."

"I think not," replied the Cherokee.

"Then what makes you be an Indian?"

"I am only a half Indian."

"Which half?"

"Thomas," exclaimed the woman, turning him around, unbuttoning his coat and buttoning it again. He remained quiet for a few moments and then said:

"Maw."

"What, dear?"

"A half Indian would only half kill anybody, wouldn't he?"

"If you don't hush I'll put you out."

"Then I'd have to walk, wouldn't I?"

"Yes."

"An' the bears might get me, mightn't they?"

"Yes, they would."

"Would you care."?

"Yes."

"Then what makes you wanter put me out? Do the Indians scalp folk?" again addressing the Cherokee Councilor, who exhibited a social side of his Indian nature, but yielding to the white and of course political half, replied:

"The wild ones do."

"But you are not wild, are you?"

"No."

"Why ain't you?"

"My little man, I must say that you're asking too many questions," casting a reproachful glance at the woman.

"If you don't hush I'll whip you. Do you hear me?" taking his hat from the floor and putting it on his head.

"Yessum."

He remained quiet for a few moments, but dropping his hat on the floor, he reached down, took it up and said:

"If you was a wild Indian you'd cut me with a knife when I stoop down, wouldn't you?"

The Cherokee looked far out over the lands of his fathers, but made no reply.

"If I waster hit you, you'd hurt me anyhow, wouldn't you?"

"No," the red man replied.

"Why wouldn't you?"

"Another word out of you and I'll whip you. Never mind; I'll tell your father," said the woman.

It was impossible to keep him quiet, and after a while he asked:

"Have you got any boys?"

"Yes; two."

"Are they Indian boys?"

"Their mother is a white woman."

"As white as my maw?"

"Just another word out of you and I'll box you," said the woman, blushing. He had evidently tested his indulgent mother on many an occasion, for after the shortest possible silence on his part he asked:

"Did you ever see any scalps?"

"Yes, I think so."

"Did they have blood on 'em?"

"No, they were dry," replied the Cherokee, plainly showing that his political readiness in answering questions had risen above his Indian stoicism.

"Do they peel 'em like apples when they dry 'em?"

"Hush your mouth." The Indian nature was endeavoring to assert itself.

"If you ask another question I'll whip you, you little rascal," said the woman. "Are you going to hush?"

"Yessum."

He twisted himself around, scratched the coach door with a nail he mysteriously produced, and asked:

"Would you rather be an Indian than a white man?"

"Hold on," demanded the Cherokee, calling to the driver. "Let me ride outside."

"It's goin' to rain. I think, Colonel," the driver responded.

"Makes no difference," and he got out and climbed on top of the coach. I then thought my time had come, but he was after better game; our red man of the forest was his affinity. He screwed himself around for awhile, and then leaning from the coach window, he called:

"Say, does Indians scalp niggers?"

"Whoa," said the Cherokee, "Let me get down."

"Want to get back inside?" the driver asked.

"No, I'm going to walk. Drive on and if I don't overtake you, all right. I'll be cussed if I wouldn't rather be a witness in the United States Court."—Opie Read, in N. Y. Mercury.

—Adirondack Murray thus rails at poverty. "Oh, cursed poverty! I know thee to be of Satan, for I myself have eaten at thy scanty table, and slept in thy cold bed. And never yet have I seen thee bring one smile to human lips, or dry one tear as it fell from human eye. But I have seen thee sharpen the tongue for biting speech, and harden the tender heart. Ay, I've seen thee make even the presence of love a burden, and cause the mother to wish that the babe nursing at her scant breast had never been born."—Boston Post.

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have at all met all the requirements useful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily gained in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of all promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not evanescent, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 8 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

BULL DOGLETS.

A man who had traveled about,
Was heard very plain to speak out;
"I have chewed in all lands,
But the finest of brands
Is the 'Bull Dog' without any doubt".

A man up at Kalamazoo
Said no decent tobacco he knew;
But the "Bull Dog" he tried—
Was so well satisfied
He bought a whole caddy to chew.

A resident at a way-station
Was grumbling about his location,
He said: "I'd not mind
If I only could find
'Bull Dog Plug' in this part of creation."

An old man who used it before,
Saw a "Bull Dog" sign over a door;
He said: "While I'm by,
I'll procure a supply,"
And bought all they had in the store.

An "old timer," not noted for gumption,
Said his son nearly died of consumption,
But his health was renewed
When the "Bull Dog" he chewed,
That he died was the common presumption.

But the steady increasing demand
Shows the chewers do all understand,
Though "Bull Dog" don't cure
All the ills we endure,
'TIS THE FINEST BY FAR IN THE LAND.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and [illegible] the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my interest in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

SARAH C. WHITTIER.
